3987	2680	319	Æaciades king of Epirus is deposed, by a decree of the state; Pyrrhus his son, an infant, was conveyed to Glaucias king of Illyrium , by some Epirote lords, and by him brought up and protected against Cassander , who offered 200 talents for him. The Epirots enter into an alliance with Cassander , governor of Macedon , who sent Lyciscus his general to take the government in his name; but the Epirots , being soon weary of the Macedonian yoke, recal their king again, who is slain in a battle with Philip , brother to Cassander .	III	803
3988	2681	318	The Romans and Samnites engage; the Romans by stratagem defeat and cut off almost all the Samnites , both horse and foot, and their general. Upon this the Samnites submit to the Romans , and order Erutulus Papius , the ringleader of the revolt, to be delivered up to the Romans , to avoid which he killed himself. For this eminent service the Romans honour the consuls with a triumph.	IV	611
3988	2681	318	A. Cornelius is made dictator at Rome , to preside at the games, in the absence of the consul and sickness of the prætor.	IV	611
3988	2681	318	Cassander , son of Antipater , puts Nicanor in as governor of the garrison in Athens , who being opposed by Polyperchon , Cassander enters the port of Athens with a great fleet; upon which the Athenians submit to have the garrison, and Cassander appoints Demetrius Phalerus , an Athenian , to be governor of the city; which office he discharged so well, that the citizens set up 300 statues in honour of him in the several parts of the city and publick buildings.	II	554
3988	2681	318	Antandrus , governor of Syracuse , sallies out upon Hamilcar suddenly, and routs his army of 120,000 men, which had long besieged Syracuse , and took Hamilcar prisoner, whom after torturing terribly, they cut off his head.	III	85
3988	2681	318	Polyperchon and Olympias create Eumenes general in Asia , for the two kings; but to avoid contention and take away sedition, he proposed all the commanders should be equal, and consult in common upon the publick business.	III	426
3989	2682	317	Jerusalem being besieged by the Egyptians , through a superstitious fear of breaking the Sabbath-day , suffer the city to be taken by storm on that day, without resistance, and 100000 Jews are carried into Egypt captive, &c.	IV	31
3989	2682	317	Agathocles having greatly encreased his army, by a large addition of Cyreneans , calls himself king of Africa , and besieges Carthage , the conduct whereof he leaves to his son Archagathus , and returns into Sicily to quell and conquer the revolters there, which he soon did, and most places acknowledged his sovereignty.	III	86
3989	2682	317	The Romans refusing the Samnites peace, each side raise an army; the Samnites by stratagem bring the Romans into great distress, and oblige them to deliver up 600 Roman knights, as hostages for performing a very advantageous peace for the Samnites ; then the consuls and soldiers pass under the yoke, man by man; and if any Roman but returned a fierce look, he was immediately knocked down or killed. This so dispirited the consuls and soldiers, that at their arrival at Rome , each man as it were banished himself, by shutting themselves up in their houses. The consuls name Q. Fabius Ambustus dictator, but some defect being found in his nomination, Æmilius Papus was substituted in his room; but the people being highly dissatisfied, an interregnum follows; and Papirius Cursor a second time, and Publius Philo a third time, are chose consuls, who refuse to perform the Samnian peace, &c.	IV	612
3990	2683	316	Agathocles makes his escape from before Carthage , with a few friends. His two sons are murdered, and his army capitulate for themselves. Upon Agathocles 's return to Sicily , he reduces Egestæ , that had revolted in his absence, and put every person in it to the sword; and at Syracuse put all the relations of those he left in Africa to death; and even in Sicily , all that were related to the African army, from the great-grandfather to the sucking-child, were killed.	III	87
3990	2683	316	Antigonus marching to Susa , and finding the castle held by Xenophilus , he left Seleucus with a corps of troops to besiege it, and marched to engage Eumenes ; but having a part of his army cut off before his face, which had crossed the river, he retired and marched toward Media , but suffers greatly by the harassments of the Cossians , through whose country he chose to pass for the sake of nearness.	III	426
3990	2683	316	Eumenes and his army at Persepolis are all magnificently feasted, by Peucestas ; and to prevent any defection, contrives a letter to be wrote to Peucestas , as from Orontes governor of Armenia , acquainting him that the interests of the kings encreased every where, and that a great army of Macedonians were marching into Asia : This confirmed Eumenes in his authority.	III	427
3990	2683	316	Eumenes and Antigonus engage; Eumenes is conqueror, killing 8000 of Antigonus 's army, with the loss of only 1500 of his own men.	III	428
3990	2683	316	Arideus (called Philip) joint king of Macedon , &c. is murdered by Olympias and Alexander Ægus , son of Alexander the Great , bears the royal title alone.	III	435
3990	2683	316	Alcetas , brother of Æaciades , succeeds his brother in the kingdom of Epirus , from whence after two battles with Lyciscus , general under Cassander , he is driven out, and the city of Eurymenas is taken, plundered and razed: After some time, peace being concluded with Cassander , Alcetas gets the government again.	III	803
3990	2683	316	Satricum revolts from the Romans , and joins the Samnites , who surprize Fregelle , a Roman colony, where the women and children fight in their own defence; upon which the Samnites offer quarter to all those who submitted, which many do, bu.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		V. L. P. 3.
			are burnt alive; a few only escaped, that with great desperation cut their way through the enemies troops.
3990	2683	316	The Capuans endeavour to shake off the Roman yoke; C. Mænius is named dictator, with orders only to examine and punish crimes against the state, which so frightened the Capuans , that the chief conspirators killed themselves. Then all being quiet, Mænius lays down his dictatorship.	IV 615
3990	2683	316	Cornelius Lentulus is declared dictator, and leads his army against the Samnites ; the Romans fall upon them with so much fury, that they rout them at the first onset, take and plunder the Samnian camp, and put all to the sword they meet with.	IV 615
3990	2683	316	Papirius , general of the horse to Lentulus , besieging Luceria , where the 600 Roman knights delivered as hostages were kept by the Samnites , Lentulus comes to his assistance; the Samnites keep themselves intrenched in their camp; the Romans force it, and put all they get hold of to the sword: The Lucerians distressed for food, offered to capitulate, and to release the 600 hostages; but Papirius insisted that all the soldiers should pass unarmed under the yoke, with Pontius their general at their head; all which was complied with.	IV 616
3991	2684	315	Q. Aulus Cerretanus , now consul a second time, defeats the Samnites in Apulia , and takes Ferentum . And Papirius , now a third time consul, reduced Saturnum and put the Samnite garrison to the sword: The authors of the revolt were first whipped and then beheaded. At his return home he enters Rome in triumph.	IV 616
3991	2684	315	Agathocles engages Dinocrates , puts him to flight, and obtains a complete victory. The remains of Dinocrates 's army capitulates; but no sooner were their arms laid down, but their throats were cut to a man.	IV 617
3991	2684	315	Eumenes is treacherously delivered to Antigonus , who after keeping him prisoner some time puts him to death. Likewise Pitbon , governor of Media , deposes Peuceshtas governor of Persia , and takes 5000 talents out of the treasury of Susa , and 10,000 out of other places.	III 87
3992	2685	314	Many Samnite cities desire peace, but are only granted two years truce. Plautius the consul so frightened the cities of Teanum and Canusium , that they surrendered and gave hostages. The Capuans beg of the Romans to give them a governor, and new laws: Upon this Campania becomes a Roman præfecture. Two new tribunes are added to the Roman state, being now made 31. A census being taken this year, 230,000 men fit to bear arms are found in Rome .	III 430
3992	2685	314	The consuls reduce all Apulia to the obedience of Rome . Antium desires a Roman governor and laws, which is granted.	IV 617
3992	2685	314	Agathocles goes into Italy , and subdues the Brutii ; from thence goes to the Lipari islands, and compels the inhabitants to pay him 100 talents, and afterwards plunders and strips the temples, lading 11 ships with their gold and spoil, and returns to Syracuse ; but in his passage 10 of them are lost by shipwreck.	IV 617
3992	2685	314	Antigonus marches with a great army to Babylon , where he pretends to call Seleucus the governor to account; upon which Seleucus flies to Ptolomy in Egypt , raises a great army, engages Demetrius , Antigonus 's son, defeats him at Gaza , and kills and takes abundance of his men. They then take Tyre , and recover Babylon , Media , and Susiana .	III 87
3993	2686	313	L. Æmilus being dictator, he besieges Saticula , a city of Campania . The Samnites their allies come with a numerous army to its relief; the dictator engages and defeats them; upon which they retire in the night, and leave their camp to the Romans .	III 432
3993	2686	313	Cilles , Ptolomy 's general, being negligent, Demetrius sets upon him, overthrew and took Cilles , and 7000 men prisoners, and conquers Syria , Phœnicia , and Judea .	IV 617
3994	2687	312	Q. Fabius Maximus being dictator, continues the siege of Saticula ; the Samnites come again to relieve it: The two armies engage; the Samnites lose their general, and the Romans their general of horse; the Samnites are defeated, and Saticula capitulates. From thence he goes to besiege Sora , that had revolted and massacred a Roman colony, and in his way engages the Samnites , overthrows them, and takes and plunders their camp, and then forms the siege of Sora .	III 433
3994	2687	312	The king of Egypt by great largesses, privileges, and immunities, prevails with abundance of Jews to come and reside at Alexandria in Egypt .	IV 618
3995	2688	311	Sora is taken by stratagem, and abundance put to the sword. The consuls send 250 conspirators to Rome , where they are first whipped and then beheaded.	VI 35
3995	2688	311	The Aufones being accused of designing to revolt from Rome , the consular army takes Aufona , Minturnæ , and Vesfia in one day, and put all to the sword; Luceria was also taken by assault, and all the defendants, whether inhabitants or Samnites , killed; and a colony of 25,000 Romans put in it.	IV 619
3995	2688	311	Antigonus sends Athenæus his general to seize Petra , (a chief city of the Arabs) while the men were gone to a fair, from whence he carries away a prodigious booty, and 5000 talents in ready money. The Arabs being informed of it, pursue, surround, and cut off all Athenæus 's army, and recover the booty, &c.	VI 619
3996	2689	310	The Campanians revolt, and C. Mænius the dictator goes against them, now joined by the Samnites ; they engage, the Samnites are defeated, with the loss of 30,000 men, by the consul Sulpitius , for which he is honoured with a triumph at his return to Rome .	III 434
3997	2690	309	A peace is concluded between Antigonus and Ptolomy , &c. wherein it was agreed, that Cassander should hold Macedonia ; Lyfimachus , Thrace ; Ptolomy , Egypt ; and Antigonus Asia ; and that all the Greek cities should be free. Soon after this, Cassander puts the young king and his mother to death.	IV 619
3997	2690	309	C. Pætilus Libo (surnamed Vipulus) is chose dictator, and reduces Fregellæ , Nota , and the cities of Atina and Calatia , and keeps Bovinum blocked up.	III 435
				VI 619

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
3998	2691	308	C. Sulpicius Longus is chose dictator, upon a report that all Hetruria would revolt; but they keeping quiet, the dictator did not think fit to meddle with them.	IV	620
3998	2691	308	Claudius Appius , the Roman censor, introduces into the senate the sons of freed slaves, and slaves into the Potitii , or priests of Hercules , whose rites till now were only executed by noblemen, for which he was much hated. He made the famous aquæduct at Rome , seven miles long, which supplied Rome with constant fresh water; and the famous road from Rome to Capua , which lasted 800 years; the remains whereof are the admiration of all nations to this day.	VI	620
3999	2692	307	Antigonus (one of Alexander's greatest captains) in opposition to Cassander , sends his son Demetrius with a great fleet to Athens , where he proclaims the city free, then takes the fortress of Munichia by storm, &c. for which the Athenians honour him and his father with the title of king, and pay them divine honours, and appoint them a priest, and call the year by the name of this priest, and put the figures of Antigonus and Demetrius his son among the gods, &c. adjudge Demetrius Phalerus (their former governor, who had deserved so well of them) to death, &c. order all his statues to be thrown down, and him to be way-laid and murdered, and democracy again restored.	II	555
3999	2692	307	Cleopatra , the sister of Alexander the Great , is put to death, by order of Antigonus governor of Asia , (now called king) for her endeavouring to make her escape from the confinement he had put her under.	III	436
3999	2692	307	Alcetas governing tyrannically and cruelly, the Epirots make a general insurrection, and murder both him and his two young sons, Hefioncas and Nisus ; but Alexander and Teucer made their escape, upon which Glaucias king of Illyria sends Pyrrhus at the head of a great army, and sets him upon the throne.	III	804
3999	2692	307	The new senators at Rome introduced by Appius last year are turned out, and the senate put upon its old footing: A law is likewise made, empowering the people to choose 16 legionary tribunes out of the 24; likewise two officers, called Duumviri Navales , are chose, to take care of sea affairs.	IV	621
3999	2692	307	Q. Emilius Barbula , the Roman consul, goes against the Hetrurians , who had revolted; whom he engaged, and after a very obstinate fight the Hetrurians retire in the night, and leave Emilius the field and their camp, for which he is honoured with a triumph. Brutus the other consul took from the Samnites first Clavia , and put all able to bear arms to the sword; then Bovianum was plundered by the soldiers, but the citizens lives are spared: The Samnites endeavoured to draw the Romans into an ambuscade, but the bravery and fury of the Romans cut their way through all difficulties, and killed 20,000 of them upon the spot, for which Brutus had also a triumph at his return to Rome .	IV	621
4000	2693	306	Demetrius (son of Antigonus governor of Syria) makes a descent into Cyprus , takes Urania and Carpassia , engages Menelaus brother of Ptolomy (now king of Egypt) defeats him, kills 1000 of his men, and takes 3000, and besieges Salamis , defeats Ptolomy's fleet and army coming to relieve it, took 40 ships of war, and sunk 80, also 100 transports with 8000 soldiers on board; also the city, &c. Antigonus upon receipt of this news puts a crown of gold upon his own head, and assumes the title of king, and gave the same to his son, and they reign jointly; upon which the Egyptians also give the title of king to Ptolomy , and Lyfimachus and Seleucus do the same in Thrace and Babylon ; Cassander at Corinth received the title of king, but did not use it in his writing.	III	437
4000	2693	306	The Athenians make a law, that no philosopher should teach, unless licensed by the senate and people; upon which Theophrastus the successor of Aristotle shut up his school. This law being soon found hurtful, was repealed, and the philosophers recalled, &c.	II	555
4000	2693	306	Fabius , now consul at Rome a second time, engages the Hetrurians near Sutrium , totally overthrows them, takes 38 standards, their camp and all their baggage: The remains of them took refuge in the Ciminian forest, whither he followed them, and got great advantages over them: But some time after he again engages them near Sutrium , surprizes and defeats them, kills and takes 60,000, and seizes and plunders their camp: Upon this, three Lucumonies immediately send deputies to Rome , who obtain a suspension of arms for 30 years.	IV	623
4000	2693	306	A Roman fleet (the first they had ever sent out) under the command of P. Cornelius making a descent beyond cape Palinurus , suffering his troops to go too far up the country, had his retreat cut off; several of the Romans being slain, were forced to quit their booty, and were driven to their ships. Upon this the Samnites engage the consul Marcus ; the battle was extremely oblique and doubtful, abundance of Roman knights and several legionary tribunes were killed, and a lieutenant-general, and the consul much wounded. Upon this Papirius is made dictator, goes with an army to the assistance of Marcus , engages the Samnites , intirely overthrows them, takes and burns their camp, and upon his return to Rome has a triumph.	IV	624
4001	2694	305	Cassander (now king of Macedon) besieges Athens ; Demetrius (joint king of Syria) relieves it, and bestows several cities that he recovered from Cassander upon them, for which they honour him with lodgings behind the temple of Minerva , and thereby prostitute the virgins devoted to her service to his lust.	II	555
4001	2694	305	Damocles , the most beautiful youth in all Greece , jumps into a very large cauldron of boiling water, and was drowned, to avoid the unnatural lust of Demetrius .	II	555
4001	2694	305	The Roman consul Q. Fabius takes Nuceria , a city in alliance with the Samnites , and defeats them in a battle; and Decius Mus , the other consul, gained such advantages over the Hetrurians , that they all offered to be allies; but he only grants them a truce for a year, upon the condition of paying his troops, and finding every soldier with two suits of cloaths.	IV	624
4001	2694	305	The Umbrians arm all their youth, with a design to march directly to Rome ; Decius marches into the Pupinian field between Umbria and Rome , and Fabius marches and encamps near Mevania , a city on the banks of the Clitumnus

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			in the heart of Umbria , where he subdued them without scarce drawing blood, making their whole army prisoners; upon which the rest of the nation submitted.
4002	2695	304	The time of Fabius's consulate being expired, he is appointed proconsul, and so continued general of the army. He engages the Samnites at Allife on the banks of the Fulturnus , and gains so compleat a victory, that to save their lives and have the liberty of going home, they passed under the yoke with only one garment on: Their allies, to the number of 7000, were made slaves and sold by auction, &c.	IV	625
4002	2695	304	Antigonus (now king of Syria) besieges Rhodes by his son Demetrius , for its attachment to Ptolemy king of Egypt ; but after a year's time, and the loss of abundance of ships and men, is forced to raise the siege and make peace; upon which the Rhodians dedicate a grove to Ptolemy king of Egypt , where they offer him divine honours, and call it Ptolomeum , and him Soter , (or saviour) for the great assistance and relief he gave them during the siege.	VI	625
4002	2695	304	Antigonus and Demetrius (now kings of Syria in Asia) invade Egypt by land and sea with a great fleet and army, but are forced to retire with great loss and shame.	III	143
4003	2696	303	Marcus the Roman consul, in a few days, took three different camps from the Hernici , and obliged them to surrender at discretion.	III	439
4003	2696	303	Marcus and P. Cornelius Arvina , the two Roman consuls, engage and defeat the Samnites , and kill 30,000 of them, take and burn their camp; and while this is doing a fresh body of recruits arrives, which are also dispersed with great slaughter: Upon this they sue for peace; the consuls first oblige them to pay the soldiers of both armies one year, to furnish 13 months provisions, and give each soldier one habit, and then referred them to the senate at Rome .	VI	625
4003	2696	303	Demetrius and the Rhodians conclude a peace.	IV	626
4003	2696	303	Demetrius sails for Attica with 330 gallees and a great army against Cassander , whom he overthrew, and has 6000 Macedonians revolt to him; elated with success, Demetrius grows proud, lives voluptuously, and very wickedly, and will be called a god.	III	144
4003	2696	303	Demetrius is admitted into the fraternity of the priests of Ceres , for which purpose the Athenians change the month of March first into the month of November , and then into August .	III	439
4004	2697	302	The cities of Alatrium , Ferentinum , and Verulum , belonging to the Herusci , which had remained faithful to Rome , had the liberty either to remain under their own laws (which they chose) or have the rights of Roman citizens: The other cities were governed by the laws of Rome , and the people declared Roman citizens, but without right of suffrage.	II	555
4004	2697	302	Deputies come to Rome from Carthage , with a compliment and presents, which the Romans accept, and return others.	IV	626
4004	2697	302	The Romans engage the Samnites , and overthrow them with a dreadful slaughter, and took one and twenty ensigns. Soon after they engage again, where the battle being very bloody and obstinate, the Roman consul Minucius was killed, and Staius Gellius the Samnite general was taken; but the Romans got the day, and took twenty-six ensigns from the enemy. Fulvius Curvus being made consul in the room of Minucius , takes Bovianum and other cities, and has a triumph.	IV	626
3004	2697	302	Cassander , Lyfimachus , Seleucus , Ptolemy , &c. confederate themselves against Antigonus , &c. and take several provinces from him in Asia .	III	439
4004	2697	302	Pyrrhus , king of Epirus , goes to Illyria , to be present at the nuptials of one of Glaucias's sons, when the Molossians revolt, drive all his friends out of the kingdom, and crown Neoptolemus his great uncle; upon which Pyrrhus retired to Demetrius joint king of Syria .	III	804
4005	2698	301	Onias the high-priest and governor of the Jews dies, and is succeeded by his son Simon , who for his extraordinary virtues was surnamed the Just .	IV	36
4005	2698	301	Antigonus and Demetrius are so puffed up with pride, that all the successors of Alexander confederate against them, and drive them out of Greece into Asia , where Antigonus in one battle lost both his life and kingdom.
4005	2698	301	Demetrius after his defeat in Asia , sailing from Ephesus towards Athens with a small squadron of ships, is met by ambassadors from the Athenians in the Cycladian islands, acquainting him, that, for all his extraordinary services, they had just made a law that prohibited all crown'd heads entering their city; upon which he only desired his ships and queen Deidamia , which he had left with them, should be delivered to him; which they comply'd with, and he sailed to Chersonesus .	II	556
4005	2698	301	Lacharis , an obscure citizen, seizes the sovereignty of Athens , and forces them to submit.	II	556
4005	1698	301	Antigonus engages Seleucus king of Babylon , &c. at Ipsus , a town and river so called in Asia , where Antigonus is killed, his army cut to pieces, and his kingdom lost, which was divided among the confederate princes, his son Demetrius retaining little more than the title.	III	441
4005	2698	301	The Samnites desire to be admitted into their antient alliance with Rome , which the senate agrees to conditionally.	IV	627
4005	2698	301	The Equi having revolted, the Romans under their consuls go against them; but they retire into their city, which being invested, the consuls over-run all their country, and in 55 days become masters of 41 towns, most of which they razed or burnt, and so almost exterminated the whole nation. The consuls had a triumph, and the Marfi , Peligni , Frentani , and Marrucini demand an alliance with Rome , which is granted.	IV	627
4006	2699	300	Seleucus king of Babylon builds the famous city of Antioch , upon the river Orontes , equally distant from Constantinople and Alexandria in Egypt .	III	441

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4006	2699	300	Seleucus king of Babylon demands Stratonice , the daughter of Demetrius , in marriage; upon which he fits out a fleet to convey her to him, and in his passage seized and took away 200 talents at Quinda , then went to Rossus , where Seleucus and Stratonice were espoused.	III	441
4008	2701	298	The art of painting was introduced this year at Rome , by C. Fabius ; afterward consul, who painted the wall, of a new temple dedicated to the goddess of health; from whence he was surnamed Pictor .	IV	627
4008	2701	298	Pyrrhus king of Epirus , being at the court of Ptolemy king of Egypt an hostage for Demetrius , so far ingratiates himself into his and his queen Berenice's favours, as to marry her daughter by a former husband; upon which he is furnished with troops, and recovers his kingdom.	III	804
4009	2702	297	Rome had no consuls this year, but was governed by two dictators created successively, viz. Q. Fabius and Valerius Corvus . Fabius marched against the Marfi , who had revolted, and reduced them to obedience in one single battle; and Valerius against the Hetrurians , who had beat Sempronius Sophus his general of the horse, and taken some standards, but are so mauled by Valerius , that they sue for peace, but can only obtain a truce for two years.	IV	627
4010	2703	296	Consuls chose at Rome this year, where great contests are agitated about choosing pontifices and augurs, but at last 'twas agreed, four new pontifices should be chose out of the plebeians, to make their number eight, and five new augurs to to encrease their number to nine.	IV	628
4011	2704	295	The consul Fulvius goes to carry on the siege of Nequinum , built on the edge of a steep rock, almost surrounded by the river Nar , and deemed almost impregnable, but by the treachery of the Nequinians the consul took it by surprize: The name of this city was changed into Narina . For this exploit the consul had a triumph.	IV	628
4011	2704	295	The consul Manlius being killed by a fall from his horse, Valerius Corvus was a sixth time made consul, who goes against the revolted Hetrurians , who fly to their cities, while he ravages their country, not daring to meet him in the field.	IV	629
4011	2704	295	Demetrius besieges Athens , and forces them through famine to surrender at discretion, when entering with his forces commands all the Athenians to be assembled in the publick theatre, which surrounding with his army, when they expected to be put all to the sword, Demetrius , after upbraiding them with their ingratitude, gave them 100,000 bushels of corn, and named magistrates agreeable to them.	II	556
4012	2705	294	Upon the death of Cassander king of Macedon , his two sons Antipater and Alexander get the kingdom between them.	III	442
4012	2705	294	Alexander king of (part of) Macedon , endeavours to murder Demetrius , but falls into the snare himself, who is dispatched by Demetrius , who succeeds him in the whole kingdom of Macedon , his brother Antipater being deposed by the people.	IN	442
4012	2705	294	Antipater and Alexander , two of Cassander's sons, contesting for the whole crown of Macedon , Pyrrhus king of Epirus comes to the assistance of Alexander , and has a great part of the country and abundance of money for his reward.	III	465
4012	2705	294	Demetrius king of Macedon besieges and makes Thebes surrender at discretion, after a very obstinate resistance: He only punishes 13 of the principal revolters.	III	466
4012	2705	294	The Hetrurians and Samnites having revolted from Rome , were both overthrown by Fulvius the plebeian consul, for which he had a triumph.	IV	629
4013	2706	293	Mænon having dipped a tooth picker that Agathocles cleaned his teeth with after meals into poison, his teeth and gums putrified, and his whole body was tortured with most racking pains, in the height of which he was hurried away to the funeral pile, and burnt while he was yet alive; and Mænon usurped the supreme authority, under the name of Prætor of Syracuse .	III	88
4013	2706	293	The consul Fabius by stratagem beats the Samnites ; they fly, and he takes 23 standards; and Decius , the other consul, gains a considerable victory over the Apulians , as they were marching to join the Samnites ; then both consuls laid Samnium waste; Fabius took the city of Cimetra , and razed it, and put all that bore arms to the sword.	IV	629
4013	2706	293	Seleucus king of Macedon builds 16 cities in Lesser Asia , in which large colonies of the Jews settled, with great privileges, especially at Antioch .	IV	35
4014	2707	292	The Mamertini being disbanded the service of Syracuse , are received into the city of Messana : After a small time they unexpectedly fall upon the inhabitants, killed all the men, and married the women, and not only defended themselves, but reduced the neighbouring country to their obedience.	III	88
4014	2707	292	Decius being proconsul, so harrassed the Samnites army, that he made them disband, and retire into the neighbouring countries: Then he took Murgantia , where he made 1110 prisoners: In Romulea he put 2,300 to death, and took 6000 prisoners; and at Ferentinum 3000 that defended it desperately were killed on the ramparts.	IV	630
4014	2707	292	The two consuls engage the revolted Hetrurians , and overthrow them with great slaughter, the enemy leaving 7,300 dead in the field; their camp was taken and plundered, and 2000 taken prisoners; and as Volumnius was returning into Samnium , he surprized the Samnites as they were ravaging Campania , engages them, slew 600, and retook all the spoil they had taken.	IV	631
4015	2708	291	Decius the consul seeing the enemy very numerous and bold, devoted himself to the Dii Manes , as his father had done before, and riding into the midst of the enemies troops, was there cut to pieces: Upon this the pontifex Livius cries out, We have conquered , &c. and renews the battle with great fury, and at last obtained a compleat victory, killing 25,000, and taking 8,000, &c. for which the consul Fabius had a triumph.	IV	634

			(958)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ			Vol.	Pa.
4015	2708	291	Fabius returns again into Hetruria , attacks them, killed 4500 upon the spot, and took 1740 prisoners : This quelled them a while.	IV	634
4015	2708	291	The Samnites still remained very troublesome, so that the præconsul Volumnius and the prætor Appius having engaged them, kill 16,300.	IV	634
4016	2709	290	The Samnites retire upon Posthumius the consul's coming to his colleague Attilius 's assistance, upon which the Romans pillage and lay waste the whole country, and take Milionia by assault, and kill 3200 Samnites upon the ramparts, and make 4200 prisoners ; then they take Tri-ventum without striking a blow, the inhabitants having deserted it. A few days after, Attilius again engages the Samnites , and after losing 7300 Romans , overthrows them, kills 4800, and takes 7000 prisoners, which he made pass under the yoke : Afterwards, in his return to Rome , he falls upon another body of Samnites , that had been ravaging the Volsci , cuts them to pieces, recovers the booty, and releases many Roman prisoners, whom they had taken.	IV	635
4016	2709	290	Posthumius marches into Hetruria without orders from the senate, took Rufjella , and obliged the three Lucumonies of Volturni , Perrusa , and Arretium to sue for peace. The senate refuses him a triumph, but the people give him one in spite of all opposition.	IV	636
4017	2710	289	The Samnites make a law, that all persons capable of bearing arms that did not appear at Aquilonia (a city of Hirpinia) upon the first summons of the general of their nation, should be put to death immediately : 40,000 were assembled, out of which 16,000 bound themselves by a solemn oath to do extraordinary matters under a linnen canopy, and were therefore called the linnen legion, &c. The Roman consul Corvilius enters Samnium , takes Amiternum , (a city in Sabinia) cuts 2800 men to pieces, and takes 4270 prisoners. Papirius , the other consul, takes Furconia , and both lay the country waste where-e'er they come. Papirius engages the Samnites , kills 12,000, and disperses the rest. Corvilius obliged Cominium to surrender at discretion, in which remained 15400 persons after 4580 had been killed in its defence. Afterwards, to complete the utter destruction of the Samnites , Corvilius took Volana , Palumbinum , and Herchanium ; and Papirius took Sepinum , deemed impregnable. Corvilius returns to Rome , which he enters in triumph.	IV	637
4017	2710	289	The Hetrurians being again in arms, Corvilius goes against them, take Trofulum by assault, forces the Falisci to sue for peace, but grants them only a year's truce, for which they pay 390,000 asses of brass, and then returns to Rome , whither also Papirius was come from Samnium , and has a triumph, graced with the spoils of the linnen legion.	IV	637
4018	2711	288	Pyrrhus and Lyfmachus divide the kingdom of Macedon between them, by consent, to avoid a war.	III	468
4018	2711	288	A plague raging in Rome , and two consuls not well qualified for military affairs being chose governors this year, encourage the Falisci to break their truce, and the remaining Samnites to take arms, and enter Campania : The consul Brutus over-run Hetruria , defeated the Falisci , and returned to Rome loaded with spoils : But the other consul Fabius attacking the Samnites , is defeated, has 3000 of his men killed, on the spot, and has more wounded, who died soon after : Upon this, Fabius the father of the consul goes with his son, and again engages and kills 20,000 Samnites upon the spot, and takes their general Pontius , and 4000 prisoners.	IV	638
4018	2711	288	Demetrius preparing to recover his kingdom of Syria , is attacked by Seleucus , Lyfmachus , Ptolomy , and Pyrrhus ; Demetrius is forced by his own army to fly to Cassandria , and so abdicate Macedon : Upon this his wife Pbilla poisoned herself.	III	443
4019	2712	287	Demetrius goes to Thebes , raises an army, assumes the regal authority, and restores democracy. The Athenians insulting him, he besieges Athens , and reduces them to the necessity of begging his pardon, &c.	III	443
4019	2712	287	Pyrrhus wars against Demetrius , and takes Athens , &c. from him, uses the inhabitants extremely well, and sacrifices in their city with them, &c.	III	468
4019	2712	287	Pyrrhus drives Demetrius out of Macedon , and becomes king thereof, but is forced to admit Lyfmachus a partner with him in that kingdom.	III	468
4019	2712	287	The Sibyline books having been consulted upon account of the plague, the answer was, that the God Æsculapius must be fetched from Epidauros in Peloponnesus , where he was worshipped under the figure of a serpent, which being done, the plague is said to cease.	IV	638
4019	2712	287	Posthumius the Roman consul despises the commands of the senate, and forces himself into the siege of Cominium , which Fabius , for the publick good, submits to ; it is taken, and also Venussum , Lucania , and Samnium . Young Fabius is allowed a triumph, but Posthumius is refused, &c.	IV	639
4020	2713	286	Demetrius going into Asia , marries Prolemaida at Sardis ; many of Lyfmachus 's forces revolt to him, and bring a large sum of money with them : He takes the city, &c. but a plague breaking out sweeps away most of his army, and he is relieved by Seleucus , &c.	III	444
4020	2713	286	Seleucus being influenced by his minister Patrocles , not only withdraws his kindness from Demetrius , but actually endeavours to take him by force, and by various successes at last compels Demetrius to surrender himself at discretion.	III	446
4020	2713	286	Posthumius 's consulate being out, he is brought to a trial before the Comitia , by tribes, and accused of employing part of his troops in grubbing up a forest in his own estate, for which he is condemned to pay a considerable fine.	IV	639
4021	2714	285	Lyfmachus drives Pyrrhus out of Macedon , and reigns king there alone.	III	468
4021	2714	285	The Romans having ravaged the country, and taken the city of the Samnites , obliges them to sue for peace, which being granted, put an end to a war that had lasted 49 years. The consul Manius Curius Dentatus returned to Rome in triumph.	IV	640

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(959)	Vol.	Page
4021	2714	285	The consul Curius goes against the Sabines , who had joined the Samnites , reduces them intirely, and returns to Rome , where he has a second triumph.	IV	641
4022	2715	284	The Romans send colonies into Adria , a maritime town that gave name to the Adriatick sea, to Castrum in Picenum , and to Seno at the mouth of the Sene .	IV	641
4022	2715	284	Mænon the Syracusan governor going against the Agrigentines , who had revolted, as soon as he was out of the city of Syracuse , one Tænon possessed himself of the sovereign power, in which he was opposed by one Sofistrates , between whom a civil war was raised and carried on.	III	88
4022	2715	284	Three new judges, called Triumviri Capiales , were added to the Roman prætor, who had only the power of inflicting pecuniary fines, as likewise the care of the prisons where the greatest criminals were, and the direction of their execution; they were chosen annually in the Comitia by tribes, and from their sentence lay no appeal. This year a census being made, the number of Roman citizens fit to bear arms was found to be 273,000.	IV	641
4022	2715	284	Ptolomy , being by his father admitted joint king of Egypt , was surnamed Philadelphus by many favours bestowed upon the Jews in general, and great largesses to the priests and learned men in particular, obtained from them the Greek version of the Old Testament called the Septuagint .	IV	37
4022	2715	284	The famous watch-tower in the island of Pharos , esteemed one of the wonders of the world, is now finished.	III	626
4022	2715	284	Demetrius being the prisoner of Seleucus in the Syrian Chersonesus , dies, upon which Seleucus makes one empire of all Demetrius held in Syria and Asia .	III	518
4023	2716	283	The statue of Serapis is brought from Sinope (a city of Pontus) to Alexandria , and set up in a magnificent temple built on purpose.	III	628
4023	2716	283	A great dispute and commotion happens at Rome about repealing the debtors law, which causes all the common people to leave the city; whereupon Q. Hortensius is named dictator to compose their differences, but dying before the matter was compleated, Q. Fabius Maximus was raised to that dignity, who settled all things to the peoples intire satisfaction, and laid the foundation of Rome's future greatness.	IV	642
4023	2716	283	Demetrius being dead in captivity, his ashes are carried into Greece , where being put into a golden urn by his son Antigonus , all the honours of royalty were paid to them.	III	447
4023	2716	283	Simon , the just high-priest of the Jews , dies, in the 19th year of his pontificate, much regretted by all for his repairing and fortifying the temple and city, and finishing the canon of the Old Testament : He was succeeded by his brother Eleazer in the priesthood, and in the civil government by Antigonus of Socho , the chief of the Sadducean sect.	IV	36
4024	2717	282	Ptolomy Soter , joint king of Egypt , dies, (and leaves his son surnamed Philadelphus absolute king) after having reigned 39 years alone, and two years in partnership, being 84 years of age.	III	631
4024	2717	282	The Tarentines , originally a colony of Spartans that settled in the south part of Italy , stir up the Boii , Senones , and Hetrurians , against Rome ; the Senones go against the Aretini , the allies of Rome , upon which the Romans send ambassadors to dissuade them from their enterprize; but they murder them, and immediately march their troops before Aretium ; the consul Lucius Cæcilius engages them, is killed in the battle, and seven legionary tribunes, most of the Roman knights, and 13,000 private men: The senate immediately sends the famous Curius Dentatus against them, who goes into the country of the Senones , where he plundered and burnt their houses, put all able to bear arms to the sword, and carried the women and children away captive, and so rendered the whole country quite desolate.	IV	643
4024	2717	282	Lyfsmachus engages Seleucus at Corupedion in Phrygia , where himself and children are slain, and Seleucus becomes king of Macedon , &c.	III	469
4025	2718	281	The Romans , under the consul Cn. Domitius Calvinus , meet and engage the Senones in their march towards Rome , and entirely overthrew them, so that only a few escaped into the country of the Boii , who together with the Hetrurians raised another large army, whom the other consul P. Cornelius Dolabella meets in their march towards Rome , engages them on the bank of the lake Vademonis , now Il Lago di Bassano , kills most of the Hetrurians and Boii , and almost entirely takes away the very name of the Senones as a nation.	IV	643
4025	2718	281	Several states of Italy having confederated together against Rome , the consul C. Fabricius goes into Lucania , and engages them, kills their general Statilius , and 25,000 soldiers, and makes himself master of their camp, for which the Romans return the God Mars publick thanks, &c.	IV	643
4025	2718	281	The Tarentines fall upon Valerius the Roman admiral and his fleet, now at the mouth of their harbour, with ten ships, sunk one and took four, all the prisoners fit to bear arms they put to the sword, and sold the others for slaves. The Romans send to demand satisfaction, but the ambassadors are treated with the utmost contempt and disrespect, and then besiege and take Thurium , defended by a Roman garrison, and send and invite Pyrrhus king of Epirus to assist them.	IV	644
4026	2719	280	Antiochus (surnamed Soter) succeeds his father Seleucus in his kingdom of Assyria , and reigned 19 years.	III	522
4026	2719	280	Ptolomy Ceraunus stabs Seleucus , and flying to Lyfsmachia , raises a company, and proclaims himself king of Macedon , &c.	III	469
4026	2719	280	Ptolomy Ceraunus applies to his sister Arfinoe , (widow of Lyfsmachus , who was fled to the strong castle in the rich city of Cassandria) promises her marriage, to adopt her children, and make her the partner of his kingdom. She accepts the offer, puts Cassandria into his possession, and the day he celebrated the nuptials he murders her children, and turns her out, with only two servants, to lead a solitary

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pg.
			a solitary life in Samo-Thrace , from whence she went into Egypt , where she married her other brother, Ptolomy Philadelphus . ————	III	469
4026	2719	280	The Boii being defeated by the Romans , are forced to sue for peace. ————	IV	643
4026	2719	280	The Achaëans having rendered themselves famous for their regularity, justice, and impartial behaviour, induced most of the Greek cities to join their democracy, and first Patra and Dyma shewed the example. ————	II	642
4026	2719	280	The inhabitants of Patra and Dyma begin the Achaean league. ————	II	642
4026	2719	280	Lyfimachus king of Thrace , and Seleucus king of Macedon , &c. engage, and after a long and bloody battle, Lyfimachus is killed at the head of his troops. ————	III	521
4026	4719	280	Seleucus is murdered by Ptolomy Ceraunus , whom the soldiers proclaim king of Macedon , and Antiochus Soter , son of Seleucus , enjoys his empire of Asia 19 years. ————	III	522
4026	4719	280	The Romans , under the consul L. Æmilius Barbula , take cities, storm castles, and lay the country of Tarentum waste, force their army out of the field to shelter themselves within the walls of their city, &c. The Tarentines admit Cynus , general of Pyrrhus king of Epirus , with 3000 Epirots into their citadel, and depose their governor Agis for his supposed attachment to Rome . ————	IV	645
4027	2720	279	Nicomedes succeeds his father Zipetes in the kingdom of Bythinia , and puts two of his brothers to death; Zipetes the younger brother flies, and seizing part of the kingdom, wars with his brother, who calls in the Gauls , and by their assistance gets the whole kingdom, and bestows part of Asia Minor upon them, as a reward for their help: This part of the country was afterward called Galatia , and the inhabitants Galatians . ————	III	522
4027	2720	279	Ptolomy Ceraunus , king of Macedon and Syria , engages the Gauls under the command of Belgius , is taken prisoner, and has his head cut off, &c. ————	III	470
4027	2720	279	The Macedonians choose Meleager , the brother of Ptolomy , king; but finding him unfit for government, after two months, depose him, and choose Antipater the son of Philip , the brother of Cassander , who held it only 45 days. ————	III	470
4027	2720	279	Patrocles , general of Antiochus Soter king of Syria , entering into the country of the Bythinians , and committing great hostilities, is engaged by Zipetes , who drew him into an ambush, and cut off both himself and his whole army, for joy whereof Zipetes , being 76 years old, died in a transport, in the 41st year of his reign. ————	III	522
4027	2720	279	Q. Marcius Philippus the Roman consul has a triumph, for vanquishing the Hetrurians ; and Pyrrhus king of Epirus comes to Tarentum , where he is received with great joy: He sets himself to reform the Tarentines , and inure them to the use of arms, and proclaims those guilty of death, who either abandoned their country or absented from the common musters. ————	IV	646
4027	2720	279	The Proletarii , or meanest of the people, who till now had never been enlisted in the Roman army, nor suffered to bear arms, were enrolled in the army along with the other Roman people. ————	IV	646
4027	2720	279	The Roman consul P. Valerius Lævinus ravaging the Lucanians , &c. is engaged by Pyrrhus , and after a stubborn fight the Romans are forced to quit the field, with the slaughter of many thousands on both sides, and 1800 Roman knights taken prisoners. Then Pyrrhus plunders and ravages the Roman territories, and possesses himself of Campania . ————	III	810
4027	2720	279	Pyrrhus surprizes Fregellæ , sits down before Prænestæ , and views Rome ; but Coruncanius the other consul returning victorious over the Hetrurians , Pyrrhus returns into Campania , where he is met by Lævinus , who being recruited, again offers to engage him, but he declines it, and retires to Tarentum . ————	III	811
4027	2720	279	Ptolomy Philadelphus , king of Egypt , repudiates his wife Arfinoe , for a conspiracy, and marries his half sister Arfinoe , though past child bearing. ————	III	633
4028	2721	278	Sophenes , a young Macedonian nobleman, assembles a body of able youths, and disciplines them, and by degrees drives away the Gauls . He refused the royal honours, contenting himself with the name of general. ————	III	470
4028	2721	278	The Romans and Pyrrhus , &c. engage near Asculum , where the Roman consul Decius Mus is killed, but at length the Romans got the day, and both armies parting, they go into winter quarters. ————	III	813
4029	2722	277	Nicius , physician to Pyrrhus king of Epirus , writes a letter to the Roman consuls C. Fabricius and Q. Æmilius Papus , wherein for a large reward he offers to poison the king; they abhorring the action, inform the king of it, without naming the person. ————	III	814
4030	2723	276	Brennus king of the Gauls comes into Macedonia , with 140,000 foot and 10,000 horse, against whom Sophenes makes a vigorous defence, but is at last killed, and most of his army, and then Brennus gluts himself and army with spoil. ————	III	470
4031	2724	275	The inhabitants of Eginum having driven out the Macedonian garrison, acceded to the Achaean alliance; and the inhabitants of Bura did the same, and also the Ceraunians . ————	II	642
4033	2726	273	The Romans under their consul Curius Dentatus engage Pyrrhus , and finally overthrow him, killing 30,000 upon the spot, and take 1200 prisoners and eight elephants, the camp and all the baggage, &c. for which the consul has the most magnificent triumph that had ever yet been seen. ————	III	815
4033	2726	273	The consul Lentulus having entirely defeated the Samnites , &c. was also honoured with a triumph, and the year ended with a census and lustrum, when 271,224 citizens were found in Rome fit to bear arms. ————	IV	647
4034	2727	272	Pyrrhus returning to Epirus from Italy , recruits his army, and engages Antigonus Gonatus , king of Macedon , overcomes and takes all Macedonia from him, particularly Æge , the royal seat of the late kings of Macedon , where he is again proclaimed king, and uses the people with great severity: The garrison of Gauls which he left in it broke open the tombs of the kings, take out the riches buried with them, and scatter their bones about the streets, which gave great offence. ————	III	816

			(961)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4034	2727	272	Ptolemy Philadelphus sends ambassadors for the first time to Rome , to conclude an alliance with that republick. The Romans returns the compliment, and send four ambassadors to Ptolemy , and conclude an alliance.	III	634
4034	2727	272	Ptolemy , son of Pyrrhus , reigns in Macedon as vicegerent of his father: Antigonus Gonatus attacks him, but is entirely routed, flying only with seven attendants.	III	472
4034	2727	272	Pyrrhus warring against the Lacedemonians , has the rear of his army cut off by Areus king of Sparta , together with his son Ptolemy , &c.	II	817
4034	2727	272	Pyrrhus , contrary to his word, having entered Argos with his army, an engagement ensues, wherein Pyrrhus was killed, and so Antigonus recovered the kingdom of Macedon again.	III	473
4034	2727	272	Upon the death of Pyrrhus , Milo the Epirot general surrenders the citadel of Tarentum into the hands of Papirius Curio , the Roman consul, and the inhabitants also surrender themselves.	III	820
4034	2727	272	Alexander , the son of Pyrrhus , succeeds his father in the kingdom of Epirus , invades Macedon , and engaging Antigonus , defeats him, and takes away his kingdom from him; upon which Antigonus is forced to fly into Greece for shelter.	III	820
4035	2728	271	Demetrius , son of Antigonus , raises an army, engages Alexander king of Epirus , and not only drives him out of Macedon , but also out of Epirus , and forces him to fly to the Acrarnanians , from whence coming with a large army into Epirus , Demetrius retires into Macedon .	III	820
4036	2729	270	Alexander reigned several years in peace, and is succeeded by his son Ptolemy , and grandson Pyrrhus , who both died young, and also by his great grand-daughter Deidamia , who being murdered, the kingdom became a republick, &c.	III	821
4036	2729	270	Claudius Carina , the Roman consul, defeats the Samnites , &c. and has a triumph given him at his return to Rome .	IV	647
4037	2730	269	Antigonus Gonatus , king of Macedon , first waives the territories of the Athenians , and then besieges and takes Athens , and makes them accept a Macedonian garrison, &c.	II	557
4039	2732	267	News coming to Samnium , &c. of the death of Pyrrhus king of Epirus , the Samnites , Lucanians , and Brutians , in despair engage L. Papirius Curio and Sp. Corvilius (urnamed Maximus) the two Roman consuls, and their armies, and are totally overthrown and subdued: Thus ended this bloody war, which had lasted 72 years, and produced the Roman generals 31 triumphs.	IV	647
4039	2732	267	Milo the Epirot general surrenders Tarentum to the consul Papirius , who disarmed all the inhabitants, took their ships from them, dismantled the city, and made it tributary to Rome .	IV	648
4040	2733	266	The Roman consul L. Genucius Clepsina goes against the Roman garrison at Rhegium , where they had, under false pretences, massacred all the chief men of the city at a banquet, and either put the rest to the sword, or else forced them to fly the city; and obliged the women to marry the murderers of their husbands and fathers: The rebels stood out vigorously, till their number from 4000 was reduced to 300, who were brought prisoners to Rome , and put to death by fifties.	IV	648
4041	2734	265	Acrotatus king of Sparta engages Aristodemus prince of Megalapolis , is slain, and his army routed: His young son Aræus succeeds him in his kingdom, who dies in the 8th year of his reign, under the governments of Leonidas .	II	625
4041	2734	265	C. Genucius being consul, lead the Romans against the Sarcinates , (a people of Umbria) whom he conquered, and had a triumph.	IV	648
4042	2735	264	The consuls Q. Ogulnius Gallus and C. Fabius Pictor , go against one Lollius , a Samnite hostage who had made his escape from Rome , and being joined by the Caracini , laid the country under contribution; but at last, after an obstinate struggle, they take the city of the Caracini , &c.	IV	649
4042	2735	264	The Romans for the first time coin silver money, in the temple of Juno Moneta , for the use of commerce, which heretofore were only pieces of brass, with the figures of a bull, a ram, and a boar stamped on them.	IV	649
4043	2736	263	Margas , half brother to Ptolemy king of Egypt , being governor of Libia and Cyrene , revolts and makes himself king in those provinces.	III	635
4043	2736	263	Antigonus Gonatus king of Macedon besieges and takes Athens , through the misunderstanding between the Spartans and Egyptians that come to its relief.	III	634
4043	2736	263	Patroclus the Egyptian general orders the poet Sotades to be wrapped up in a sheet of lead, and cast into the sea, for writing invectives against his master Ptolemy Philadelphus .	III	634
4043	2736	263	The consul Appius with his Roman legions entering the country of the Umbrians , made himself master of the city of Camerinum , the people whereof, contrary to his agreement, he sold for slaves, and put the money into the publick treasury, and seized their lands; but the senate caused the people to be sought out, gave them the privileges of Roman citizens, granted them part of Mount Aventine for an habitation, and allotted each man as much land as they lost in Umbria .	IV	649
4043	2736	263	The Roman consul Sempronius Sophus takes Asculum , the capital of Picenum , and the whole nation of the Pientes gave themselves up to Rome ; this added to the strength of Rome 360,000 men fit to bear arms.	IV	649
4043	2736	263	The Romans to secure their conquests send two colonies of their own people, one into Arminium in the country of the Picentes , the other into Beneventum among the Samnites .	IV	649
4043	2736	263	The Sabines are this year admitted to the right of suffrage, and made entirely Romans , enjoying before only the right of incorporation into the Roman army, instead of serving as auxiliaries.	IV	649
4043	2736	263	Antiochus king of Syria engaging and entirely overthrowing the Gauls that were settled in Asia , by Nicomedes king of Bythia , thereby delivered the neighbouring provinces from their frequent incursions; for which he is firnamed Soter , or the Saviour.	III	523

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol. Pg.
4044	2737	262	Antiochus Soter , upon the death of Philæterus prince of Pergamus , invades his dominions, designing to add them to his own; but Eumenes , nephew and successor to the deceased, engages and overthrows him, and not only settles himself in his own country, but adds several provinces to it.	III 523
4045	2738	261	The consuls, Numerius Fabius and D. Junius Pera , completed the conquest of the Salentines and Sarcinates , and were each honoured with two triumphs at their return to Rome , for the conquest of two nations which made Rome mistress of all the countries in Italy , from the remotest part of Hebruria to the Ionian sea, and from the Tyrrhenian sea to the Adriatick .	IV 649
4045	2738	261	Apolonia , a city in Macedon , sends ambassadors to Rome to desire her protection: Fabricius and Apronius (two young patricians, Ediles for this year) having insulted the ambassadors, are degraded, and delivered into the hands of the ambassadors, to be carried into Macedon to be tried there; and a law was made, that if any person whatever insulted a foreign ambassador, he should be delivered up to that people, to be punished at their pleasure.	III 523
4045	2738	261	Antiochus Soter upon his return to Antioch puts one of his sons to death, for attempting to raise a rebellion in his absence, and proclaims his son Antiochus king with himself.	III 523
4045	2738	261	Antiochus Soter , king of Syria , dies, and is succeeded by his son Antiochus , surnamed Theos , so called by the Milefians for delivering them from the tyranny of Timarchus , governor of Caria for Ptolemy ; who having revolted, chose Miletus for the seat of his government; Antiochus engaged, defeated, and slew him.	IV 650
4046	2739	260	Now flourished Berosus , the famous Babylonian historian, and dedicated his history to Antiochus Theos , which contained the astronomical observations of 480 years: While he taught at Athens , his reputation for astrological predictions was so great, that the Athenians erected a statue to him in the Gymnasium , with a golden tongue.	III 523
4046	2739	260	Rome having divided her conquests into four provinces, four new officers, called provincial Quæstors , are created, to take care of the publick revenues.	IV 650
4046	2739	260	A plague breaking out at Rome , and the Sybiline books being consulted, the answer was, some secret crimes had drawn the wrath of heaven upon the commonwealth. Upon search, a vestal named Carparania was charged with incontinence, and condemned to be buried alive, to avoid which she strangled herself. Upon a census being taken, and a lustrum made, notwithstanding the havock the plague had made, there were found in the city 292,224 men fit to bear arms.	IV 651
4046	2739	260	The Volturnenses , one of the twelve Leucomones of the Hebrurians , beg the assistance of Rome , to free them from the tyrannical and abominable government of their magistrates; upon which the consul Fabius Gurgæ goes against them with a small army, and is killed in a battle with them.	IV 651
4047	2740	259	M. Fulvius Flaccus , the Roman consul, forces the Volturnenses to surrender at discretion, and puts all that had been guilty to death: The ancient citizens not concerned in the revolt were transplanted to another place, and the city razed. Flaccus at his return to Rome was honoured with a triumph.	IV 653
4047	2740	259	The Romans and Carthaginians declare war against each other, called the first punic war. In the beginning the Roman general Claudius going to the assistance of the Mamertines at Messana , over-reaches Hanno the Carthaginian general, and gets the town and citadel from him; for which Hanno was crucified at his return to Carthage .	IV 654
4047	2740	259	Another Hanno the Carthaginian admiral comes into Sicily , and besieges Claudius and his Romans ; and upon his refusing to surrender Messana , orders all the Italians in his army to be massacred. The consul Appius coming to Rhegium , sends from thence to Hiero king of Syracuse to desire him to withdraw his forces that he had joined Hanno with; but Hiero instead of complying, reproaches the Romans with encouraging tyrants and treachery, rebellion, &c. but Claudius having overthrown Hiero in an engagement with him, thinking himself betrayed by the Carthaginians , returns with his troops to Syracuse ; upon which Claudius falling out upon the Carthaginians , routed them with great slaughter, and so raised the siege of Messana , then over-run and laid waste the country of the Syracusans to the gates of Syracuse , for which he is said to have a triumph at his return to Rome .	III 145
4048	2741	258	War breaks out between the Rhodians and Byzantines , upon account of the latter's laying a tax upon all ships trading to the Pontic sea, but is soon after composed by the mediation of Cavarus king of the Tbracian Gauls.	IV 655
4048	2741	258	The two Roman consuls, with each a large army under his command, go into Sicily , where 68 cities and towns heretofore subject to the Carthaginians submit to them; then besiege Syracuse , upon which Hiero desires peace, which the consuls grant, upon condition that he release all the Roman prisoners without ransom, and pay the republick 100 talents of silver; this Hiero performing, the Romans contract to acknowledge Hiero for a friend, and to protect his dominions from all hostilities.	II 627
4048	2741	258	The inhabitants of Segesta and Aliena massacre the African garrison, and open their gates to the Roman consuls. The cities of Hilara , Tyrissa , and Aicela are besieged, taken by assault, and treated with great fulgour. Upon Valerius 's return to Rome , he has a triumph. This year Cn. Fulvius Centumalus was made dictator, to drive a nail into the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus , to stop the plague now raging at Rome .
4049	2742	257	Leonidas becomes king of Sparta , and after a reign of 13 years, was outed by his son-in-law Cleombrotus , who reigned his stead; upon which his daughter fled with him, leaving her husband for the sake of her father.
4049	2742	257	The consuls L. Posthumius Megellus and Q. Manlius Vitulus go into Sicily , and besiege Agrigentum , which the Carthaginians had made their magazine for arms and

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			and provisions, a place rendered almost impregnable by art and nature, defended by a numerous garrison under the command of Hannibal , besides 50,000 inhabitants : After five months siege comes Hanno from Carthage , with an army of 50,000 soldiers, &c. to whom Erbesfa (a city where the Romans had their magazine) surrenders : After the city had been besieged seven months, both armies engage, and the Romans defeat the Carthaginians , with great slaughter on both sides ; upon which Hannibal in the night sallies out, and cut his way through the Roman camp, and escapes ; upon which the Agrigentines massacre all the remaining Carthaginians , and the consuls deliver up the city to be plundered, which had not surrendered at discretion, and 25,000 free persons are made slaves : This important siege, battle, &c. cost the Romans and their allies upwards of 30,000 men.	IV	656
4050	2743	256	About this time a dreadful earthquake happened at Rhodes , which threw down the great Colossus , the arsenal, and most part of the walls of Rhodes , towards repairing which, all the Grecian states and other princes sent them very large presents, which enabled them in a small time to appear in their former splendor.	III	146
4051	2744	255	The Roman consul Cn. Cornelius Scipio , with a squadron of 17 galleys full of men, are drawn into a snare by Hannibal , and are all taken prisoners ; but 103 more Roman galleys soon after fall upon, sink, take and disperse Hannibal's fleet, himself escaping with great difficulty : Quickly after the Romans , under the consul Dulius , attacked the Carthaginian fleet again, and by help of an engine called the Corvus , they grappled the Carthaginians , and boarding them, overcame and took 80 of them, and 7000 prisoners, and killed 7000 men in the two engagements, and sunk 13 ships or galleys ; Hannibal a second time escaped with difficulty, and is degraded by the Carthaginian senate ; then the consul going on shore, relieves Segesta , besieged by Hamilcar , takes Marcella , and returns to Rome , where he was honoured with a triumph, in the most magnificent and extraordinary manner, by medals, &c.	IV	657
4051	2744	255	During the absence of Dulius the Romans and Sicilians quarrel, and part from one another ; whereupon Hamilcar attacks the Sicilians , and puts 4000 of them to the sword, drove the Romans from their posts, took several cities, and over-run great part of the country.
4052	2745	254	The Roman slaves form a conspiracy to burn Rome , &c. and are joined by 4000 Sannites ; but the plot is discovered by Erius Potitius , the commander of the confederates : The slaves were put in irons, and the Sannites imprisoned.	IV	650
4052	2745	254	The consul C. Aquilius Florus having the command of the Roman navy, sails to Corfica , and soon made himself master of the island : Afterwards going to Sardinia , he besieged Olbia , where Hanno the Carthaginian general was killed, whom Aquilius , after taking the city, honoured with magnificent obsequies, attending his burial in person ; after which he took most of the maritime cities, driving the Carthaginians away where-ever he came.	IV	660
4053	2746	253	The Carthaginians desiring assistance of the Egyptians against the Romans , are denied by Ptolemy .	III	634
4053	2746	253	Aquilius being made proconsul, and going into Sicily , recovers what Hamilcar the Carthaginian general had taken, and drove him quite out of the field ; and besieging Mystratum , reduced it to such straits, that it surrendered to the consul Attilius soon after his arrival ; and both Aquilius and his colleague Cornelius are honoured with triumphs upon their return to Rome , for their extraordinary services.	IV	660
4053	2746	253	The consul Attilius falls into an ambuscade, from which M. Calpurnius Flaminius , with only 300 men, relieved him, but with the loss of all his men, and himself extremely wounded, for which he was rewarded with a crown of graven. Attilius takes Camerina , and sells all the Carthaginians for slaves ; then he goes to Emma , where the people open their gates to him, and deliver up all the Carthaginians , whom he puts to the sword. Sittana he took by assault, and put the army sent to relieve it to flight. Then he went into Agrigentum , and drove the Carthaginians quite out of the country.	IV	661
4053	2746	253	Sulpicius , the Roman consul and admiral, engages Hannibal the Carthaginian admiral, but they are parted by a storm, which drove both of them into the Sardinian harbours ; the storm abating, Sulpitius surprises, sinks, and takes most of the Carthaginian ships, for which the remainder crucify their admiral. Sulpicius returns to Rome , and is honoured with a triumph.	IV	661
4054	2747	252	Aratus comes to Athens , and prevails upon Diogenes the Macedonian governor to give up the three fortresses, Pyraeum , Munichia , and Museum , for 150 talents, towards which he paid 20 out of his own fortune, and then left the Athenians absolutely free, under the protection of the Achaëans to guard their freedom.	II	557
4054	2747	352	C. Attilius Regulus , consul for this year, having the command of the Roman fleet, goes with 10 galleys to reconnoitre the Carthaginian fleet, is surrounded, and most of them taken, but with great difficulty he escapes to the remainder of his fleet, with which he attacks the enemy, and routs them, taking 10 galleys and sinking eight, with all their crews, forces the rest to fly to the port of Lipara . Both consuls at their return to Rome are honoured with a triumph ; and Q. Ogulnius is created dictator to preside at the Feria Latina , now revived upon account of some prodigies that had appeared during the campaign.	IV	662
4055	2748	251	The consuls L. Manlius Vulso and Marus Attilius Regulus , with a fleet of 330 Roman galleys, each manned with 120 soldiers and 300 rowers, engage the Carthaginian fleet, consisting of 360 sail, (and better manned than the Romans) near Heraclea in Sicily , and after an obstinate and very bloody battle the Carthaginians were entirely routed, 30 of their ships being destroyed, and 63 taken with

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			with their crews, and the Romans had 24 sunk. After this the Romans sailed for Carthage , and took Clupea (or Apis) which they fortified, and made a key to Africa , ravaged the country, and returned with immense booty and 20,000 prisoners.	IV	663
4055	2748	251	Arfaces , in revenge for an affront upon the modesty of his brother, by Agathocles governor of Parthia , &c. gets some friends and murders him, and at last he drove out the Macedonians , and made himself king, &c.	III	525
4055	2748	251	Theodotus governor of Bactria revolts from Antiochus , and makes himself king, &c.	III	525
4055	2748	251	Eleazer the Jewish high-priest dies, and is succeeded by Manasses , uncle of Simon the Just .	IV	41
4056	2749	250	Sicyon , by the persuasion of Aratus becomes a member of the Achean league.	II	643
4056	2749	250	Attilius , now proconsul of the Roman army, besieges Adis , or Adda , not far from Carthage , and engages the Carthaginian army, kills 17,000, takes 5000 and 18 elephants: This victory brought the submission of 80 towns to the Romans , of which Utica was one. Then Regulus (Attilius) besieged Tunis , but nine miles from Carthage , and took it; upon which the Namidians entered the territories of the Carthaginians , laid all the country waste, which soon brought a famine in Carthage , the metropolis of the whole country, which Attilius had now invested, and offering conditions of peace too hard for the senate to accept, they put their army under the command of Xantippus , a Lacedæmonian auxiliary, who engaging the Romans , routs them intirely, cuts off about 30,000, and takes Attilius prisoner, with whom he enters Carthage in triumph, who was treated with all the scorn, &c. that an enraged enemy could invent, and soon after Xantippus himself was forced to retire to Lacedæmon in disgrace privately.	IV	666
4057	2750	249	Manasses the Jewish high-priest dies, and is succeeded by Onias , the son of Simon the Just , who by his avaricious sordid way of behaving himself, had well nigh ruined the whole nation of the Jews .	IV	41
4057	2750	249	The Roman fleet under the consuls Fulvius and Æmilius engage the Carthaginian fleet off cape Hermea , or cape Mercury , and sunk 104 of their ships, took 30, and killed 15,000 men; then proceed to Clupea , where, as soon as landed, they are engaged by the two Hanno's , father and son, whom they defeat, and kill 9000 of their men, but for want of provisions are forced to quit Clupea and Utica , and instead of returning home, they go to the northern coast of Sicily , where the fleet is almost entirely destroyed by a prodigious storm, saving but 80 (and they much shattered) out of 370 sail, losing the crews, army, and riches of Africa which they had taken: This was the greatest loss that Rome had ever yet met with.	IV	666
4058	2751	248	The Romans , after recruiting their fleet and army, send their consuls and proconsuls into Sicily , where the city of Cephæledium , near the mouth of the Himera , was delivered to them by the inhabitants; then besieging Panormus , they reduced the inhabitants to such extremities, as to give 6 l. 9 s. 2 d. per head for their ransom; and those who could not do it, to the number of 30,000, were sold for slaves; but in their return to Rome , the transports that carried the money and spoils were taken by the Carthaginians .	IV	667
4059	2752	247	The Romans make descents upon the eastern coasts of Africa , where they surprize and plunder several towns and villages, and returning with great booty, were overtaken by a violent storm, and lost 160 galleys and a great number of transports; upon which the senate enact, that no more than 50 vessels should be equipped at a time for the future.	IV	667
4060	2753	246	Antiochus , king of Syria and Macedon , makes peace with Ptolemy Philadelphus king of Egypt , and contracts to put away his wife Laodicea , and marry Berenice , Ptolemy's daughter, and settle the crown upon her children.	III	525
4060	2753	246	The Romans take Himera in Sicily , and afterwards Lipara , by storm, and put most of the inhabitants to the sword.	IV	668
4060	2753	246	Tib. Cornucanius was this year made Pontifex Maximus , though a plebeian, who concurred with the consuls and the censors to punish the profane, irreligious, and disobedient; 13 senators were ignominiously struck off the list, and 400 knights degraded. By the census 297,797 men fit to bear arms were found in Rome .	IV	668
4062	2755	244	The Roman consul Metellus artfully draws Asdrubal the Carthaginian general into a disadvantageous piece of ground, near Panormus in Sicily , then sets upon him, kills 20,000 upon the spot, and many elephants, and takes several, which made his triumph at Rome very remarkably magnificent; but Asdrubal upon his return to Carthage is crucified for his misfortunes.	IV	669
4062	2755	244	Ptolemy Euergetes (or the Beneficent) succeeds his father Ptolemy Philadelphus in the kingdom of Egypt , who is supposed to have died of grief at the death of his beloved wife Arfinoe .	III	637
4062	2755	244	Ptolemy Euergetes king of Egypt takes Selaucia , a famous city 15 miles from Antioch , from the Syrians near the mouth of the Orontes , and puts a strong Egyptian garrison into it.	III	635
4062	2755	244	Conon the mathematician, to appease Ptolemy's wrath against the priests of the Zephyrian Venus , for losing the hair his queen Berenice cut off from her own head as a token of joy for his Syrian victory, points out to him seven stars, near the tail of the lion, declaring them to be Berenice's hair, and which still remain a constellation under that name.	III	639
4062	2755	244	Antiochus Theos , as soon as he heard Ptolemy Philadelphus was dead, removed his daughter Berenice from his bed, and recalled Laodicea and her children, Seleucus Callinicus and Antiochus Hierax . Laodicea first poisons her husband, and then gets her son Seleucus Callinicus proclaimed king of Syria ; she then endeavoured to murder Berenice and her son, who fled to Antioch , where she was besieged, taken, and murdered, with all the Egyptians that attended her, before her bro-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pag.
			(965)
			ther could come with his army to her relief: But the Asians joining the Egyptians , severely revenge the murder, by conquering most of the provinces, and carrying away 40,000 talents of silver, a prodigious quantity of gold and silver vessels, and 2500 statues, &c.	III	527
4063	2756	243	Demetrius , the son of Antigonus Gonatus , succeeds his father in the kingdom of Macedon , which he enjoyed 10 years, full of much trouble and many wars, &c.	III	474
4063	2756	243	The Carthaginians send the consul Regulus (their prisoner, having sworn him to return) to Rome , with other ambassadors, to treat of a peace; Regulus persuades the Romans to continue the war, for which the Carthaginians put him to death with extreme torments, and the Romans severely revenge his death upon the Carthaginian prisoners.	IV	669
4063	2756	243	Ptolemy king of Egypt , in his return from Syria comes through Jerusalem , and offers sacrifice to the God of Israel .	III	640
4063	2756	243	Agis and Cleombrotus , kings of Sparta , go where the Ephori were sitting, removed them from their seats, and puts others in their stead, and then proposed a cancelling of debts, and an equal distribution of lands; upon which the bonds and obligations for debt were brought in and burnt, &c.	II	627
4063	2756	243	The Carthaginians sally out of Lilybæum in Sicily , where the Romans had long besieged them, and burn all the Roman engines, and destroy all their works, &c. which disaster raised such high disputes in the Roman senate, that they come to blows, and one senator was killed for zealously persuading the rest to conclude a peace.	IV	672
4064	2757	242	The Roman consul Claudius Pulcher , upon hearing the sacred chickens refuse feeding, takes up the coop and throws it and them into the sea, saying, If they wont eat, let them drink ; and then engaging Adherbal , is defeated, with the loss of 90 vessels, 8000 men killed, and 20,000 taken prisoners, without the loss of one Carthaginian : Claudius escaping with 30 galleys, the senate order him to name a dictator; he names Claudius Glycias , (a very mean person, a viator or tipstaff of his own;) this highly affronts all, but Glycias laying down, M. Attilius Catalinus was chosen. The consul Junius Pullus goes with a great fleet towards Lybæum , but by a mighty storm the whole is intirely destroyed by being shipwreck'd.	IV	674
4064	2757	242	Aratus takes Acro-Corinth by surprize, and Megara , from the Macedonians , and unites them to the Achæans . Trezenæ , Epidaurus , and Megalopolis , by his persuasion, also join the league, and the Argives , &c.	II	643
4064	2757	242	The consul Junius takes Erix (a strong city situate on the declivity of the mountain Erix , the highest in Sicily except Ætna ;) To secure it he built a fort at the foot of the mountain, and put a garrison of 800 men in it; but Carthalo soon after took it by assault, and put the garrison to the sword, and killed Junius in the defence of it, &c.	IV	674
4465	2758	241	Carthalo , the Carthaginian general, being forced out of Italy , his mercenaries murmured for want of pay, for which he punishes some by transporting them to desolate islands, and others he sent to Carthage , where they were executed, &c. but this severity begat a general hatred, so that Carthalo was recalled, and Hamilcar (surnamed Borcas) sent into Italy in his stead, who first appeased the discontent in the army, and took an immense booty from the Lucrians and Bruftians , &c.	IV	675
4066	2759	240	Private persons in Rome build and fit out ships that make descents upon the African coasts, and do great mischiefs by ravaging the country, entering into the port of Hippo , firing the ships and houses, and bringing off great booty.	IV	675
4066	2759	240	The Romans and Carthaginians exchange prisoners, and the difference in number is made up by money to the Romans . The Roman citizens appear to be but 251,220 by this year's census.	IV	675
4067	2760	239	Leonidas is restored to his kingdom of Sparta again, and Cleombrotus sentenced to perpetual banishment; and Agis the other king is strangled by order of the Ephori , together with his mother and grandmother, and Leonidas reigned alone.	II	628
4068	2761	238	Leonidas dies, and is succeeded by his son Cleomenes III. in the whole kingdom of Sparta , who enjoyed it 16 years, when he was outed by Antigonus .	II	629
4068	2761	238	Cleomenes king of Sparta , having built a fortress in the territories of the Megalopolitans , occasioned the war called the Cleomenc war.	II	645
4068	2761	238	Claudia , a Roman lady, is forced to appear before the tribes, and fined 25,000 asses of brass, for speaking contemptibly of the Roman populace, with which a chappel was built on the hill Aventinus , dedicated to liberty.	IV	675
4068	2761	238	The Roman privateers gain a considerable victory over the Carthaginian fleet, and are afterwards dashed in pieces by a storm.	IV	676
4068	2761	238	Hamilcar takes the strong city and forts of Erix from the Romans by surprize, and puts all in arms to the sword, and sends the others prisoners to Drepanum .	VI	849
4069	2762	237	The Achæans under Aratus , and Spartans under Cleomenes engage, and the Achæans are defeated; but Aratus rallying part of his troops, goes to Mantineæ , and takes that important place belonging to Sparta ; but the two armies meet again, the Achæans are again terribly beaten under Lysicles .	II	645
4069	2762	237	The Gauls deliver a fort in Erix to the Romans , and are admitted into the Roman service, being the first time the republick took foreign forces into their pay.	IV	676
4070	2763	236	The Romans having chose C. Lutatius Catulus one of this year's consuls, the Pontifex Maximus would not let him exercise the office of a general, because he was high-priest of Mars , upon which a second prætor was chose, one to command in the army, and the other to distribute justice in the city.	IV	677
4070	2763	236	The Romans having by a voluntary contribution built 200 quinqueremes, hired the most skilful of all nations to help to man them; with this fleet the prætor Valerius Falto embarked for Sicily , where, in conjunction with the consul Lutatius ,

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol. Pg.
4070	2763	236	they besieged Drepanum ; but Lutatius being much wounded as he was entering a breach, was carried back to the camp, and the attack given over.	IV 677
4070	2763	236	The Romans attack the Carthaginian fleet, consisting of 400 sail, overcome and defeat it, take 73 ships and their crews, and sink 125, and disperse the rest, then advances to Erix , and cut off 2000 Carthaginians , and so put an end to the first punic war. The consul proposed a peace upon the following terms: 1st. That the Carthaginians should intirely evacuate Sicily : 2d. That they should pay 110 talents of silver yearly for 20 years: 3d. That they should restore all the Roman captives and deserters without ransom, and redeem their own with money: 4. That they should not make war upon Hiero king of Syracuse , or his allies. But the Roman senate would have two new articles added, viz. 1000 talents down, and 220 talents yearly for 10 years, and that the Carthaginians should quit all the little islands about Italy and Sicily , and never come near them with ships of war, or raise mercenaries there. Hamilcar was forced to comply, but went home with a settled hatred of the Romans . The peace was ratified by the solemn sacrifice of a sow, and the mutual oaths of both nations. In this war the Romans lost 700 ships, and the Carthaginians 500.	I 679
4070	2763	236	The disbanded mercenaries of the Carthaginian army revolt for want of their pay, and encamp before Tunis , invite all the city to accede to them, and throw off the Carthaginian yoke, by which means their number is increased to 72000. Guisco , their former general, coming to appease them, is seized and put in chains, and the military chest broke open and divided, the women of the several African cities, furnish Mathos and Spendius (the rebels generals) with all their toys and ornaments to make money, &c. besiege Utica and Hippacra , and treat every Carthaginian with great cruelty, &c. that falls into their hands. Hanno goes against them at Utica , engages and defeats them; but being negligent, they rally and fall unexpectedly upon him, take his camp, and all the provision brought for the relief of the city, &c. the like he was guilty of at Gaza , where he twice defeated the enemy, for which he is deposed, and Hamilcar put in his stead, who with only 10000 horse and foot, and 70 elephants, engages Mathos , defeats him, kills 8000 upon the spot, and takes 2000 prisoners: A while after, 2000 Numidians revolting to Hamilcar , he engages the rebels again, and after an obstinate battle intirely routs them, with the slaughter of 10,000 and 4000 prisoners, of whom Hamilcar took so many into his own army as were willing to enter, and the rest he set at liberty. Upon this the rebels put Guisco and 700 Carthaginians to death, &c. Utica and Hippacra join the rebels, and put the Carthaginian garrison to death, consisting of 500 men, and then the rebels went to Carthage , and besieged it: The Carthaginians recal Hanno , and send Hannibal in his stead, into their army under Hamilcar , who so harassed the rebels, that they were forced to raise the siege, and soon after Hamilcar surrounded them upon a mountain, and reduced them to eat one another, when a peace was concluded, that ten of the rebel ringleaders should be delivered to Hamilcar , and that the whole army should be disbanded, every man retiring with a single coat: This agreed to, Hamilcar seized the negotiators, &c. the army not knowing the agreement, fly to arms; Hamilcar surrounds them, and cuts 40,000 of them to pieces; after which scouring the country, most of the revolted cities return to their duty: But Mathos with the remains of the army got into Tunis , where Hannibal and Hamilcar besieged them, and crucified Spendius and the rest of the prisoners near the walls in open view: Mathos makes a sudden sally into Hannibal's quarter, routs them, kills many, and takes many prisoners, and among them Hannibal , whom, after having taken Spendius down from the cross, he put on it in his stead, and thirty Carthaginians round him, who all died in exquisite torture. Many skirmishes afterwards happened, in which the rebels generally were defeated; but at last coming to a general battle, most of them were killed upon the spot, and Mathos and his attendants pursued and taken alive. Upon this the rest of the revolted towns submitted, except Utica and Hippo , which Hamilcar soon reduced, and so put an end to this bloody and destructive war, called the Libian war, after it had lasted three years and a half. Mathos , first adorning the publick triumph, was afterwards put to most exquisite torments, and so died.	VI 864
4070	2763	236	The mercenaries in Sardinia revolt from the Carthaginians , seize upon Boslar , and the garrison in Olbia , and massacre them. Hanno goes against them, and is deserted by his men, who crucify him, and put all the Carthaginians they can get to death: But the inhabitants having drove them out, the Romans assist them, and replace them, forcing the Carthaginians to pay the expence, and a fine of 1200 talents.	VI 864
4070	2763	236	The Falisci having revolted from the Romans , the consuls go against them, and in six days have two pitch'd battles; in the first both sides were equal, but in the second the Romans entirely defeat the Falisci , kill 1500 on the spot, force them to lay down their arms, and surrender their capital, built on a mountain, which was razed, but they are allowed to build another in the plain; their arms, horses, and half their lands were confiscated; for which the consuls had a triumph at their return to Rome .	IV 679
4070	2763	236	The whole island of Sicily , except the kingdom of Syracuse , is declared a Roman province, and a prætor is sent annually to govern in civil causes, and a quaestor to receive the revenues.	IV 679
4070	2763	236	The Tyber at Rome suddenly overflowed with such violence, as to overturn a great many houses in the lower grounds; and the water stagnated so long in the forum, as to damage the foundations of the houses there; and then a fire broke out in the upper city, and spread to the forum, in both which disasters a prodigious number of people are supposed to have lost their lives; for by this year's census the inhabitants are said to be but 160,000 fit to bear arms.	IV 680

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vd.	Page
4071	2764	235	Livius and Andronicus reform the Roman stage, by introducing the Grecian manner of acting at Rome .	IV	680
4071	2764	235	Archidamus , brother to Agis late king of Sparta , is recalled; but upon his arrival at Sparta is murdered.	II	629
4071	2764	235	Cleomenes returns with part of his army to Sparta , seizes the Ephori at supper, kills four of them, proscribes 80 citizens of the greatest rank, then makes proclamation for an equal distribution of lands, &c. raises a great army, and disciplines them in a new method, then associates his brother Euclidas in the kingdom, and ordains that there shall be two kings for the future, as used to be theretofore; prohibited all luxury, both of furniture and living, in his own court, and throughout the kingdom, and reigned with the greatest oeconomy, justice, and affability.	II	630
4072	2765	234	Cleomenes king of Sparta being attacked by Aratus the Achaean general, marches into the territories of Achaia , and takes many cities from them, but treats the inhabitants with great mildness, &c.	II	631
4072	2765	234	Ennius the poet born at Rudes , a city in Calabria near Tarentum , the inventor of hexameter verse among the Latins , though himself a Greek ; the life of Scipio Africanus was his master-piece; he also wrote the history of Rome in 18 books in verse.	IV	680
4072	2765	234	Hamilcar the Carthaginian general swears his son Hannibal , a boy of but nine years old, by laying his hand upon the altar, that he would be an eternal enemy to Rome .	VI	685
4073	2766	233	The Italic Gauls , called the Boii , join the Falisci , and defeat the consul Q. Valerius Falto , and kill and take 3500 of his men; but Valerius falls upon the enemy again, and killed 14,000, and took 2000 prisoners; and Sempronius the other consul gained a victory over the Ligurians : Then Sempronius goes into Sardinia , obliges the Carthaginians to resign that island, pay the expence of this expedition, and a fine of 1200 talents.	IV	682
4073	2766	233	Antigonus , surnamed Dofon , brother of Demetrius late king of Macedon , being appointed tutor and guardian to Philip the son of Antigonus , now but two years old, so ingratiates himself with the people and the widow, whom he married, that he is soon after saluted by the name of king, in which character he performed many extraordinary actions, as appears by his life.	III	477
4074	2767	232	The consul Cornelius engages the Ligurians , kills 24,000 of them, and takes 5000 prisoners, for which he is honoured with a triumph upon his return to Rome .	IV	682
4075	2768	231	The Boii make a truce with the Romans , and engage their countrymen the Transalpine Gauls , who came in great numbers to join them, kills their two generals or kings, Alys and Galatius , and a vast number of men, and put the rest to flight, for fear they should dispossess them of their Italian habitations; upon which Lentulus the Roman consul subdues both the Boii and Ligurians , &c.	IV	681
4075	2768	231	The Corficans being instigated by the Carthaginians revolt, and Claudius Glycias being sent with a Roman squadron, makes a peace; but the consul Lentulus refuses to confirm it, and reduces the island by force of arms: Claudius is delivered to the Corficans , who send him to Rome , where he is put to death, and then dragged by an iron hook from the Scala Gemonia , and then thrown into the Tiber .	IV	682
4075	2768	231	Arfaces having established himself king of Parthia , engages, overthrows, and takes Seleucus king of Syria his master prisoner. The day of this victory was annually observed by the Parthians for many ages afterwards with great solemnity.	III	529
4076	2769	230	T. Manlius Torquatus the Roman consul recovered Sardinia that had revolted, and made it tributary. Rome being now universally at peace, the temple of Janus was shut.	IV	683
4077	2770	229	The Sardinians , Corficans , and Ligurians league together, and revolt from Rome . The consul Corvilius first reduces the Corficans , and then defeats and subdues the Sardinians , &c. The censors finding the number of Rome's inhabitants decrease, obliged all the citizens to swear they would marry only with a view of getting children: This occasioned Corvilius Ruga , a man of distinction to divorce his wife, whom he passionately loved, upon account of her being barren, and marry another: This is the first instance of a divorce since the foundation of Rome ; which introduced marriage contracts, to secure the womens portions in case of a divorce, &c. This year the poet Nævius introduced the first regular comedy after the Greek manner on the Latin stage.	IV	683
4077	2770	229	Hamilcar the Carthaginian general goes with an army into Spain , and fixes his head-quarters at Gades , (now Cadiz) where he continued nine years, and gained great advantages, and took abundance of spoil, which he divided among his troops and the great men at Carthage ; but at last was slain in battle, with abundance of his men; upon which Asdrubal his son-in-law is chose general in his stead.	VI	867
4077	2770	229	Seleucus Callinicus , fits up a mighty fleet, and goes to recover what Ptolemy had taken from him in Syria ; but a violent storm destroys almost all of it, himself and few more escaping with great difficulty; however, the Syrians pitying him, many of them voluntarily submit: He raises a great army, and engages Ptolemy , but is intirely defeated, and flies to Antioch , where promising his brother Antiochus the Lesser Asia , he prepares an army to assist him, upon which Ptolemy makes a truce for ten years.	III	528
4078	2771	228	The consul Fabius drove the revolted Ligurians out of the plain country, and forced them to shelter themselves among the Alps ; and Pomponius the other consul gaining considerable advantages over the Sardinians , is honoured with a triumph.	IV	684
4078	2771	228	A new tribunal of justice established among the Romans , called the Centum Viri , though their true number was 105, who were divided into four courts of chambers, under whose cognizance came proscriptions, guardianships, last-wills, in-

heritances,

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			heritances, &c. In future times these courts consisted of 130 persons, but still bore the name of Centum Viri .
4079	2772	227	Seleucus king of Syria , having been prisoner in Parthia four years, dies by a fall from his horse, as he was riding to take the air.	IV	684
4079	2772	227	Seleucus (surnamed Ceraunus , or the thunderer) succeeds his father in the kingdom of Syria , who after a disagreeable reign of three years was poisoned.	III	529
4080	2773	226	The consuls M. Pomponius Matro and C. Papirius Maf finished the conquest of Sardinia and Corfica , and reduced them to a Roman province. Papirius being refused a triumph, marched at the head of his victorious army, crowned with myrtle instead of laurel, to the temple of Jupiter Latialis , on the hill of Alba , in a triumphant manner, which method was afterwards followed by many others.	III	530
4081	2774	225	Teuta , queen of Illyricum , having commissioned her subjects to pirate upon all ships that came upon her coasts, the Romans send ambassadors to her to demand satisfaction for themselves and allies; the queen answers haughtily, they reply, and she orders them to be put to death; which being done, the Romans order a fleet and army to go and revenge the affront: upon which the queen submits, denies the fact, and offers to deliver up the murderers; but in the mean time her fleet having got an advantage over the Albani , and taken Corfica , &c. she forgets to perform her promise.	IV	685
4082	2775	224	The Romans equip a fleet of 100 galleys, and raise an army of 20,000 foot, besides a body of horse, and send them under the command of the consuls Cn. Fulvius Centumalus , and P. Posthumius Albinus : Upon Fulvius 's coming with his fleet to Corcyra , Demetrius of Pharos , governor for queen Teuta , puts the city and island into his hands, and persuades the inhabitants of Appollonia to drive out the Illyrian garrison, and submit to the Romans . Upon this Posthumius penetrates into the heart of the queen's dominions, while the fleet cruised along the coast, and the Andyæans , Parthini , and Atintanes submit to the Romans ; after which Posthumius took Nutria , a place of great strength, though with great loss, and 40 Illyrian vessels laden with booty in their return home.	IV	686
4082	2775	224	Upon the death of Seleucus king of Syria , the army and several provinces offer the crown of Syria to Achæus , but he generously refused it for Antiochus , the brother of Seleucus , a youth of 15 years of age, who, for his illustrious actions, was surnamed the Great.	III	530
4083	2776	223	Molo and Alexander (two brothers, governors of Media and Persia) revolt, and set up for themselves. They first defeat Zeno and Theodotus , Antiochus 's generals, and afterwards in a second engagement cut off Xenæus and his whole army, and thereby acquired the province of Babylonia and all Meopotamia without opposition.	III	531
4083	2776	223	Epigenes , general of Antiochus , is treacherously accused, and falsely put to death, by Hermias the king's prime minister.	III	532
4083	2776	223	Queen Teuta sues for peace, but the Romans refuse to treat with her; but make peace with the young king upon severe terms. She lays down the regency, and Demetrius succeeds her in it.	IV	686
4083	2776	223	Rome growing jealous of her rival Carthage , upon account of her great acquisitions in Spain by Asdrubal their general, and his building the famous city of Carthage , to secure his conquests they agree, that Carthage should not extend her conquests beyond the river Iberus , and that Saguntum (a colony of Zacynthian) should remain free.	VI	686
4083	2776	223	Cleomenes king of Sparta invades Achæa , takes Pellene by surprize, then masters Phænæon and Penteleon , and Argos , and by this means raises Sparta to greater power than it ever had.	II	631
4084	2777	222	Cleomenes king of Sparta engages Antigonus king of Macedon , &c. at Sellasia , where, through the superiority of the enemies troops and the treachery of Damoteles , he is defeated, with a vast slaughter of his mercenaries, and almost all his own troops, having but 200 left out of 6000; after which he retired to Egypt , where Ptolomy Evergetes entertained him kindly: In him ended the Herculean race of Spartan kings, and Sparta fell under the government of Antigonus .	II	632
4084	2777	222	Antiochus king of Syria goes against the rebel Molo , governor of Media , overcomes his army, and pursues him: Molo for fear of falling into the king's hands kills himself, as does also several of his attendants: Neolaus , or Nicholas his brother, escaping, fled to his other brother Alexander , the rebel governor of Persia , who upon hearing of the defeat, &c. of his brother Molo , they first killed their mother, afterwards their wives and children, and then dispatched themselves. The rebel provinces returned to their duty, and the king was established in his authority.	III	534
4085	2778	221	Two Greeks , a man and a woman, and two Gauls , a man and a woman, are buried alive at the Ox-market in Rome , by command of the consuls, to appease the superstition of the commonalty.	IV	687
4085	2778	221	Asdrubal , the famous Carthaginian general, after having done his country the greatest services for eight years successively with extraordinary success, was publicly murdered by a Gaul , whose master he had put to death; and Hannibal succeeded him as general of the Carthaginian army in Spain , with universal applause.	VI	686
4085	2778	221	Antigonus king of Macedon having engaged the Illyrians , &c. who had in his absence invaded Macedon , behaved with so much wisdom and valour as gained him a complete victory; but overstraining himself in the fight, died soon after of a spitting of blood.	III	477
4085	2778	221	Philip , son of Antigonus , succeeds his uncle in the kingdom of Macedon , where he reigned more than 30 years; but behaving disagreeably at last fell into the hatred of his people, and a slave to Rome , who obliged him to send his son Deme-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pag.
			(969)
4086	2779	220	trius a hostage, to deliver up his ships of war, pay 1000 talents, and suffer many provinces to be clipped from his kingdom.	III	478
4086	2779	220	Hannibal conquers the Olcades , a people near the Iberus , and taking Althæa their capital, the rest submit: Hannibal divides the spoil among his soldiers, and pays them all their arrears, which fixed him immoveably in their affections.	VI	869
4086	2779	220	The Romans having raised an army of 274,000 Romans , and 526,000 auxiliaries, the consul Atilius Regulus was sent with a part of it into Sardinia ; and the other consul L. Æmilius Papus against the Gauls , who invaded the Roman territories with an army of 200,000 men, commanded by the two kings Concolitanus and Aneroestus , who harassed the country terribly in their passage, and took great spoil; and then engaging an army commanded by a Roman prætor, killed 6000 of his men, and obliged the rest to fly in confusion to a neighbouring hill, which the Gauls invested, and reduce them to great straits. The consul Atilius engaging the enemy, was killed, and his head was carried through the enemies files stuck upon a lance; but at last the Gauls were defeated, with the slaughter of 40,000, and 10,000 taken prisoners, among whom was Concolitanus : Aneroestus escaped to a neighbouring village, where he killed himself, and most of his officers did the same: Then Æmilius plundered the country of the Baii , and when his soldiers were loaded with plunder, he marched to Rome , where his triumph was as pompous as his victory was great.	IV	688
4086	2779	220	Achæus being falsely accused of entertaining treacherous designs against king Antiochus , after he had taken from Attalus king of Pergamus what he had wrested from Syria , in his own defence proclaims himself king of Asia , &c. where he was governor.	III	535
4086	2779	220	Antiochus besieges and takes Seleucia from Ptolemy king of Egypt , restores the inhabitants to their antient privileges, and uses them with great humanity.	III	536
4087	2780	219	Theodotus , general for Ptolemy , having been ill used, out of revenge delivers up the cities of Tyre and Ptolemais , the magazines, and 40 sail of ships to Antiochus .	III	536
4087	2780	219	Cleomenes king of Sparta is shut up in prison at Alexandria , and failing in an attempt to get his liberty, &c. himself and friends kill one another; upon which Ptolemy ordered his body to be fixed, and hung up on a cross, and sentences his mother Cratiselea , his children, &c. to death.	III	644
4087	2780	219	The Spartans revolt from the Macedonians ; but upon the arrival of an army under Philip the son of Antigonus , they submit.	II	634
4087	2780	219	The Roman consuls are hindered from passing the Po , and following the Gauls into their own country, by a great plague that raged in Rome and in the army.	IV	688
4087	2780	219	Hannibal besieges and takes Salmantica , and after a very resolute defence Arbucala : The Olcades and Carpetani , to the number of 10,000, endeavour to fall upon him; but he crossing the Tagus in the night, they pursue him irregularly, and are most of them destroyed in the water, &c. Then Hannibal lays the country of the Carpetani waste, upon which they all submit.	VI	870
4087	2780	219	The Carthaginians besiege Saguntum , with 150,000 foot and 20,000 horse, which the inhabitants defend with incredible bravery, by frequent sallies, and drive the Carthaginians away with prodigious slaughter, when they attempted the place by storm; but a small time after they take the city by storm, and put most of the inhabitants to the sword, &c.	VII	5
4088	2781	218	The Ephori murdered by the Spartans , who choose Agefipolis and Lycurgus to be their kings: Lycurgus drove out Agefipolis ; Chilo conspires against him, murders the Ephori , and forces Lycurgus to fly; but Chilo not being beloved, was obliged to retire to Macedon , and Lycurgus returned and reigned many years.	II	635
4088	2781	218	Antiochus defeats Nicholaus the Egyptian general, takes many cities, and some provinces, and then winters in Ptolemais with his army.	III	538
4089	2782	217	Theodotus the Ætolian going in the night into Ptolemy's camp, went to his tent and killed his physician, thinking it was the king, but Ptolemy that night lay elsewhere, and so escaped.	III	533
4089	2782	217	Antiochus and Ptolemy come to engagement, wherein Antiochus is defeated, with the loss of 10,000 killed and 4000 taken prisoners; upon which he is forced to withdraw to Antioch , and quit all his conquests.	III	538
4089	2782	217	Ptolemy being addressed and congratulated by all the cities of Celæ-Syria , that through force had submitted to Antiochus , goes a progress through them, restoring all to their former privileges, comes to Jerusalem , offers sacrifice to the God of Israel , and bestows great gifts upon the temple, but attempts to enter the holy of holies, and is struck with a sort of madness and terror, upon which he repents it highly, and uses the Jerus ill, &c.	III	539
4089	2782	217	The Romans deny peace to the Insulres , cross the Po , and besiege Acerræ , whereupon the Gauls cross the Po , and with an army of 90,000 men invest Calistidium ; upon which Marcellus the consul comes with a detachment to relieve the place; they offer to attack him; both armies are ready, when Viridomarus , the Gaulish king, challenges Marcellus to a single combat, which he accepts, and kills him, and afterwards routs the whole army. While this was doing, Scipio the other consul took Accerræ , Mediolanum , &c. and so all Italy from the Alps to the Ionian sea became Roman provinces. Marcellus is decreed an extraordinary triumph at his return to Rome , and carries the rich armour and spoils of Viridomarus , and dedicated the 3d and last Opimia Spolia to Jupiter Feretrius ; a gold cup was sent to Apollo at Delfos , and great presents to Hiero king of Syracuse .	IV	650
4089	2782	217	The Romans having crossed the Po , engage the Gauls , kill 9000, and take 17000 prisoners, and thereby obtain a compleat victory.	IV	689
4089	2782	217	Ptolomy Philopater succeeds his father Euergetes in the kingdom of Egypt , murders his brother Magos , and then gives himself up to all manner of vicious living, &c.	III	642

			(1970)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4089	2782	217	Antiochus king of Syria besieges and carries by assault the city of Silecia , (then held by the Egyptians) treats the inhabitants with the utmost humanity, and restored them to their ancient privileges.	III	536
4090	2783	216	Antiochus cedes Cele-Syria to Ptolemy , and concludes a peace with him.	III	535
4090	2783	216	The Istrians having taken some Roman ships, the consuls M. Minutius Rufus and P. Cornelius Scipio Asina go against them, and reduce all Istria , but with the loss of much blood on both sides.	IV	690
4091	2784	215	A census being taken at Rome , the number of Roman citizens fit to bear arms are found to be 272,213.	IV	691
4091	2784	215	Demetrius of Pharos , whom the Romans had appointed governor of Illyricum , acts against their orders, and sets up for himself, persuading the Antiantes also to revolt, and also sent 50 ships of war to pillage the Cyclades . The Romans send an army against him, who take Dimalum , a city he imagined impregnable, in seven days: They then go to Pharos with a large fleet, which they take, plunder, and raze, and Demetrius escapes to Macedon . The consuls at their return to Rome are accused of keeping the spoil for their own use, &c. L. Æmilius Paulus is acquitted; but M. Livius Salinator is condemned; upon which he retires to his country house, and lives private.	IV	691
4091	2784	215	This year the art of surgery was introduced into Rome , by one Archagathus a Pe- loponnesian .	IV	691
4092	2785	214	The second punic or Carthaginian war breaks out. The Roman and Syracusan fleet engage the Carthaginian fleet, and defeat them; take seven ships, kill abundance of men, and take 1700 prisoners, with a very small loss.	IV	693
4092	2785	214	Hannibal marching from Spain to Italy , went about 1000 English miles in five months and a half, and lost by sickness, desertion, fatigue, and various engagements 30,000 foot, and 3000 horse, having upon a review in the fruitful plains of Insubria no more than 26,000 effective men. The Taurini refusing to conclude a treaty with him, he enters their territories, and takes their capital by storm, and put all to the sword that made any resistance; upon which all the Gauls surrender at discretion. Soon after Hannibal and Scipio engage, and after a very stubborn fight the Romans are routed, the consul being wounded, and the greatest part of the army cut off; the rest fly precipitately. Upon this the Gauls join Hannibal , recruit his army, and give him all manner of necessities.	IV	694
4092	2785	214	The Romans and Carthaginians engage on the banks of the Trebia , where the Romans are beaten with great slaughter, &c. A small time after Hannibal takes a small city of Insubria , called Vicumvicia , and commits most monstrous cruelties upon the garrison and inhabitants.	IV	702
4092	2785	214	Hannibal marches his army through marshy ground, where for the space of four days and nights they were in mud and water up to the thighs, during which time many of his men and most of his horses die with cold, and himself loses one of his eyes, but at last gets into Hetruria .	IV	703
4092	2785	214	Cneius Scipio , brother to the consul P. Cornelius Scipio , goes into Spain with an army of Romans , &c. and reduces all the country from the Pyrenees to the Iberus , then engages and entirely routs the Carthaginians under the command of Hanno , whom he takes prisoner, together with Indibilis , a Spanish prince intirely devoted to the Carthaginians ; their camp was forced, 6000 slain, and 2000 taken prisoners; all the heavy baggage was taken, and many of the Spanish nations conclude an offensive and defensive alliance with Scipio .	VII	20
4092	2785	214	Achaus , after having sustained the siege of Antiochus and Attalus king of Pergamus above a year in Sardis , was betrayed into the hands of Antiochus , by the treachery of two Cretans . Achaus is put to death, and all Asia submits to Antiochus .	III	541
4092	2785	214	Antiochus drives Arfaces out of Media , which he had taken from Antiochus while he was employed in Egypt .	III	541
4092	2785	214	Philip king of Macedon forces the Ætolians to make peace upon very disadvantageous terms.	II	707
4093	2786	213	Antiochus gains great advantages over Arfaces in Parthia and Hyrkania , but at last peace is made between them, upon condition that Arfaces shall assist Antiochus in reducing all the revolted provinces, except Parthia and Hyrkania .	III	542
4093	2786	213	The Romans under the rash conduct of the consul Flaminius are drawn into an ambush, where 15,000 are killed, and Flaminius himself, and 6000 taken prisoners; and of those that escaped most of them died of their wounds.	IV	705
4093	2786	213	Hannibal sends Adherbal after 6000 Romans that had escaped from the late defeat, who surrender upon condition of giving them their lives and liberty; but Hannibal orders all the Romans to be put in chains, and sets the auxiliaries at liberty, declaring he fought only against Rome . The consul Servilius having sent a detachment of 4000 Romans to reinforce his colleague, they come too late, and 2000 are killed and the rest surrender.	IV	708
4093	2786	213	The Romans raise Fabius Maximus (surnamed Verrucosus) to the power of dictator, but call him pro-dictator, as not being chose in the ordinary way; and also named Minucius Rufus for his general of the horse. Fabius consulting the Sybilline books, is told the present calamities are for the non-performance of a vow of Aulus Cornelius to Mars , to sacrifice all the pigs, lambs, kids, and calves that should be brought forth in one spring, viz. from 1st March to 1st May , called Ver Sacrum : This vow being renewed, and others made, he goes to head the army Servilius had commanded, to which he added two new legions, and appoints the city of Tybur for the rendezvous, from whence he sent orders to the country people to burn their houses, &c. He only watched and followed Hannibal , harassed his rear, and took all advantages. The senate call him home, and make his general of the horse his equal, who venturing upon a battle, is defeated and surrounded by Hannibal ; Fabius saves him from being cut to pieces, and drives away the enemy with great slaughter.	IV	708

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
(971)
4093	2786	213	The Illyretes in Spain , notwithstanding they had given Scipio hostages for their fidelity, declare for the Carthaginians . Scipio invests their capital city Athabagia , and takes it, pardons the people, and takes fresh hostages, after exacting a good sum of money from them. While this was doing he cut off 12000 Aufeni ans, who came to their assistance : Soon after the Roman and Carthaginian fleets engage ; the Romans force the Carthaginians in the mouth of the Iberus , killed abundance of seamen and marines, and carried off 35 gallees.	VII	27
4093	2786	213	After the naval defeat, Scipio advancing to Himpha took it by storm, and razed it ; then makes a descent into Africa , ravages all about Carthage , burning houses up to the walls and haven, and returned loaded with spoil ; then lands in the island Ebusus , now Yvica , plundered it, and burnt some streets in the capital city ; upon this 120 different cantons of the Spaniards submit to Rome , who afterwards overthrew Asdrubal twice, kill him 15,000 men, and take 4000 prisoners, and three fortresses by assault.	VII	27
4093	2786	213	Philip king of Macedon besieges and takes Thebes , or Phthiotis , and after having plundered the town, and sold the inhabitants, repopled it with a colony of Macedonians , changing its name into Philippolis .	II	662
4094	2787	212	Hannibal having fixed a price upon his prisoners, which the Romans refusing to pay, part he sent to Carthage , and the remainder he made gladiators of, forcing even relations to fight together for the diversion of his army. Capua surrenders to Hannibal ; they kill the Roman garrison, &c.	IV	714
4094	2787	212	Hannibal sends his brother Mago to acquaint the senate at Carthage , that in six pitched battles he had killed 200,000 Romans , and taken 50,000 prisoners ; and that Apulia , Brutii , Lucania , and Campania had submitted to Carthage , and presented them with three bushels of rings taken from the Roman knights.	IV	715
4094	2787	212	The two Scipio's in Spain engage and entirely defeat Asdrubal , and thereby prevent the Carthaginians in Spain joining Hannibal in Italy .	IV	715
4094	2787	212	The dictator Marcellus falls out upon Hannibal , now besieging Nola , and cuts off 5000 of his men, and drives all away in confusion.	IV	716
4094	2787	212	Hannibal after a long siege takes Casilinum , and obliges each freeman to pay seven ounces of gold for his redemption, and then takes Petilia , after an obstinate defence.	IV	717
4094	2787	212	M. Fabius Buteo is made dictator at Rome , to name new senators to supply the place of those killed, &c. and names 177 to the people's satisfaction, and then lays down his dictatorship.	IV	718
4094	2787	212	The Romans and Carthaginians engage at Cannæ , a small city in Apulia on the banks of the Aufidus ; the Romans are entirely routed, and the consul Emilius , the two proconsuls Servilius and Attilius , two military quæstors, 29 legionary tribunes, 80 senators, and 45 soldiers are killed, and about 34,000 escaped in the night to Canussum . Hannibal is said to lose but 4000 Gauls , 1500 Africans and Spaniards , and 2000 horse.	IV	711
4094	2787	212	Aratus the Achæan prætor is poisoned by order of Philip king of Macedon .	II	665
4094	2787	212	Ptolemy Philopater , king of Egypt , reverses the former decrees that gave great privileges to the Jews at Alexandria , and uses them cruelly, putting many to death, and exposing a great number of them to be destroyed by 500 elephants, from which they are miraculously preserved, which so affected Ptolemy , that he ordered all in chains and prison to be released, and restored them to all their former privileges, and reversed all his severe decrees.	III	685
4095	2788	211	The consul Posthumius Albinus and all his army are cut off by the Boii , in a vast forest through which he was obliged to pass.	IV	718
4095	2788	211	The consul Sempronius engages the revolted Campanians , kills their general Alfus with 2000 soldiers, and puts the rest to flight, and then retires to Cuma , where Hannibal besieges him, but after losing 1300 men, is forced to raise the siege. The other consul Marcellus engages Hannibal , kills him 5000 men, takes 600 prisoners, 19 standards, and two elephants : Upon this 1270 horse revolt from Hannibal to Marcellus .	IV	719
4095	2788	211	The Roman prætor Manlius Torquatus defeats the Sardinians , who had revolted, and a Carthaginian army under Asdrubal , killed 12,000, took Asdrubal , Hanno and Mago , his chief officers, prisoners, with many soldiers.	IV	720
4095	2788	211	The Romans and Ætolians sign a peace, which was concluded two years before.	II	703
4095	2788	211	Philip king of Macedon twice defeats the Ætolians , under the command of Pyrrhus in conjunction with Attalus king of Pergamas .	II	666
4096	2789	210	Sempronius with an army of Volones (or slaves) engages Hanno the Carthaginian , overthrows him, and out of 182,00 horse and foot, only 2200 escaped ; and Marcellus defeated Hannibal , killing him 2000 men with the loss of only 400 Romans . Then Marcellus besieges and takes Casilinum , and puts all to the sword that made any resistance : Then Fabius lays waste great part of Campania , and killed and took 25,000 men.	IV	722
4096	2789	210	Hiero king of Syracuse by will bequeaths the kingdom to his grandson Hieronymus , who being but 15 years old, he appointed him 15 guardians ; and now, being 90 years old, he dies in the 54th year of his reign, exceedingly bewailed and beloved by all his subjects, who honoured him with a pompous funeral.	III	100
4096	2789	210	Hieronymus king of Syracuse becomes vain, debauched, cruel, and exceedingly vicious, joins the Carthaginians , and breaks from the Romans : His subjects hate him, conspire against and kill him in the street, where they leave his mangled carcass to rot ; and soon after all the royal race were also dispatched.	III	106
4096	2789	210	Marcellus the Roman consul goes against the revolted Leontines , and takes the city by assault, and puts 2000 Roman deserters to death, but restores the inhabitants both their goods and their liberty.	III	109

			(972)		Vol. Pgt.
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ
4096	2789	210	Hippocrates and Epycides (two Carthaginian generals) ingratiate themselves into the Syracusan mercenaries, get into Syracuse , put the senators to the sword, and reign arbitrarily.	III	111
4096	2789	210	Marcellus the Roman consul besieges Syracuse (a city in Sicily 22 miles in circumference) which is defended by the engines contrived by the famous mathematician Archimedes 3 years, against the whole art, courage, and industry of Rome , with such destructive methods and engines as were never heard of before.	III	112
4096	2789	210	Hamilo coming from Carthage into Syracuse , with 20,000 foot and 3000 horse, and 12 elephants, takes many cities that had submitted to Marcellus . Hippocras breaks out of Syracuse with 10,000 foot and 1500 horse to join Hamilo ; Marcellus meets, engages, and kills 8000 of them, and then returns to the siege of Syracuse .	III	114
4097	2790	209	The consuls having laid the country round Capua waste, Hanno goes to their relief, and is intirely routed by the Romans under Fulvius , who killed him 6000 men, and took 7000 prisoners, with an exceeding great booty of corn, forage, waggons, horses, Hanno's baggage, &c. Hanno himself escaping to Brutium , attended only with a small body of horse.	IV	724
4097	2790	209	The proconsul Sempronius is deceived by one Fulvius a Capuan , surrounded and killed, with most of his men. Hannibal pays his corps all the military honours due to a great commander.	IV	724
4097	2790	209	The Romans in Spain having hired 30,000 Celtiberians into their service, Asdrubal the Carthaginian bribes them, and they desert. Scipio is engaged by a conjunct army of Numidians , Carthaginians , and Spaniards , is killed, and his army almost cut to pieces: Soon after his brother Cneius was likewise killed, and most of his men; those who escaped retired under T. Fonteius into a neighbouring tower, where they all perished by fire.	IV	726
4097	2790	209	Marcus , a young Roman nobleman, collected the scattered troops of the Romans in Spain together, &c. and being attacked by Asdrubal , repulsed him, and the next night set Asdrubal's camp on fire, and killed him 37,000 men, and took 1850 prisoners.	IV	727
4097	2790	209	Hannibal takes Metapontum , and the inhabitants put all the Romans to the sword; Heraclea did the same, and submitted to the Carthaginians ; and Tburium treacherously shut the gates, and denied the Romans entrance at their retreat from a sally, whereby they were all cut to pieces by Hanno , except Atinus the commandant, and a few with him.	VII	54
4098	2791	208	The Romans now at war with the Carthaginians , send ambassadors to Egypt to desire a renewal of their old alliance of friendship, with great presents.	III	646
4098	2791	208	As the Romans were irregularly straggling about Capua , and ravaging the country, Mago overtakes them, and kills 1500 of them, and recovers all the booty, takes many prisoners, and disperses the rest. Soon after Hannibal meets with M. Centenius Penula with 16,000 men, and cuts off Centenius and 15,000 of his men: Quickly after Hannibal engages Cn. Fulvius the prætor with 18,000 men, cut off 16,000, so that only the prætor and 2000 escaped.	VII	55
4098	2791	208	The Romans and Ætolians join, and lay waste all the fertile country between Sicyon and Corinth ; but upon Philip king of Macedon's coming against them, they retire with great precipitation.	II	706
4098	2791	208	Hannibal attempts the relief of Capua , and the garrison sallies out at the same time; but both are defeated, Hannibal having 8000 men killed, and the Capuans 3000; 15 colours taken from the first, and 18 from the last.	IV	727
4098	2791	208	Hannibal marches up to the gates of Rome , but durst not attempt to storm it, or run the hazard of a battle, but suddenly marches back to Capua , and fell upon Appius's camp, and kills a great many of his men, and then marches off: Soon after Capua submitted, the Carthaginian garrison were made prisoners of war, but the senators were tried by the proconsuls, out of whom 25 were sent to Calo , and 28 to Teanum , to be confined till their fate should be determined; but Fulvius went and put them all to death. Rome kept the fruitful plains as its own property, and transplanted freed-men thither to manure the land, and annually sent a præfect for their governor.	IV	729
4098	2791	208	Philip king of Macedon and the Achæans besiege Elis , into which the Romans had flung 4000 men under Sulpitius : A bloody conflict happens, Philip is unhorsed and near being taken, but escapes, and after much bloodshed is obliged to retire, but next day takes a strong hold of the Eleans , with 20,000 head of cattle and 4000 Eleans , whom he sold for slaves.	II	667
4099	2792	207	Scipio , the son of the deceased proconsul, besieges and takes New Carthage , where he kills abundance of Carthaginians , &c. and takes 10,000 freemen and a prodigious number of women, children, and slaves prisoners; 120 great and 281 lesser Catapultas's , 23 large and 52 smaller Balistæ , 74 ensigns, an immense quantity of gold and silver both in money and plate, &c.	VII	60
4099	2792	207	The plague rages extravagantly in and about Syracuse , of which Hamiltar , Hippocrates , and almost all the Carthaginian army die. The senate sends Bomilcar with 130 galleys, 7000 transports, and a large army into Sicily , against Marcellus , who goes with the Roman fleet against him, upon which Bomilcar runs home, and Syracuse submits to Marcellus , after a siege of three years.
4099	2792	207	Marcellus takes Salapia in Apulia , and cuts off all the Carthaginian garrison but 50 who surrender themselves: Then he goes into Samnium , takes upwards of 3000 Carthaginians prisoners, and reduces abundance of towns to the obedience of Rome .	IV	730
4099	2792	207	The Tarentine fleet intirely defeat a Roman squadron of ships that were coming to supply the citadel with provisions; and Hannibal surprizes and kills the proconsul Fulvius Centumalus , and cuts off 11 legionary tribunes, with 13,000 men, upon which Marcellus comes up and gives him battle; but the loss on both sides was nearly equal, and the night obliged them to part.	IV	730

After

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(973)	Vol.	Page
4099	2792	207	After the taking Syracuse , Marcellus engages Epicyles and Hanno , who puts them to flight at the first onset, and pursues them to Agrigentum , killing many thousands, and takes eight elephants, and then goes to Rome .	III	125
4099	2792	207	Sulpitius the Roman general, and Attalus king of Pergamus first sail to Lemnos , and then go to Orcum , a chief city in Eubœa , which Plator the Macedonian commander treacherously delivers up to them.	II	667
4099	2792	207	Attalus king of Pergamus besieges and takes the city of Opus in Achaia ; Philip king of Macedon presently after comes to its relief, upon whose approach Attalus quits it, and retires with precipitation to his ships.	II	667
4100	2793	206	Marcellus being chose consul at Rome , gets the Syracusans an edict of the senate to reinstate them in their antient laws and liberties; in return for which the Syracusan senate make a decree, that whenever Marcellus or any of his posterity should come to Sicily , the people should walk before him crowned with garlands, and celebrate the day with sacrifices.	III	126
4100	2793	206	The consul Levinus , with an army of Romans coming into Sicily , is invited by Mutines to Agrigentum , whither Hanno , Epicyles , and the Carthaginians were retired, takes it, and puts all the Carthaginians to the sword; the chiefs of the Agri- gentines he first beat with rods, and then beheaded, and the common people were made slaves and sold; and all Sicily was reduced to the subjection of Rome , and became one of its provinces.	III	127
4101	2794	205	Levinus being ordered to name a dictator refuses it; upon which the tribunes of the people take upon them that office, and named Fulvius Flaccus the proconsul. Laelius arriving at Rome from Spain , with Mago , the senators of New Carthage , and the rich booty taken there, Scipio is continued proconsul, not as usual for one year, but till an order should be made for recalling him.	IV	732
4101	2794	205	Hannibal engages Marcellus , and routs him, and kills 2700 of his men on the spot, four centurions, two military tribunes, and takes six standards. The next day they engage again, when Hannibal is defeated, with the loss of 8000 of his best troops; but Marcellus having 3000 of his legionaries killed, and almost all wounded, could not pursue him. Fulvius recovers Lucania , Hirpinia , and great part of Brutium , without loss of blood.	IV	733
4101	2794	205	Fabius takes Tarentum , out of which the quæstors are said to have received for the publick treasury 87,000 l. of gold, and 3000 talents of silver; 30,000 inhabitants that escaped the massacre were sold for slaves, &c.	IV	733
4101	2794	205	Scipio engages Asdrubal , kills him 8000 men, and takes 10,000 foot and 2000 horse, gives the Carthaginian camp to the Roman soldiers to plunder, released all the Spanish prisoners without ransom, but sells the Carthaginians for slaves.	VII	63
4102	2795	204	Marcellus (now a fifth time consul) projects the taking Locri , a strong city in the interest of Hannibal : The troops encamped before Tarentum go to besiege it; Hannibal falls upon them, kills 2000, and takes 1200 prisoners. Soon after Marcellus falls into an ambush, as he was viewing an eminence with his colleague, and is killed; Hannibal first takes his ring off his finger, then burns the body, puts the ashes into a silver urn, and puts a crown of gold and a crown of laurel on it, and so sent it to his son, who honoured with the highest marks of respect: Quintius also, the other consul, was mortally wounded.	IV	735
4102	2795	204	Hannibal , now master of Marcellus 's ring, sends a feigned letter to Apuleia sealed therewith, by a Roman deserter, signifying that he would be with them as on the morrow, when he sent a detachment to surprize the town, most of them Roman deserters; the Salapians admit about 600 of them within the gates, draw up the bridge, fall on and kill them, and from the walls disperse the rest, Quintius having sent them and the country round word of the death of Marcellus , for fear of such accidents, and so they escaped being surprized.	IV	735
4102	2795	204	Levinus the Roman admiral makes a descent on Africa with 100 sail of ships, and brings away immense booty, after having defeated the Carthaginian fleet, consisting of 83 sail, and taking 18 of them. About the same time the Romans having besieged Locri , Hannibal marches to its assistance, upon whose arrival Mago sallies out, so that the Romans were forced to raise the siege, and leave all the military engines, &c. behind them.	VII	64
4102	2795	204	The Ætolians conclude a very disadvantageous peace with the Macedonians and Achaïans .	II	669
4102	2795	204	Ptolemy Philopater dying, is succeeded by his son Ptolemy Epiphanes , a child between four and five years old; upon which Antiochus the great king of Syria , and Philip king of Macedon join, in order to take and divide his kingdom: The Jews side with Antiochus , who obliged them in every thing they requested, and presented them with 20,000 pieces of silver, 1400 measures of fine wheat, and 375 measures of salt, &c.	IV	45
4103	2796	203	Claudius Nero being consul with M. Livius Salinator , engages Hannibal , defeats him, kills 8000 of his men, and takes 7000 prisoners; then pursues him, in his retreat; they engage again near Venusia , and he kills 2000 more, when Hannibal makes the best of his way to Metapontus to join Hanno .	IV	736
4103	2796	203	Asdrubal having passed the Alps in order to join Hannibal , is met by the two consuls, and forced to fight in Umbria upon the banks of the Metaurus , where he has 56,000 men killed, and himself and abundance of prisoners are taken: Nero cuts off his head, and carries it with him to his camp at Canusium , from whence he sent some of the Carthaginian prisoners in chains to Hannibal 's camp, to inform him of the matter: Afterwards Hanno and Mago joining their forces, many of which being new raised troops, were attacked by the Romans and dispersed; and Hanno and Mago coming to their assistance, were likewise defeated and Hanno taken prisoner.	VII	68
4103	2796	203	The Rhodians join Attalus , king of Pergamus , and declare war against Philip king of Macedon , who gains some advantages over them.	III	146

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4104	2797	202	Philip king of Macedon engages Attalus and the Rhodians at sea, over against Chios , but is defeated, with the loss of 300 Macedonians and 600 allies, and 2700 taken prisoners, while the Rhodians lose but 60 and Attalus 70 men.	III	145
4104	2797	202	Machanidas having some how got the sovereignty, was called the tyrant of Sparta , who with a great army went to Mantineæ in Achaia , where he was engaged by Philopæmen , who intirely routed his army and killed himself: To perpetuate the memory of this victory, the Achaëans cast a brazen statue of Philopæmen , in the same attitude he killed Machanidas , and set it up in the temple of Apollo at Delphos .	II	669
4104	2797	202	Scipio engages the united force of Carthage in Spain , under the command of Mago , Asdrubal the son of Gisco , and Massinissa king of Numidia , and intirely destroys their army, consisting of 70,000 foot and 4500 horse, scarce 6000 escaping.	IV	737
4105	2798	201	Scipio engages Syphax king of the Masseyli to abandon the Carthaginians , and enter into an alliance with Rome ; took Elliturgi by storm, that had revolted, and levelled it with the ground, and put all the inhabitants to the sword. Castulo is surrendered, and a Carthaginian garrison made prisoners of war, &c. Aspsa being besieged by Marcius , the inhabitants sally out, and all die fighting except 50, who were left in the city to guard their wives, children, and effects, who upon hearing what had happened, set fire to a great pile, upon which they had put the women and children and most valuable effects, and then jumped into the flames themselves, and so all perished, and left the Romans an empty city.	VII	71
4105	2798	201	Scipio being taken very ill, a report was spread that he was dead; upon which Indibilis and Mandonius (two petty Spanish kings that had come over to the Romans) revolted, and raised an army of 20,000 foot and 2500 horse; and 8000 legionary troops also revolt, and choose themselves commanders: Scipio soon recovering, gets the two chiefs of his own men that had rebelled, and cuts off their heads, upon which the rest submit. He goes against the princes, engages them, and obtains a complete victory by killing 17,000. Soon after he took Gades , and so became master of all Spain .	IV	738
4106	2799	200	Scipio is recalled from Spain to Rome , where with P. Licinius Crassus he is chosen consul, and sent to Sicily , from whence he sent Lælius to Africa , where he greatly incommoded the Carthaginians , and returned to Sicily , and Scipio took Locri by surprize.	IV	739
4106	2799	200	Scipio being recalled from Spain , Mandonius and Indibilis revolt; the proconsul goes against them, kill 17,000, and Indibilis , and take 8000 prisoners. Soon after the Spaniards take and surrender Mandonius to obtain their own pardon. In Italy the plague made dreadful havock in both armies.	IV	740
4107	2800	199	Hannibal attacks the consul Sempronius , kills 1200 Romans , and obliges the rest to retire in disorder: A few days after they engage again, when 4000 Carthaginians are slain, and 300 taken prisoners, with 11 standards, and then Sempronius returned to Rome to erect a temple to Fortune , which he had vowed before the last battle.	IV	740
4107	2800	199	Scipio lands in Africa , where he first encounters Hanno , a young Carthaginian nobleman, and cut him off, with most of the troops under his command, and lays waste the country to the very gates of Carthage , and took an opulent city in its neighbourhood, which he pillaged, and made 8000 inhabitants prisoners; then defeats another Hanno with a body of 4000 men, and kills and takes 3000 of them.	VII	76
4108	2801	198	Scipio in the night-time sets fire to the barracks of the armies under Syphax king of Numidia , and Asdrubal , by which means he destroyed men, beats of burthen, and elephants, by the fire and by the sword, to the number of 40,000, and took 5000 prisoners; but Syphax and Asdrubal escaped with 2000 foot and 500 horse, who soon after recruited to the number of 30,000 men, whom Scipio again engages, and intirely overthrows; Lælius and Massinissa pursues Syphax into the heart of Numidia , where they engage him alone, defeat his army, and take himself and his son Vermina prisoners; upon which Cyrtus his capital city surrenders, where his queen Sophonisba is taken prisoner, and Massinissa marries her, but she is poisoned by order of Scipio , who honours Massinissa with the title of king and robes of royalty.	IV	744
4109	2802	197	The Romans and Carthaginians engage, and after a very obstinate battle, Mago being mortally wounded, the Romans became masters of the field, killed 5000, and took 18 standards. Mago embarked his troops for Africa , but died of his wounds on the coast of Sardinia .	VII	80
4110	2803	196	Hannibal being recalled to Carthage , has an interview with Scipio about a peace; but differing about the conditions, they come to a battle at Zama , where the Carthaginians were intirely routed, 20,000 being killed, and as many taken prisoners, among whom was many Macedonians , and Sopater their commander: Hannibal escaped with a few attendants, and agrees with Scipio to conclude a peace, which was confirmed by both senates on the following terms, viz. 1. The Carthaginians shall live according to their own laws, and enjoy all the cities and provinces which they had in Africa before the war; but the Romans should hold Spain , with all the islands in the Mediterranean . 2d. The Carthaginians shall deliver up all the Roman deserters, fugitive slaves, prisoners of war, and all the Italians Hannibal forced to follow him. 3. That they should deliver to Scipio all their ships of war, except 10 triremes (which being done, Scipio burnt to the number of 500) and all their tamed elephants, and tame no more; (these Scipio sent part to Rome , and gave part to king Massinissa .) 4. Carthage should enter into no war without the consent of Rome . 5. That they should restore to Massinissa all they had taken from him or his ancestors, and enter into an alliance with him. 6. That they should supply the Romans with corn, and pay their auxiliaries, till their ambassadors returned from Rome . 7. That they should pay the Romans 200 talents a year for 50 years. 8. That they should deliver up 100 such hostages as Scipio should choose, the youngest not under 14, and the oldest not more than 30 years of age. 9. Neither the peace nor the truce should take place, 'till the Carthaginians had restored the ships and effects they had taken from the Romans at their breaking the last truce, (for which they paid 25,000 pounds weight of silver.) 10. That the Roman army should leave Africa within 50 days after the conclusion of the treaty. Scipio treated the Latin and Roman deserters with extreme severity, beheading the former and crucifying the latter. Thus in the 18th year ended the second punic war, one of the most remarkable in history for its wonderful vicissitudes and prodigious expence of blood and treasure.	VII	84

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4110	2803	196	Upon Scipio's return to Rome , he brought into the publick treasury 120,000 pounds weight of silver; his triumph was the most magnificent that had ever yet been at Rome ; the senate offered him the perpetual dictatorship, but he refused it, contenting himself with the glorious name of Africanus .	IV	749
4110	2803	196	The consul Ælius Petus sends Oppius against the Boii , who surprized him, and killed 7000 of his men: But the consul forces the Ingauni to make an alliance with Rome ; and the senate sends Lævinus with a fleet into Macedon , &c.	IV	751
4110	2803	196	Nabis succeeds Machanidas in the government of Sparta , in which he behaved so monstrously cruel, as no tyrant ever before him had done.	II	636
4111	2804	195	The Boii , &c. spirited up by Hamilcar , a Carthaginian captain, make a sudden irruption, and seize Placentia , and put all the inhabitants to the sword; the Romans under the prætor Furius Purpureo march against them, and at Cremona engage and intirely defeat them, by killing Hamilcar and 30,000 of them upon the spot, for which at his return to Rome he is honoured with a triumph.	IV	750
4111	2804	195	Maffiniffa makes himself master of part of the Carthaginian territories in Africa , which the Romans oblige them to cede to him, and to enter into an alliance with him by the 5th article of the peace.	VII	85
4111	2804	195	Simon II. high-priest of the Jews dies, and is succeeded by his son Onias III. a person of great piety and clemency.	IV	45
4112	2805	194	The Carthaginians sending 50 Euboic talents to pay their annual fine, upon examination they are found too light by one fourth part, which the ambassadors are forced to borrow and make up the full sum.	VII	85
4112	2805	194	Hannibal has the command of the Carthaginian forces taken from him, and is made prætor, in which office he reformed abundance of abuses that had crept into the state, and got a law passed, that the civil judges should be chose annually, who before had those places for life, and acted very cruelly and unjustly: These re-formations drew the hatred of the nobility upon him, so that he was forced to fly to Ephesus to king Antiochus , who received him very graciously.	VII	86
4113	2806	193	The Acheans joins the Romans and Attalus king of Pergamus against Philip king of Macedon in the siege of Corinth , but are forced to raise the siege.	II	671
4113	2806	193	The Ætolians join the Romans against the Macedonians , and with king Aminander make an irruption into Macedon and Thessaly , committing great ravages; but lying carelessly without encamping, are surprized by king Philip , who cuts most of them to pieces.	II	708
4114	2807	192	Philocles the Macedonian general, joined by Nabis tyrant of Sparta , marches into the heart of Achaia , and takes Argos , which being ceded by Philip to Nabis , he plundered it of all its wealth, and then obliged the senate to pass two decrees, 1. That all old debts should be cancelled; 2. That there should be an equal distribution of lands, &c.	II	672
4114	2807	192	The Ætolians enter Thessaly , take and plunder many cities, destroying in the flames what they could not carry away, and kill many of the inhabitants, and sell the rest for slaves.	II	709
4114	2807	192	The Achaïans attack Androsthenes , Philip's general over 6000 men, in his camp, after he had detached a good part of them into the country to ravage it, overthrew him, and kill the greatest part of the moroders, and thereby delivered Achaia from all fear of Macedon .	II	672
4114	2807	192	Flaminius the Roman consul engages Philip king of Macedon in Thessaly , upon the plains of Cynocephalæ , and entirely defeats him, killing 8000 of his men, and taking 5000 prisoners: Upon this a peace is concluded between Rome and Macedon , obliging Philip to evacuate all the places he possessed in Greece , and withdraw his garrisons before the celebration of the Isthmian games: Upon commencement of the games, freedom was declared to all Greece , by the publick herald, for which the Acheans voluntarily purchased the redemption of all the Roman slaves that had been sold by Hannibal , to the number of 12,000, for 100 talents, and presented them to the Roman proconsul Flaminius , who upon his return to Rome was honoured with a triumph that lasted three days.	II	674
4114	2807	192	Cethigus the Roman consul engages the revolted Gauls in Italy , and gains a complete victory over them on the banks of the Mincius , and kills 30,000 on the spot, and takes 57,00 prisoners: And Minucius the other consul over-run the country of the Ligures and Boii , and laid it waste; the senate orders publick thanksgivings for these successes in all the temples at Rome for four days, and increase the number of prætors to six, appointing two for Spain , having divided it into two provinces, Hither Spain and Further Spain . The Spaniards revolt, and cut off Sempronius , prætor of Hither Spain , with most of his troops, and almost a total defection prevails in Further Spain .	IV	751
4115	2808	191	The Roman consuls destroy two Gaulish armies in Italy , plunder their country, and return to Rome loaded with booty. A new sacerdotal college is erected at Rome , called Epulones , whose office was only about religious feasts.	IV	749
4115	2808	191	Nabis tyrant of Sparta besieges Gythium , a sea-port now belonging to the Acheans ; Philopæmen the Achean prætor raises an army, and fits out a fleet to relieve it; Nabis defeats him by sea, at the first onset taking some of his ships and sink-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			ing others, escaping with great difficulty himself; but soon after he sets upon Nabis , in the night-time, fires his camp, and destroys all his forces then at Pliea ; nevertheless Nabis took Gytium , upon which Philopamen goes towards Lacedæmon ; Nabis pursues him, a battle follows, and Nabis is intirely defeated, and almost all his troops cut off; the Ætolians send him a reinforcement, who instead of assisting, murdered him, and the Spartans cut off all the Ætolians , and join themselves to the Achæans .	II	639
4116	2809	190	The Appian law, whereby the Roman women were forbid wearing more than half an ounce of gold in their cloaths or about their persons, &c. repealed.	IV	752
4116	2809	190	The consul M. Porcius Cato engages the revolted Spaniards , and drives them out of the field; upon which all the neighbouring cities send their submissions: He orders all the fortifications of Nether Spain to be demolished, and then goes into Further Spain , taking several towns and prodigious booty in his passage; he bestows a pound weight of silver on each soldier, then returns to Rome , and is honoured with a triumph, and then retired to a private life, spending his time in study, and writing the origin of the cities in Italy , and several books of Agriculture .	IV	752
4117	2810	189	The consul Tib. Sempronius Longus engages the Cisalpine Gauls , and gains a victory over them, killing 11,000 at the expence of 5000 Romans .	IV	753
4117	2810	189	The Lacedæmonians endeavour to revolt from the Achæans , but are discovered, and severely punished, and have their walls demolished, their mercenaries disbanded, &c.	II	679
4118	2811	188	Three ambassadors come to Rome from Antiochus king of Syria , to propose an alliance; but the senate requiring his renunciation to Thrace , Æolis , and Ionia , they return dissatisfied.	IV	753
4118	2811	188	P. Cornelius Scipio (surnamed Nafica) gained a considerable victory over the Lufitanians , (now called Portugal) and Fulvius defeated the united forces of the Vaccæi , Vestones , and Celtiberians , (in Further Spain) and took Hilernus , one of their kings, prisoner. In Hither Spain Flaminius took Illucia , a strong town, and cleared the country of banditti. In Cisalpine Gaul the consul Merula defeated the Boii near Mutina , killed 14,000 upon the spot, took 2000 prisoners, three generals, 212 colours, and 36 Gallie carts loaded with baggage.	IV	753
4119	2812	187	The Ligurians are engaged by the proconsul Thermus , and defeated with the loss of 9000 men, and their camp taken and plundered.	IV	753
4119	2812	187	Ptolemy king of Egypt presents the Achæans with 6000 shields and 200 talents, and renews an alliance with them: Eumenes king of Pergamus offers 120 talents to them for an alliance, but they refuse him; and Seleucus king of Syria offers them 10 ships of war completely equipped, which they accept.	II	679
4119	2812	187	Antiochus king of Syria goes into Greece with 10,000 foot, 500 horse, and 6 elephants, having first sacrificed to Minerva at Ilum , takes Chalcis and winters there, where he married Cleptolemus , a beautiful woman about twenty years old, in whose house he lodged.	III	554
4119	2812	187	The Romans coming into Greece , engage Antiochus at Thermopylae , and entirely defeat him there with a great slaughter, Antiochus himself escaping with great difficulty to Ephesus .	III	554
4119	2812	187	The Syrian and Roman fleet engage near Cyffus , where the Romans are conquerors, sinking ten and taking thirty of Antiochus's ships.	III	555
4119	2812	187	Scipio Nafica having reduced the Boii absolutely, their lands were divided among the Roman colonies sent thither, and he honoured with a triumph, adorned with all sorts of spoils, chariots made after the Gallie fashion, standards, vases of brass, 1470 collars of gold, 1220 horses, 2340 pounds weight of gold, and many captives. At the same time Fulvius had an ovation for his victory in Spain , adorned with spoils of great value, 130,000 pieces of silver money, 1000 pounds of silver in bars, and 125 pounds of gold in ingots, &c.	IV	754
4120	2813	186	Polyxenidas , admiral of the Syrian fleet, deceives Paussistratus admiral of the Rhodian fleet, kills him, and takes and destroys his fleet. Antiochus and his son Seleucus invade the kingdom of Pergamus , but are drove out again.	III	557
4121	2814	185	Scipio the Roman consul engages Antiochus king of Syria at Magnesia , totally overthrows him, kills 50,000 foot, 4000 horse, and takes 1500 prisoners, and 15 elephants; the spoil of the camp was inexpressible; the Romans lost but 300 foot and 25 horse: All the neighbouring country submitted, and the consul was surnamed Asiaticus . Antiochus sues for peace, which is granted upon the following conditions; 1. That he should quit all pretensions to Europe , and confine himself to Asia beyond mount Taurus , pay 15,000 Euboic talents, 500 down, 2500 upon the senate's confirming the articles, and 1000 a year for 12 years successively. 2. That he should satisfy Eumenes king of Pergamus , by paying 400 talents due to him, and that he should deliver up Hannibal the Carthaginian , Tboas the Ætolian , Moreficbolus the Acarnanian , and Philo and Eubulus , (two Caledonians) and 20 hostages, such as Scipio should choose, his son Seleucus to be one: Antiochus sends the hostages, strangers, &c. to Rome , all but Hannibal and Tboas , who had retired: Hannibal poisoned himself.	III	565
4121	2814	185	Antiochus dies, and is succeeded by his son Seleucus in the kingdom of Syria , where he reigned upwards of 11 years, being extremely reduced by the annual sum of 1000 talents he was forced to pay the Romans .	III	569
4122	2815	184	The consul Cn. Manlius Vulso goes into Asia , and attacks the Gall Grecians , or Gallatians , for their past services to Antiochus : He first goes against the Tolistobii , who had posted themselves upon mount Olympus , forced their intrenchments, killed great numbers, and took 40,000 prisoners; then went against the Tediosagi and Troemi , and had the like success, and so forced the whole nation to sue for peace upon his terms.	IV	756

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4123	2816	183	The Messenians having revolted from the Acheans by the instigation of one Dinocrates , Philopæmen marches against them, but is defeated, taken prisoner, and poisoned. The Acheans to revenge his death send Lycortas , their most able general against them; the people frightened, immediately submit, and surrender up the ringleaders of the rebellion, and those concerned in Philopæmen's death, bound in chains, who were afterwards carried to Megalopolis to be sacrificed on the deceased hero's tomb; but Dinocrates became his own executioner. Philopæmen after being burnt as usual, had his ashes carried to Megalopolis , his native city, with all imaginable funeral pomp, attended by the whole army. Statues were erected for him in most of the Grecian cities, and the magistrates of Megalopolis passed a decree, ordering a bull to be yearly sacrificed at his tomb, when a panegyrick was pronounced and hymns sung by young children.	II	683
4124	2817	182	The Roman consuls go against and reduce the revolted Ligurians , and so made all quiet between Ettruria and the Alps .	IV	756
4124	2817	182	The proconsul L. Fulvius Nobilior having reduced Ætolia , upon his return to Rome was honoured with a triumph, adorned with a great number of golden crowns, a vast quantity of gold in ingots, silver in bars, and immense sums of Attic and Macedonian money, &c. He exhibited publick games, among which were the Atbleta , for the first time, and the hunting of lions and panthers.	IV	758
4126	2819	180	Three commissioners are sent into Greece , to terminate the dispute of Greece and Philip king of Macedon ; they appoint the vale of Tempe and Cite , the contending parties to appear there before them; the seats were so disposed that the judges sat uppermost, the accusers next, and the king lowest, as a criminal. After the pleadings of both sides were heard, the commissioners declared, Our Will and Pleasure is, That the Macedonian Garrisons immediately evacuate all the places in dispute, and that the Kingdom of Macedon be reduced to its ancient Limits . Thus Rome began to determine the fate of monarchs, and treat them as vassals to their commonwealth.	IV	758
4126	2819	180	The Roman prætors in Spain , Quintilius and Calpurnius , engage the Lusitanians , and are defeated with the loss of 5000 men; but soon after engaging again, they obtained a complete victory, killing and taking 30,000 of the enemy, which quieted the country some time.	IV	758
4126	2819	180	The two consuls going against the revolted Ligurians , Sempronius attacks the Apuans in the east of Liguria , ravaging the fields, pillaging the villages, and burning the woods, and thereby opens a way into the heart of the country, while Calpurnius fights several successful battles with the Ingauni , takes six of their cities, makes many prisoners, and puts 43 of the principal ringleaders to death.	IV	758
4127	2820	179	The Roman censors, Cato and Valerius Flaccus , degrade seven senators; Quinctius , for killing with his own hands a Boian nobleman; Manlius , or Manilius , for having saluted his wife in the presence of his daughters; and five others. Then fine moveables, jewels, &c. were greatly taxed.	IV	759
4127	2820	179	Callicrates , Lyfades , and Aratus , being sent ambassadors from the Acheans to Rome , Callicrates having betrayed his country by subtle speeches, brought back an answer, that the Acheans should restore the Lacedæmonian exiles, and submit absolutely to the senate's orders, &c.	II	685
4127	2820	179	Heliodorus is sent by Seleucus king of Syria to fetch away all the treasure that was in the temple at Jerusalem ; the high-priest and people oppose his entry, upon which the gates were ordered to be thrown down, &c.	IV	46
4127	2820	179	Philip king of Macedon dies with grief, for having credulously consented to put his son Demetrius to death, and by other great misfortunes subjecting himself to the Romans , and is succeeded by his natural son Perfes , notwithstanding he had recommended his cousin Antigonus to the Macedonians , who sent an embassy to Rome , to desire their acknowledgment of his title, and to renew the alliance they had made with his father, for which he promised to be their faithful ally, to let his neighbours live in peace, and to make no war without their permission; and at home strove to ingratiate himself by all manner of popular artifices, by which means Antigonus was rejected, and Perfes established.	III	482
4127	2820	179	Orcius , a tribune of the people, got the Roman senate to make a law, that no man should spend more than 100 asses of brass, or 6s. 5d. at one feast.	IV	759
4130	2823	176	Seleucus is poisoned by Heliodorus , his treasurer, who places the crown upon his own head, but is engaged by Antiochus Epiphanes , brother to the deceased Seleucus , overthrown and drove out of the kingdom, and Antiochus crowned in his stead; who conquered Egypt , and twice ravaged Jerusalem , murdering the people by thousands, and selling as many for slaves, profaned the temple, &c.	III	571
4130	2823	176	Jason the brother of Onias high-priest of the Jews , taking advantage of king Antiochus's necessity, goes to Antioch and buys the high-priesthood of him for 350 talents, with an order that Onias should be sent to and confined in Antioch ; he likewise purchases for 150 talents more liberty to build at Jerusalem a Gymnasium , to train and exercise the Jewish youth in the Grecian manner, and to make them free of Antioch ; which doing, the Jewish religion and customs were set aside by these heathenish practices.	IV	47
4131	2824	175	The proconsul Paulus Æmilius defeats the revolted Ligurians , and reduces the whole country to obedience: And Q. Fulvius Flaccus , prætor of Hisber Spain , engages the Celtiberians , and kills 25,000, makes 4800 prisoners, and takes also 500 horses and 98 standards: Gentius , one of the Illyrian kings, having committed piracies in the Adriatick , submits and is pardoned.	IV	760
4131	2824	175	Jasin the apollate Jewish high-priest sends a great number of his partizans to Antioch , whom he had made free to assist at the Olympick games, with a great sum of money to be spent in sacrifices to the Tyrian Hercules Antigonus going against Ptolemy king of Egypt , calls at Jerusalem in his way, and is magnificently treated by Jasin .	IV	48

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4132	2825	174	Vilius Tappulus got the famous plebiscitum passed, whereby it was enacted, that no man should be quæstor before he was 31 years of age, curilè edile under 37, prætor under 40, consul under 43; which law continued in force till the fall of the republick.	IV	760
4133	2826	173	Jafon the Jewish high-priest sending his brother Menelaus to Antioch , to negotiate something with king Antiochus , he instead of doing his brother's business, offers the king 300 talents more, and was by him granted the high-priesthood; upon which each side struggle with their friends to keep the post; but Menelaus having promised to renounce Judaism , is assailed by Antiochus , and drives Jafon away.	IV	48
4134	2827	172	Menelaus , high-priest of the Jews , being sent for to Antioch upon account of not paying the money he had promised the king, orders his brother Lyfimachus to strip the temple of Jerusalem of its golden vessels, &c. with which he raises money, both to pay his arrears and to bribe the courtiers into his favour; but Onias making a great out-cry against him, flies to Daphne , an assylum near Antioch ; Menelaus having bribed Andronicus the king's lieutenant, he went and murdered Onias , notwithstanding he solemnly swore the contrary.	IV	49
4134	2827	172	The Egyptians demand Sale-Syria and Palestine of Antiochus king of Syria , upon which, the request not being comply'd with, war was proclaimed between the two nations, and carried on very vigorously.	III	572
4134	2827	172	Claudius the consul, by taking Nephatium , Mutula , and Faveria , and the losses they had met with in the preceding years, brought all the Isirian nation under the Roman subjection: Sempronius took and killed 20,000 of the Corficæan and Sardinian rebels, for which at his return to Rome he was honoured with a triumph. The consul Claudius going against the Ligurians , kills and takes 15,000 of them.	IV	760
4135	2828	171	Antiochus being returned from the reduction of Cilicia to Antioch , great complaints were exhibited against Andronicus the governor, upon hearing whereof the king ordered him to be carried to the place where he had murdered Onias , and to be put to death for so flagrant a villany.	IV	49
4136	2829	170	The Jews enraged at the great oppression and wicked apostacy of Menelaus and his brother Lyfimachus , mutiny and kill Lyfimachus , and great part of the 3000 men he had for his guard. Menelaus corrupts Antiochus's courtiers with such large bribes, that the three Jewish deputies are condemned and executed.	IV	50
4136	2829	170	The consul Petilius attempting to force the Ligurian camp, was killed by a javelin's being run through him, notwithstanding which the Romans gained a considerable victory, and killed above 5000 of the enemy.	IV	760
4137	2830	169	Antiochus enraged against the Jews , takes Jerusalem after a stout defence, kills 40,000 of them, and carries away as many of them prisoners. He stripped the temple of all its golden vessels, &c. and 1800 talents of gold and silver.	IV	50
4137	2830	169	The Achæans declare war against Perfes , in conjunction with the Romans , by the persuasion of Archon their prætor.	IV	86
4138	2831	168	Antiochus king of Persia issued out a decree, that all nations subject to him should forsake their old religion and gods, and worship the kings, under the severest penalties: This was principally levelled against the Jews , now under a most violent persecution.	IV	52
4138	2831	168	The streets of Rome are paved for the first time, having not been so yet since the building the city.	IV	760
4139	2832	167	M. Popilius Lænas the consul goes against the Stelliates (a people in Liguria , bordering on the river Tenarus) kills 10,000, and takes 7000 prisoners, and 8 standards, with the loss of 3000 Romans killed, and a vast number wounded; upon which the Stelliates surrender at discretion: Popilius takes away their arms, dismantles their cities, and sells the people for slaves; but the senate thinking this procedure too severe, decrees them to be redeemed, returns their effects, and allows them money to purchase new arms, closing their decree with saying, Victory is glorious when confin'd to the subduing an untractable enemy, but shameful when used to oppress the unfortunate.	IV	761
4139	2832	167	The Samaritans disown all right to the Jewish religion, and desire Antiochus to let them dedicate their temple to Jupiter , which is granted them.	IV	52
4139	2832	167	Athenas persecutes the Jews most cruelly, all over Judea , and dedicates the temple at Jerusalem to Jupiter Olympus , and sets up his statue upon the altar of burnt offerings, &c. All who were known any way to favour or practice any of the Jewish rites, were cruelly tortured and put to death, unless they immediately became heathens, and sacrificed to their idols, &c.	IV	52
4139	2832	167	Matthias (an old Jewish priest, father of the Maccabees) resolutely denies to obey the king's command by refusing to sacrifice to idols, draws a large number to him, especially the sect called the Assideans , and retires into the deserts of Judea , where they come to a resolution to act offensively or defensively, as well on the Sabbath , as any other day, having heretofore suffered themselves to be killed on that day, &c. In these deserts the people practised the pure worship of God according to the law of Moses : But soon becoming very numerous, he marched out from city to city, overturned the idolatrous altars, opened the Jewish synagogues, collected the sacred books, &c. all which he effected in one year's time, and then died.	IV	56
4139	2832	167	Perfes engages Paulus Æmilius the Roman general, is so totally overthrown that all Macedonia submits to Rome , upon which Æmilius turns the kingdom into a commonwealth, &c.	III	493
4139	2832	167	The Romans having defeated Perfes , they appoint a commission, and order the chiefs of all the Greek cities to appear, and condemn to death and confiscation all those who had in any capacity whatever assisted Perfes ; in consequence whereof a thousand Achæans were imprisoned, &c.	VII	686

			(979)		Vol. Pag.
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ
4139	2832	167	Antiochus king of Syria goes into Egypt with his army, and engages Ptolemy's troops between mount Cassius and Pelufium , on the frontiers of Egypt , and routs them at the first onset.		III	575
4140	2833	166	Judas Maccabaeus succeeded his father Mattathias in the command of the Jews , and with an army of but 6000 drove their enemies out of their cities, towns, villages, &c. Appollonius , governor of Jerusalem for Antiochus , raises a great army, and goes against Judas , who increased daily; they engage, Appollonius is killed, and abundance of his men, and Judas takes a rich spoil, after having routed the whole army. Antiochus swore the intire destruction of all the Jews , and Simon (deputy-governor of Cælo-Syria) marches against them, is killed, with 800 of his men, &c. Lyfias send 40,000 men to the governor to see the king's commands fulfilled; and to raise money he publishes that he would sell 90 Jewish captives for a talent. Gorgias coming with a detachment of 5000 men to surprize Judas's camp, Judas falls on him, kills 3000, and disperses the rest, then burns Gorgias's camp, takes his baggage, &c. which so dispirited his men, that they fled, and Judas in the pursuit killed 6000 more of them. Soon after Timotheus , governor beyond Jordan , and Bacchides comes against Judas , who by this time was grown numerous; they engage, Judas entirely overthrows them, and kills 20,000, gets much spoil, takes several strong fortresses, which he manned and armed, &c.		IV	60
4140	2833	165	Two plebeians, for the first time, are advanced to the consulate, viz. P. Acilius Ligus and C. Popilius Lænas , though afterwards it was common.		IV	761
4140	2833	166	Perfes king of Macedon , hires ruffians to murder Eumenes king of Pergamus , (for being in alliance with Rome) as he was going to Delfbos .		IV	761
4140	2833	166	The commissioners sent from the Roman senate into Achaia , to enquire who had favoured Perfes king of Macedon , cites more than a 1000 great men to Rome to answer the information given against them by Callicrates : Upon their arrival at Rome , they were all banished into different cities of Italy , and there kept close prisoners.		II	689
4140	2833	166	Antiochus goes again into Egypt , engages and routs the Egyptians with great slaughter; to prevent an utter extirpation he rode about from place to place to forbid the slaughter, and so gained the love of the Egyptians ; and takes Pellusum , and lead their army into the very heart of the kingdom, when all submitted to him; so that he was master of Memphis and all Egypt , except Alexandria : He got Ptolemy Philopater into his hands, and pretended to act as his friend and guardian; but Antiochus seized all that was valuable for himself, pillaging the cities, and causing unheard of desolations and cruelties to be committed, enriching himself and soldiers with the spoil.		III	576
4140	2833	166	The Alexandrians proclaim the brother of Ptolemy Philometer king of Egypt , who took the name of Ptolemy Euergetes the Second , which was afterwards changed into Physcon (or the great bellied;) but Antiochus a while after sets up Ptolemy Philometer against him, but by the mediation of Cleopatra their sister, and the Roman deputies, 'twas agreed they should reign jointly.		III	650
4140	2833	166	Physcon having drove his brother Philometer out of Egypt , Philometer goes on foot to Rome , in a very mean garb and small attendance; but the senate ordered him lodgings, &c. suitable to his condition, and the quaistor to allow him every thing he wanted at the publick expence: Appearing before the senate, he made his ill usage appear in such a light to them, that they decreed him his crown, and sent Quinctius and Canuleius , two of their own members, to attend him to Alexandria , to see their decree put in execution, so great was the power of Rome now become. Accordingly, upon their arrival an accommodation was brought about, and Physcon was put in possession of Lybia and Cyrene , and Philometer of all Egypt and the island of Cyprus , and each prince was declared independant of the other.		III	651
4141	2834	165	Lyfias came from Antioch into Judea , with an army of 60,000 foot and 500 horse, Judas meets and engages him at Bethzura , with only 10,000 men, defeats him, and kills 5000. Lyfias returns home, and Judas goes to Jerusalem , cleanses and purifies the temple and city, and having made new altars, vessels, and vestments, out of the spoils taken from the Syrians , he began the divine worship with the dedication of the new altar, utensils, &c. on the 25th of Cisleu , having lain three years polluted and demolished, &c. This feast lasted eight days with great joy and devotion, and was annually observed by the name of the feast of dedication by the whole nation, till the destruction of the temple by the Romans .		IV	61
4141	2834	165	Antiochus Epiphanes being greatly bruised by a fall from his chariot as it was driving furiously along, mortified, and bred such a large number of worms that made the stench intolerable, the pain whereof threw him into a frenzy, in which condition he died, but before his departure sends for Philip , his chief favourite, and appoints him guardian of his son, regent of the Syrian empire, during his son Antiochus's minority, and delivers him the seal of the empire, and the other ensigns of royalty; but this office was seized upon and usurped by Lyfias , who had proclaimed the young Antiochus Eupator ; the senate of Rome , thought fit to send three persons into Syria to perform that office, with the cruel instructions, that as soon as they should be in possession of the guardianship, to burn all the ships with decks, that the king of Syria had, to hamstring all his elephants, and to weaken by all means possible the strength of that powerful kingdom.		III	583
4141	2834	165	Physcon dissatisfied with his share, petitions the senate to add Cyprus to his part, which they do, but Philometer refuses to comply. The Cyrenians disliking Physcon's government, revolt; he goes against them and is defeated. Physcon sends ambassadors to Rome ; the senate confirms their former decree, orders Phi-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pa.
			lomator's ambassadors to be gone in five days, and renounces all friendship and alliance with him: Phycon receiving this news, and having quelled the rebellion, behaved so disagreeably to the Cyrenians , that they set upon and wounded him in several places, leaving him for dead; but recovering, he goes to Rome , shews his scars, and charges his brother with the assassination: The senate angry with Philometor for not submitting to their decree about Cyprus , refuse to hear his ambassadors, and send five ambassadors along with Phycon to settle him in Cyprus , requiring all their allies in those parts to furnish him with forces for that purpose. Philometor comes against him in person, engages and routs his forces: Phycon shuts himself up in Lanitbo , a city of Cyprus , where he is besieged, taken, and delivered to Philometor , who forgave him, restored Lybia and Cyrene to him, and gave him his daughter in marriage, and other lands in lieu of Cyprus , and so ended the war between the two brothers.	III	653
4141	2834	165	The senate make two laws, viz. That all under 46 years of age should appear in order to be incorporated in the legions; and, That all come from Macedon within three years last past should return to their duty.	IV	762
4142	2835	164	Judas the Jewish captain falls on the Idumeans , &c. at Acrabatene , and kills 20,000, then drove the children of Ben into their two strong towers, where he besieged them; but some of the officers having received 70,000 drachms to let part of them escape, he put them to death for it, and took the fortresses by assault, put both garrisons (consisting of 20,000) to death, and burnt the towers to the ground.	IV	63
4142	2835	164	Timotheus the Syrian general comes into Judea with a great army; Judas meets him, kills 30,500 foot, and 600 horse, and forced him to retreat to Gazara , whither he follows and besieges him, takes the place, and slays him, his brother, and Apollophanes another Syrian general. The successes of Judas made the Jews every where hated and persecuted, to relieve whom Judas first fell on the city Bassora , took it, destroyed all the males, delivered his brethren, and set fire to the city; then engages another Syrian general, named Timotheus , slew 8000 of his men, and dispersed the rest; then went to the other Gileadish cities, and served them as he had done Bassora , and then returned to Jerusalem laden with spoil and a vast number of delivered Jews. Simon , Judas's brother, was as successful in Gallilee ; but Joseph and his brother going against Jammia , was defeated by Gorgias , having 2000 men killed. Judas goes against Hebron , the metropolis of Idume , takes and demolishes it, with all the neighbouring towns, from whence he carried off great plunder; he then went through the land of the Philistines , destroyed their fortresses, and all their altars and groves dedicated to idolatry.	IV	66
4143	2836	163	Perfes is intirely routed at Pydna by the Roman consul Paulus Emilius , who killing 20,000 of his troops, &c. then ships himself and money (amounting to 2000 talents) for Samo-Itrance : Emilius gives the plunder of the camp to the infantry, and of the adjacent country to the horse, but would not suffer the city to be medled with; and all the royal treasure he carried to Rome . In two days all Macedon , except Pydna , submitted to Rome . Perfes is taken prisoner by the Roman admiral. Emilius at Amphipolis changes the Macedonian government into a number of republicks, then stript the kingdom of its wealth, and returns to Italy with the two kings, Perfes and Gentius , prisoners, who graced the consul's triumph.	III	498
4143	2836	163	Demetrius , son of Seleucus Philopator , who was kept as a hostage at Rome , making his escape from thence, upon his arrival in Syria is universally acknowledged king; and Lyfias and his ward Antiochus Eupator being delivered to him, he orders them both to be put to death. He is honoured by the Babylonians with the surname of Soter , and is also acknowledged king by the senate of Rome .	III	590
4143	2836	163	Demetrius sets up and supports one Holofernes , a pretended child of the queen of Cappadocia , in opposition to Ariarathes , the true heir.	III	592
4143	2836	163	Lyfias the Syrian, who had usurped the regency, comes into Judea with an army of 80,000 men, all the cavalry of the kingdom, and 80 elephant, and besieged Bethsura ; but being defeated by Judas , with the loss of 11,000 foot and 1600 horse, strikes up a peace with him, by which the Jews were allowed the free exercise of their religion every where; but the other neighbouring countries being dissatisfied with it, enter Judea with 120,000 foot and 5000 horse, under the command of Timotheus , and put all to the fire and sword; but Judas attacked him, and killed 30,000 of them, and pursuing them comes up with them again at the city of Carnion , many of them taking sanctuary in the temple of Atargatis , he consumed it and them with fire, and puts all in the town to the sword, to the number of 25,000, and razed the city to the ground; after which he made himself master of Idumea , and the Philistines country, and took Azotus , or Ashdod ; then returning to Jerusalem , he besieged the Syrian garrison in the fortress there, to whose relief came 100,000 foot, 20,000 horse, 32 elephants, and 300 chariots of war, the king in person, with Lyfias the regent: They first besieged Bethsura , where Judas attacks them in the night, kills 4000, and puts the whole in confusion, and retires without the loss of one man; but after another engagement, Judas having but a small army, was obliged to retire to Jerusalem , and Bethsura forced to surrender, from whence Antiochus marches to Jerusalem . In the mean time Philip , whom the late king had appointed regent and guardian of his son, raised a great army, and seized Antioch , the capital of Syria , and took upon him the government of the kingdom; upon this Lyfias makes peace with the Jews, and goes against Philip .	III	588
4143	2836	163	Ariarathes , king of Cappadocia , offers the Roman ambassadors an army to protect their persons, and to support them in their pretended regencies, but they refuse

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pag.
			(981)
			it, and go unarmed in the senate's name to Laodicea (a sea-port town) and caused the Syrian ships to be burnt, and the elephants disabled, for which Octavius was killed in the Gymnasium there by an African . Demetrius , now at Rome , petitions the senate a second time, but is refused; upon which the senate sends three ambassadors into Syria to watch the event there. Upon Demetrius's landing in Tripolis , he is acknowledged and proclaimed king; and he gave out that the Roman senate had sent him, and that they would support him; upon which all the army and officers came over to him; the city and strong holds strive who shall first submit; so that in a few days the whole kingdom was his: Antioch threw open her gates to him, and joyfully invite him to the palace of his ancestors. Lyfias and Eupator are seized and delivered to him, and both put to death. Demetrius immediately delivers the Babylonians from the tyranny of Timarchus and Heraclides , by putting the first to death and banishing the last, for which he is called Soter .	III	591
4143	2836	163	This year Terence the famous dramatick poet was in his highest reputation at Rome .	IV	765
4143	2836	163	Paulus Æmilius being one of this year's censors, by the census taken 337,522 citizens are found in Rome fit to bear arms. Soon after he died in a private station, very poor, notwithstanding the large sums he had taken from the enemy and brought into the publick treasury.	IV	76
4143	2836	163	The consul Tib. Sempronius Gracchus goes with an army against the revolted Ligurians ; and the consul M. Juventus Thalna sails into Corfica , to quell a rebellion there, both which were easily effected.	IV	765
4144	2837	162	The Rhodians having taken Calynda , a famous city of Caria , sends to offer it to the Roman senate, and so made up all differences between them.	III	157
4144	2837	162	The Roman senate, instead of making Illyricum and Macedon two Roman provinces, change them into two republicks, and send 10 commissioners to settle them. Æmilius plunders Epirus : When Anicius , Octavius , and Æmilius returned to Rome , they were all honoured with triumphs, of which Æmilius's was by much the finest that Rome had ever seen. Rome was so enriched by the spoils brought from Macedon , that she had no occasion to tax the people from this time to the time of Augustus .	III	157
4144	2837	162	Demetrius (now king of Syria) sends presents to Rome , which are accepted, and gets himself acknowledged king of Syria by the senate.	III	592
4145	2838	161	Demetrius king of Syria , by the wicked misrepresentations of the Jewish high-priest, who went to Antioch on purpose to make Demetrius large presents, and to complain of Nicanor the Syrian general, who had concluded a peace with the Jews , sends positive commands for his general Nicanor to break the peace he had concluded with Judas , and not to sheath his sword till he had killed him.	IV	72
4146	2839	160	Nicanor marches into the neighbourhood of Bethoron with an army of 35,000 men to attack Judas , where they engage; Nicanor is killed, and his army routed, and the Jews kill them all in their flight, so that not one returned to Antioch : This victory was obtained on the 13th day of Adar (February) which is kept as a festival annually ever since by the name of the Day of Nicar .
4146	2839	160	Alcimus , a Jewish apostate, being general of the Syrian army and governor of Jerusalem , was struck with the dead palsy, and died immediately, after he had blasphemed the Jewish religion, and ordered the wall of the temple to be demolished.	IV	76
4146	2839	160	Judas , general of the Jews in Judea , sends Eupolemus son of John , and Jason the son of Eleazer to Rome , with proposals of an alliance, &c. which being accepted, the senate made a decree, and sent it engraven upon copper to Jerusalem , importing that the Jews were thenceforth acknowledged as friends and allies of the Romans , that both nations should succour each other, and their allies, &c. and they sent a letter to Demetrius king of Syria , enjoining him to forbear hostilities against the Jews , threatening him with an invasion by land and sea if he did not comply with their orders.	IV	74
4146	2839	160	Demetrius sends Bacchides and Alcimus into Gallilee , with an army of 20,000 foot and 2000 horse, and kills a great many Jews ; then goes to Eleasa , where Judas had only 3000 men, who all deserted him but 800, with which he was forced to engage Bacchides , but being overcome with numbers he was slain, in the 6th year of his generalship and the 3d year of his high priesthood, and was succeeded by his brother Jonathan (surnamed Apphus) but the people through fear and famine submitted to Bacchides as their governor, upon which broke out a terrible persecution.	IV	75
4147	2840	159	Demetrius king of Syria having offered his sister Laodicea to Ariarathes king of Cappadocia for his wife, which he not accepting, Demetrius sets up one Holofernes as the right heir to the crown of Cappadocia : He goes with his army and drives Ariarathes out of Cappadocia , and set Holofernes on the throne, notwithstanding he was assisted by Eumenes king of Pergamus by express order of the senate. Ariarathes flew to Rome for safety, whither Holofernes having sent presents and ambassadors, they are ordered to reign jointly; but Attalus assisting Ariarathes , drives Holofernes out of the kingdom, and Ariarathes reigns alone, and Holofernes retires to Antioch to his patron Demetrius .	III	766
4148	2841	158	Jonathan the Jewish general discovers a plot laid against him and his friends, to seize and deliver them into the hands of Bacchides ; he gets the chief of the conspirators and puts 50 of them to death. Bacchides besieges him in Bethbasi , with a very numerous army: Jonathan and his brother Simon by frequent sallies cuts off great part of it, and at last routed him. Bacchides puts many of those to death who had invited him out of Syria . Upon this a peace is concluded, and Bacchides returns to Antioch , and Jonathan is appointed governor of

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			Judea , and settled in Mickmasb , and made very severe examples of the apostate Jews .	IV	77
4149	2842	157	The Dalmatians bordering upon Illyricum made incursions and committed great robberies there, though tributary to Rome : Famnius being sent ambassador from the senate, they would scarce give him audience.	IV	766
4149	2842	157	Massinissa having invaded Tyfa , a rich province of Carthage , ten commissioners are sent by the senate to settle the dispute; but the Carthaginians appealing to the settlement formerly made, Cato becomes their enemy, and always prompted the senate to a war.	IV	766
4150	2843	156	The consul C. Marcius Figulus having influenced the senate to proclaim war against the Dalmatians , goes against them, and is defeated.	IV	766
4151	2844	155	The consul Scipio Nasica besieges and takes Delminium , the metropolis of Dalmatia , and then brought the whole country under subjection, all in one campaign.	IV	766
4152	2845	154	The consul L. Posthumius Albinus goes into Cisalpine Gaul , to assist the inhabitants of Marseilles against the Ligurians , defeats them and the Decaete , and reduced their whole country, comprehending the present territory of Antibes and Grasse : This was the first Roman conquest beyond the Alps .	IV	767
4153	2846	153	Demetrius having given himself up to pleasure, particularly drunkenness, neglects the government, and gains the ill-will of his people; upon which one Alexander Balas is set up by the Romans , Egyptians , &c. to be the son of Antiochus Epiphanes , who lays claim to the crown at the head of a great army, upon which Demetrius engages him, is overcome, and loses his life and kingdom.	III	596
4153	2846	153	Q. Fulvius Nobilior and T. Annius Lucus being chose consuls, the exigencies of state requiring it, they enter upon their office the 1st of January , which from this time forward was observed instead of the 15th of March , which used to be the day. Fulvius was sent into Spain , where all things was in an uproar, where being arrived, he marched against the Segedani and Aravace ; their general Carus with 25,000 men lay in ambush for the consul in a wood, surprised him, and killed 6000 legionaries; but pursuing them too eagerly, the Roman horse attacked him and killed him, and killed 6000 of his men. The Spaniards having chose two new generals, are again attacked near Numantia , and overthrown by the elephants sent by Massinissa ; the consul endeavoured to scale the walls, but one of the elephants being wounded, made such a hideous noise, that the rest turned upon the Roman army and put them in disorder; the Numantians sally out at the same time, and defeat the consul's troops, and kills 4000 of them: After this defeat great numbers of his men perished with cold, want and fatigue, he keeping them encamped all the winter.	IV	767
4153	2846	153	The Roman prætor Mummius engaging the Lusitanians , puts them to the rout; but pursuing them disorderly, they rally, kill 9000 of his men, and take and plunder his camp: Being now reduced to 5000, the Romans wait in an advantageous post to retrieve their honour, from whence they cut off a Lusitanian detachment, and recover the Roman standards.	IV	767
4153	2846	153	Demetrius king of Persia , to prevent Jonathan the Jewish general's siding with Alexander Balas against him, offers him by letter great presents to accept him as his friend and ally, to give the Jews liberty all over his dominions to exercise their own religion unmolested, to set free what hostages and captives he had, &c. upon which Jonathan repairs to Jerusalem , repairs both the city and temple, &c. Balas writes to him, offers him the high-priesthood, and sends him a purple robe and golden crown, which he accepted and joined him.	IV	78
4154	2847	152	Andriscus , a native of Adrymitium , pretends to be Philip , one of the late Perses 's sons, sets up, and is acknowledged king of Macedon ; but after various battles and successes, is at last led captive to Rome , where he was a principal trophy in Metellus the consul's triumph.	III	501
4154	2847	152	M. Claudius Marcellus goes into Spain with 8000 foot and 500 horse, was attacked, but put the Spaniards to flight, and made dreadful havock of the fugitives, &c. They sue for peace, which he grants, but the senate refuses to confirm it.	IV	768
4154	2847	152	A war breaks out in Africa between Massinissa and the Carthaginians , and Archobazantes , king of part of Numidia , joins the Carthaginians . The Roman senate send Scipio Nasica to compose the differences, which he does, and Massinissa was ordered to restore the lands that occasioned the quarrel; but Guisco , a Carthaginian senator, stirs up the multitude, so that Nasica was forced to fly to Rome , and 40 Carthaginian senators that approved the peace were put to death.	IV	768
4155	2848	151	The tribunes of the people of Rome went so far as to imprison the two consuls L. Licinius Lucullus and A. Posthumius Albinus , for forcing some Roman youths to serve in the army designed for Spain ; but Scipio Emilianus , son of Paulus Emilius , offering his service, the rest followed: But both the consuls in their several provinces acted most shamefully, covetous, mercenary, and vile.	IV	769
4156	2849	150	Alexander Balas (now king of Syria) invites Jonathan the Jewish chief to his marriage, where he was received with great respect at Ptolemais , when the king clothed him in purple, set him by him, and declared him generalissimo of Judea , confirmed his former grants, &c. The Jews now had respite every where, and in Egypt Onias and Dositheus were the king's chief favourites, so that Onias built a temple, and was high priest thereof, &c.	IV	79
4156	2849	150	A bloody war breaks out between Massinissa and the Carthaginians ; a battle is fought, wherein the Carthaginians lose 50,000 men, &c.	IV	770
4156	2849	150	P. Juventus Thalma and C. Cælius are sent by the Roman senate against the new king of Macedon ; they engage, and the Romans are entirely routed, and Juventus and Cælius slain; and thus Macedon was again freed, and a passage opened into Thessaly , which he united to Macedon .	III	504

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4156	2849	150	Three hundred of the exiles of Achaia return home from Rome , out of a thousand, after seventeen years imprisonment.	II	690
4157	2850	149	The Carthaginians care for Philip , now king of Macedon , and desire his assistance against the Romans , which he promises, but neglects to perform it, and gives himself up to cruelty and vice, plundering his people, and murdering all that disliked him or that he disliked.	III	504
4157	2850	149	The Romans take the advantage of the Carthaginians , distress and declare war against them: Utica , the second city in Africa submits; the consuls M. Manilius Nepos and L. Marcius Censorinus go against them with 80,000 foot, 4000 horse, and a fleet of 50 quinquerems, &c.	VII	97
4157	2850	149	The Carthaginians send ambassadors to make their submission to Rome , who first require 300 young noblemen for hostages, which being delivered to the consuls at Lilybaeum , were told, when they came to Utica they should know what was further required of them; accordingly, when they come there, the Romans demanded, 1. A supply of corn for their troops. 2. To surrender all their triremes, and military machines, and bring in all their arms to the Roman camp, which were all comply'd with; and then Censorinus ordered them to demolish their city, but they resolved rather to die than yield to this. Manilius attacks Carthage by land, and Marcius by sea, but Asdrubal with an army of 20,000 men, annoyed Manilius very much, so that the siege went on slowly; but Manilius took the strong city of Texaga , killed 12,000, and took 6000 prisoners.	VII	110
4157	2850	149	Massinissa approaching his end, desires Emilianus to assist his three sons, Micipsa , Gulussa , and Mastanabal , with his advice, and to divide his dominions among them, which he performed in the most prudent and equitable manner.	VII	126
4157	2850	149	Emilianus by his address gained Phameas , the general of the Carthaginian horse, to come over to the Romans , with 2200 horse under his command.	VII	101
4157	2850	149	The Achaean quarrelling with the Lacedaemonians , sends Denocritus , their praetor, against them, defeats them, and kills 1000 of their men.	II	692
4158	2851	148	Apollonius , governor of Cælo-Syria and Palestine , revolt to Demetrius , son of the late king of Syria , in opposition to Alexander Balas , now king: Joratan the Jewish chief goes against him; but Joppa shutting its gates against him, he took it in fight of the enemy: He then engaged the army and routed it; the foot fled to Azotus , and took sanctuary in the temple of Dagon ; the Jews pursue them, take the town, and destroy it and the temple by fire. Thus he killed 8000.	IV	80
4158	2851	148	Metellus is sent by the senate against Philip king of Macedon ; they engage several times with various success, but at last Metellus routed him, and he flies to the Thracians , where he raises another army and engages Metellus again, and is again overthrown with great slaughter, then he flew to Byzas , a Thracian prince, who delivered him up to Metellus , who was honoured with a triumph at his return to Rome , at which Philip was led. Metellus appointed new magistrates, and wholly changed the Macedonian government.	III	505
4158	2851	148	Soon after the taking Philip prisoner, one Alexander sets himself up, pretending to be another of Perseus 's sons, but is quickly defeated, and Macedonia declared a Roman province.	III	505
4158	2851	148	Diæus the Achaean praetor, at the request of Metellus , makes a truce with the Lacedaemonians , which Menalcidas their general breaks; the Spartans would have punished him for it, but he killed himself to prevent it.	II	692
4158	2851	148	The Roman deputies or commissioners landing at Corinth , orders Corinth , Lacedaemon , Argos , Heraclea , and Orchomenes to be separated from the general or Achaean league, and to be governed by their own laws independantly of the confederacy. The populace enraged, fall upon all they Lacedaemonians they could find, and either stript them or put them to death; those who flew to the commissioners for refuge were dragged out from thence, though the deputies threatened them with the highest resentment of Rome . Upon their return they did all they could to instigate the senate against them, who thought fit only to send three new deputies for the present.	II	693
4158	2851	148	The consul Calpurnius Piso invests Clupea , but is obliged to abandon it with shame and disgrace, the inhabitants by frequent sallies having killed great numbers of his men. He then went to Neapolis , which, though a neutral town, and even under the protection of Rome , he plundered, &c.	IV	774
4159	2852	147	Metellus sends deputies to Corinth , to prevail with the Achaean to be quiet with Lacedaemon , who are ill treated and drove away with all manner of affronts, and Critolaus their praetor declares open war with the Lacedaemonians , and consequently with Rome , under whose protection they are. Metellus engages Critolaus , kills him and many others, takes 1000 prisoners, and disperses the rest, then cuts 1000 Arcadians to pieces. Diæus the praetor succeeding Critolaus , orders 12,000 slaves to be freed and armed, all the jewels, and gold and silver ornaments to be brought in to raise money, &c.	II	696
4159	2852	147	The Roman praetor Metellus coming to Thebes , found Pythias the governor and most of the inhabitants were fled, so that he entered without opposition, used the people with great clemency, and saved the temples and houses from destruction. The people of Megara opened their gates to him, and put him in full possession of Achaia . Metellus sends three deputies to Corinth to treat of peace, but Diæus imprisoned them and condemned them to die.	II	697
4159	2852	147	The consul Scipio Emilianus takes Megalia , a part of Carthage , which so enraged Asdrubal the governor, that he caused all the Roman prisoners which he had to be thrown headlong from the ramparts, in the sight of the Roman army, after having cut off their hands and feet, and pulled out their eyes and tongues.	IV	776

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4159	2852	147	Laelius , lieutenant of Æmilianus , engages Diogenes the Cartaginian general at Nepheris , overcomes, kills and takes 80,000 of his men: Upon this the Africans revolt to the Romans , who take the city of Nepheris , and soon after Carthage was taken by storm. Asdrubal and many others submitted to the Romans , but his wife and 900 deserters committed themselves to the flames, and thereby destroyed themselves, the citadel, and the famous temple of Æsculapius : The plunder and spoil was past all belief.	VII	104
4159	2852	147	A new pretended Philip sets up for the throne of Macedon , and makes a great progress, many of the people and cities joining him. Junius Tremelius is sent against him with a great Roman army; they engage, and Philip is defeated and slain, and Macedonia made a Roman province, which D. Junius Syllanus governing with great severity and injustice, the Macedonians accuse him to the senate, who cite him to appear; but Titus Manlius Torquatus his father got the matter to be referred to him, and to be heard at his own house; the deputies appear, and the father condemns the son, who soon after hanged himself.	III	507
4160	2853	146	Ptolemy Philometer gives his daughter Cleopatra to wife to Demetrius , the son of Demetrius Soter , and goes against Balas near Antioch ; they engage, where Balas is entirely overthrown, and escaping with only 500 horse, goes into Arabia , where he is murdered by Zabdiel . Ptolemy died of his wounds, and Demetrius ascended the throne of Syria , and called himself Nicanor , or the conqueror. Jonathan the Jewish chief being cited by Demetrius to Ptolemais , went, and there so answered the complaints exhibited against him, that the king annexed to Judea the three governments of Apherama , Lydda , and Ramatba , and freed the country from all future taxes for 300 talents ready money.	III	601
4160	2853	146	The consul Mummius comes before Corinth with a Roman army, consisting of 23,000 foot and 3500 horse, besides a large number of Cretan archers. Diæus comes out, is coaxed into a snare, and is entirely defeated; upon which he runs full speed to his house in Megalopolis , sets it on fire, throws his wife and children into the flames, and poisons himself; the inhabitants fly out of the city, the Romans enter it, put what men they find in it to the sword, and sell the women and children for slaves; then the city was ransacked by the soldiers, and fire being put to all the corners of the city at the same time, reduced it all to ashes, and afterwards the walls were demolished: Thus Corinth was destroyed 950 years after its foundation by Aletes the son of Hippotes . Soon after commissioners came from Rome , who abolished popular government in all the cities of Greece , and appointed governors under the Roman prætor, who was sent annually. Thus Greece was reduced to a Roman province. Mummius at his return to Rome was honoured with a triumph, adorned with the finest paintings, statues, &c. of Greece , to an immense value.	II	700
4161	2854	145	Demetrius king of Syria being angry with the Antiochians , demanded their arms, upon which the inhabitants revolt, and besiege the king in his palace with an army of 120,000 men. Jonathan comes with 3000 men to assist Demetrius ; they fall out, and kill 100,000, and set fire to the city; upon which the rest submit, and a pardon is granted them, notwithstanding which Demetrius put many to death, confiscated their estates, and oppressed them with all manner of cruelty, and then breaks with Jonathan , demanding taxes, &c.	III	602
4162	2855	144	Viriathus the Lusitanian general had gained great advantages for seven years together in Spain , over the several prætors, in three pitched battles and several skirmishes; but this year Q. Fabius Æmilianus gained two victories over him, but the senate did not grant him a triumph, it being customary not to allow that honour unless the general had killed at least 5000 of the enemy in one battle.	IV	780
4162	2855	144	Tryphon comes into Syria , with Antiochus the son of Alexander Balas , and claims the crown, styling himself guardian and protector of the young king. Demetrius being hated, is deserted by many, and forced to come to a battle, is entirely routed, all his elephants taken, and he forced within the walls of Seleucia for shelter. Antiochus goes straight to Antioch , whose gates being opened to him, he mounts the throne of Syria , and has the surname of Theos given him.	III	603
4162	2855	244	Antiochus Theos king of Syria confirms to Jonathan the Jewish chief all the former grants of favour, and adds several others to them; he made Simon his brother general of all his forces, and governor of all the sea coasts. Jonathan and his brother crossed the Jordan at the head of their troops, and defeated Demetrius's forces, killing 3000, &c. They sent an embassy to Rome to renew their alliance with the senate, ordering them at their return to do the same with Lacedæmon and all Greece .	IV	82
4163	2856	143	Tryphon prevails upon Jonathan to disband his troops, and wheedled him to Ptolemais with only 1000 men, which being done, Tryphon murders all his retinue, and seizes him, demands a large ransom for him and his two sons hostages, upon the receipt whereof he murdered him and his sons also. Simon his brother is declared commander and high-priest of the Jews at Jerusalem : Immediately he raised a considerable army, and finished the walls of the city; then sends to renew the alliance with Rome , Lacedæmon , and Greece , which was readily complied with; then sends to Demetrius , offers to assist him in the recovery of his kingdom, and presents him with a gold crown; Demetrius accepts the conditions, ratifies all his dignities, and styled him prince and high-priest of the Jews , which the Sanhedrim also confirmed to him, and his children after him.	IV	83
4164	2857	142	The Syrian garison in the strong fortrefs of Acra , after two years siege, capitulates and marches out; Simon and his men enter, with palms in their hands, trumpets and other instruments sounding, accompanied with songs, &c. he first ordered it to be lustrated and cleansed from all idols, but afterwards he resolved

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			to demolish it, and the hill upon which it stood, which took up three years to complete.	IV	86
4164	2857	142	Metellus gained so vast a reputation by his strict adherence to military discipline and generosity to captives, that many places submit voluntarily to him; and he admits the Nertobrigians in Hither Spain into an alliance with Rome ; but at the same time the consul Servilianus was defeated in Further Spain , by Viriathus , with the loss of 3000 men.	IV	781
4164	2857	142	Metellus goes into Further Spain in the winter, and recovers Escadia , Gemella , Obokula , &c. put some of the head revolvers to death, and sold 9000 for slaves; but hearing his successor was near at hand, was so exasperated with not having the command till the war was finished, that he disbanded the best part of his troops, exhausted the magazines, let the elephants die, and broke and threw into the river the arrows designed for the Cretan archers.	IV	782
4165	2858	141	The consul Pompeius Rufus succeeding Metellus in the command of the army, was offered very advantageous terms by the Termantians and Numantines ; but he insisting upon their delivering up their arms, a new war was begun: He besieges Numantia , but is forced to raise it, and then goes towards Termantia , where his success is worse, losing abundance of his men. In Further Spain Viriathus overcame the consul Servilianus , and concludes a peace with him.	IV	783
4165	2858	141	Upon the death of Ptolemy Philometor king of Egypt , his brother Ptolemy Physcon , king of Cyrene , &c. marries Cleopatra , widow of the deceased, and immediately puts her son Philometor to death, in his mother's arms, on the marriage day, and continues murdering all those who disapproved of the fact, and ever after behaved in the most cruel and wicked manner of any of his predecessors.	III	546
4166	2859	140	Simon renews his alliance with Rome , and sends a present of a golden shield weighing 1000 Minae , (about 60,000 l. of our money;) the senate writes to the kings of Syria , Egypt , Pergamus , and Cappadocia in their favour, &c.	IV	87
4166	2859	140	Servilius Cæpio breaks the peace with Viriathus , and at first reduces him to extremest difficulties, and then influences with large promises Audax , Ditalio , and Minur , his favourites, to murder him; which they performing, he denies them their reward. One Tantalus succeeds him, who besieging Saguntum , was surprised by Cæpio , defeated, and forced to surrender at discretion; which put an end to this troublesome war, after it had continued 14 years.	IV	784
4167	2860	139	The Roman senate unjustly breaks the peace that Pompey had made, notwithstanding they had delivered up the deserters, hostages, and money agreed upon; but Popilius who came with the Roman army against them, is so weakened by the defeat they give him, that he could not attempt any thing further this campaign.	IV	784
4167	2860	139	Cendebeus , governor of all the coasts of Phœnicia and Palestine , comes with a great army, commits depredations in Judea ; but John and Judas , the sons of Simon , going against him, engage and rout him with a great slaughter.	IV	88
4167	2860	139	Cleopatra brings forth a son while his father Physcon was performing certain religious Egyptian rites at Memphis , and he called his name Memphites . At his return to Alexandria , he gave his guards (consisting of Greek and Asiatick mercenaries) leave to plunder and murder the inhabitants of that city at their pleasure, who accordingly used them with inexpressible cruelties; those who escaped death fled away, so that the city was uninhabited; to supply it with people he invited strangers from all parts to come and live there, and gave them the former citizens houses to dwell in, and endowed them with large privileges: But soon after he used these new inhabitants as ill as he had done the former. He fell in love with his wife's daughter, named also Cleopatra , first debauched her, then divorced her mother and married her. Hated by all, the murmurs of the people made him dread an insurrection; to prevent which, as the young people were assembled in the Gymnasium to see and perform the publick exercises, he caused it to be set on fire, and placed his mercenaries at the avenues, so that what escaped the fire fell by the sword: The inhabitants run to the palace set it on fire, and reduced it to ashes; but Physcon , his young wife, and Memphitis his son escaped to the island of Cyprus ; and the Alexandrians set his divorced wife Cleopatra upon the throne: He sends for his son, who was governor of Cyrene , and when he came to Cyprus to him, he caused him to be assassinated; upon which the people pull down and dash to pieces all the statues that had been erected to him, and he in requital caused his young son to be killed, cut to pieces and put in a box, and so sent to Alexandria to his mother for a present on her birthday, which still greatly heightened the resentment of the people.	III	657
4168	2861	138	Attalus Philometor , son of Eumenes , succeeds his uncle Attalus in the kingdom of Pergamus , and gives himself up to all manner of cruelties, causing most of his relations and best friends to be murdered, &c. He became melancholly, and shut himself up, and after a reign of five years died, and left the Romans heirs of all his goods, in consequence of which they seized his kingdom, &c. and made it a province under the name of Asia Propria .	III	782
4168	2861	138	The rebellion of the slaves in Sicily breaks out, who choose one Eunus for their king (who took the name of Antiochus) under whom they commit extravagant cruelties, &c. and defeat Manlius the governor of Sicily , and take and plunder his camp: The like happened to P. Cornelius Lentulus and Caius Calpurnius Piso the two following years, by which means the rebels grew very strong, and were reinforced by one Cleon , a native of Cilicia , with 5000 men, so that when the prætor L. Plautius Hypsæus landed in Sicily , he found 200,000 of them in arms, under sundry leaders. Hypsæus no sooner appeared in the field with his 8000 men, but he was attacked and defeated; and so they went on continually for many years, taking and subduing all before them.	IV	796
4169	2862	137	Brutus passes the Minus in Further Spain , enters the country of the Bracarini , and though opposed with the utmost bravery, both by men and women, yet he

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pg.
			at last conquers the whole country. But Maninus the Roman consul decamping from Numantia , is pursued but by 4000 Numantines , and has 20,000 men killed, his camp taken, and the rest dispersed. A peace is concluded, to which the consul, quaestor, and all the chief officers swear for the inviolable performance.	IV	585
4170	2863	136	Simon , with his two sons John and Judas being invited to an entertainment by his son-in-law Ptolemy , (whom he had made governor of Jericho) the son of Abasus , they going, after eating and drinking very friendly and cheerfully, are treacherously murdered by some ruffians Ptolemy had hired for that purpose: Hyrcaus , another son of Simon's , was immediately proclaimed prince and high-priest of the Jews , who fortified the city and raised a good army.	IV	89
4171	2864	135	Antiochus comes with a great army, and drives Hyrcaus into the city of Jerusalem , which he besieged, and compelled the Jews to accept of a peace, upon the conditions of surrendering up their arms, demolishing their city wall, paying a tribute for Joppa , &c. that the fortrefs of Acra should be rebuilt, and that they should receive a Syrian garison: To get off the last, Hyrcaus paid 500 talents, 300 down, 200 some time after. Hostages are given for the due performance of this peace.	IV	90
4171	2864	135	Brutus makes great conquests in Lusitania , and penetrates into the country of the Gallaici , engages an army of 60,000 Spaniards , kills 50,000, takes 6000 prisoners, and almost extirpates the whole nation. The Vardæi , a people of Illyricum , revolt, and refuse all amicable measures; upon which the consul Flaccus goes against and effectually reduces them, and has the honour of a triumph for his services.	IV	786
4172	2865	134	Jugurtha is sent by Micipsal with an army of Numidians to the assistance of the consul Scipio into Spain , where he contracts an intimacy with Marius .	IV	786
4173	2866	133	Scipio besieges Numantia (a city difficult of access, situate on a hill, with large fields within its walls, and about three miles in compass) with 60,000 men: The Numantines sue for peace; Scipio requires them to deliver up the city, themselves and arms, at discretion; the Lutians would have come to their assistance, but Scipio being informed of it, demanded the ringleaders, who to the number of 400 young men were delivered up, whose right-hands he cut off: The city reduced by famine surrenders, and all Spain soon after submits.	IV	788
4173	2866	133	Tib. Gracchus , tribune of the people, endeavouring to put the Licinian law in execution, (which forbids any one holding more than 500 acres of land) a great struggle and riot being several times raised, he was at last killed, and 300 of his friends, and their bodies thrown into the Tiber : Caius Bilus was shut up in a cask with snakes and vipers, and so perished.	IV	793
4173	2866	133	L. Calpurnius Piso the Roman consul goes against the rebel-slaves in Sicily , and attacks them under the walls of Messana , which they had invested, put them to the rout, obliged them to raise the siege, and killed 6000 of them upon the spot.	IV	796
4174	2867	132	The consul P. Rupilius goes into Sicily , besieges the slaves in Taurrominium , which being of a difficult access on all sides, he reduced it to such straits by famine that they eat one another: At last, the city being betrayed by a Syrian slave named Serapion , the consul ordered the governor and all his garison to be thrown headlong from the top of the rock. From hence the consul went to Enna , where king Eunus was, which after an obstinate defence was treacherously delivered up to the consul, who put all the slaves to the sword: In these two places 20,000 rebels were killed; Eunus escaping with 600 guards, being surrounded by the Romans , kill one another; but Eunus was taken alive, who soon after died of sickness in prison.	IV	796
4174	2867	132	Upon the death of Attalus Philometor , Aristonicus (the son of Eumenes brother to the deceased king by an Ephesian courtesan) claims the crown of Pergamus , and with a great army settles himself in the kingdom.	III	783
4175	2868	131	Rupilius continuing in Sicily in the quality of proconsul, retook all the cities from the rebels, delivered up the slaves to their masters, and drew up a new code of laws for the Sicilians , that were ever after observed: Thus having settled his province in peace, he returned to Rome .	III	784
4175	2868	131	P. Licinius Crassus , who was Pontifex Maximus , and Valerius Flaccus , who was Flamen Martialis , (or the high-priest of Mars) two persons devoted to religion, were for the first time chose consuls; and Q. Cæcilius Metellus , surnamed Macedonicus , and Q. Pompeius , both plebeians, were also for the first time chose censors, which for 220 years before, one was a patrician and the other a plebeian: They found 317,823 men in Rome able to bear arms. These censors got a law passed obliging all Romans to marry at a certain age.	IV	796
4175	2868	131	Crassus the Roman consul, with the united forces of Pontus , Cappadocia , Bythinia and Paphlagonia , goes against Aristonicus , who had seized the crown of Pergamus , and having laid the country waste, and taken immense spoil, was attacked by Aristonicus , defeated and entirely routed; Artarathes king of Cappadocia was killed, and the consul in his flight was taken and killed, and all the spoil recovered.	III	784
4176	2869	130	M. Perperna being chose consul, comes against Aristonicus , defeats him, and afterwards besieged him in Stratonice , where the garison and people being reduced to great straits, submit to the consul, and deliver up Aristonicus , who afterwards having graced his triumph, was murdered by order of the senate.	III	784
4176	2869	130	Antiochus king of Syria being killed, Demetrius , who had been nine years driven out, reassumes the crown, and reigns three years; but behaving disagreeably to his subjects, was opposed by an impostor set up by Ptolemy Phycus , called Alexander Zebina , who engaging him at Damascus , intirely routed him; and he flying to Ptolemais , they shut the gates against him, from whence he went to Tyre , where he was murdered.	III	611

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
(987)
4176	2869	130	Antiochus being slain and his army defeated, John (Hircan) threw off the Syrian yoke, and the Jews continued free from it ever after, taking several cities suitable for him, and also takes Shechem and mount Gerizim from the Samaritans , and the temple built by Sanballat , and destroyed it, after it had stood 200 years.	IV	92
4177	2870	129	John , captain of the Jews , takes all Idumea , and makes proclamation that all should depart, unless they submitted to be circumcised, which they doing, are incorporated into the Jewish commonwealth.	IV	92
4177	2870	129	Scipio Africanus (one of the greatest men Rome ever bred) is found dead in his bed, supposed to be murdered by the treachery of his wife Sempronia and the Triumvirs appointed to divide the lands among the people.	IV	798
4177	2870	129	The consul Tuditanus goes against the revolted Japudians , whom he intirely reduced, and made all quiet, for which he was honoured with a triumph.	IV	799
4177	2870	129	The consul Aquilius having reduced all Pergamus to the subjection of Rome ; the senate appoints ten commissioners, with Aquilius at their head, to settle Pergamus into a Roman province, and to make the proper subdivisions, each to depend on the metropolis, where the Roman prætor resided.	III	786
4177	2870	129	Laodice , wife of Ariarathes 6th king of Cappadocia , poisons five of her six children; but the youngest escaping, she is put to death by her subjects, who set up her son Ariarathes VII. who marries Laodice , the daughter of Mithridates the great king of Pontus , who got him poisoned, and seized the kingdom under pretence of being guardian to his children; but having held the kingdom till the children were grown up, the Cappadocians drove him out, and set up Ariarathes VIII.	III	766
4178	2871	128	Hircan governor of the Jews sends an embassy to renew the alliance with Rome , with large presents, which are accepted, and the senate gives him Joppa and Gazara .	IV	92
4178	2871	128	Marfias , general for queen Cleopatra , engages Phycon's army under Hagelochus , is entirely defeated and taken prisoner, most of their army being cut to pieces.	III	657
4179	2872	127	Cleopatra sends to her son-in-law Demetrius , now king of Syria , for help, and promises him the crown of Egypt for his reward: He comes with a great army and besieges Pelusium , but being forced to raise the siege, and return into Syria to quell a rebellion there, Cleopatra puts all her valuables aboard a ship, and flies to her daughter at Ptolemais , and so Phycon was resettled in Alexandria , and reigned over all Egypt .	III	658
4179	2872	127	Hircan sends another embassy with fresh presents to the Roman senate, with thanks for their last favours, and to beg their ratification, which the senate grants.	IV	93
4180	2873	126	Upon the death of Demetrius , Alexander Zabina gets possession of the greatest part of the kingdom of Syria , and concludes an alliance with Hircanus , prince of the Jews .	III	611
4181	2874	125	Seleucus , eldest son of the late Demetrius , sets up for the kingdom of Syria , and goes by the title of king in those parts his mother Cleopatra held; for which she, having invited him to a feast, killed him with her own hands, after he had bore that character one year.	III	612
4181	2874	125	M. Fulvius Flaccus the Roman consul goes against the Salys , who had ravaged the country of the Maffilians ; and during his absence from Italy , Fregellæ (a city of the Volsci) revolts; but they being prevailed on to submit, the ringleaders were put to death, and the city razed to the ground.	IV	800
4181	2874	125	A great part of Africa being covered with locusts, destroyed all the produce of the earth, &c. and being afterwards blown into the African sea, were thrown upon the shore in prodigious quantities and bred a plague, which swept away an infinite number of men and all kind of animals, and in Numidia only 800,000 people perished, in Africa Propria 200,000 and 30,000 Roman soldiers, about Utica and in that city 1500 a day.	VII	127
4183	2876	123	Gracchus being chose a tribune of the people, strives by all popular methods to gain the affections of the populace; he first set up stones or columns at every mile's end, and put stones along the roads to assist travellers to mount their horses, got the law passed to give lands to the poor allies, &c. then got a law passed to build publick granaries, and to fill them with corn at the publick expence, and that monthly distributions of it should be made to the poor at low rates; and other laws relating to the service and cloathing of the troops, by which means, in spite of the senate, &c. he was chose tribune a second time.	IV	801
4183	2876	123	The consul Metellus landing in the Balearick islands, who had revolted, overthrew and slaughtered them so terribly, that out of 30,000 he scarce left 1000 alive: Then he built Palm (now Majorca) and Pollentia , and was forced to bring 3000 Romans from Spain to people them.	IV	802
4183	2876	123	The proconsul Sextius gained a compleat victory over the Salys , took their capital, and sold the inhabitants for slaves; then built a new city, and called it Aquæ Sextiæ , from the hot and cold springs in and about it (now called Aix) in Provence ; then returned to Rome and had a triumph.	IV	802
4183	2876	123	Gracchus studied all means possible to humble the patricians; he got a law passed to make 600 Roman knights (who were the most wealthy plebeians) senators; and another, that the judging of all private laws should belong to the knights, exclusive of the senators.	IV	802
4183	2876	123	Cleopatra , now queen of part of Syria , sends to Athens for her son Antiochus , commonly called Grypus , who was gone thither for education, and proclaims him king, reserving the power in her own hands; he being under twenty years of age, submitted to wear only the title for some time.	III	612
4184	2877	122	A civil war breaks out at Rome between the plebeians and patricians, the first headed by Gracchus and Fulvius , and the last by the consul Opimius : A skirmish happens in Rome , wherein many are killed; upon which the consul proclaims an amnesty for all, except Gracchus and Fulvius , for whom he offers their weight

in

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			in gold ; the mob disperse, Fulvius and his son is killed, and 3000 of his party ; but Gracchus is said to retire to a sacred wood dedicated to the furies, and there orders his slave to kill him, who as soon as he had dispatched his matter killed himself. The head of Gracchus was carried to the consul, who gave 17 pounds and a half of gold for it. The consul punished all concerned in the riot with great severity ; and so the patricians got again the superiority they had before lost.	IV	809
4184	2877	122	Domitius , the Roman proconsul in Spain, overthrows the Allobroges at Vindalia upon the Rhone , and kills 20,000 Gauls, and takes 3000 prisoners.	IV	810
4184	2877	122	C. Gracchus , tribune of the Roman people, conducts a colony of 6000 Roman citizens into Africa (being the first colony that was ever sent out of Italy) and a large number of workmen, and begins to rebuild Carthage in Africa , calling it Junonia .	VII	105
4185	2878	121	The Averni , under their king Bitultick , with 200,000 men comes against the Roman proconsul Q. Fabius Maximus , who was encamped in the plains of Cavari : The Gauls are routed with the slaughter of 120,000 men, and their king taken prisoner by stratagem, and sent to Rome ; upon which peace was settled in the eastern part of Gaul . Bitultick was made a publick shew at the consuls triumph, and kept a prisoner all his life at Alba .	IV	811
4186	2879	120	Phyfon king of Egypt gives his daughter Tryphæna to Grypus king of Syria to wife, and demands of Zebina (whom he had made king of great part of Syria) homage, and an annual tribute for his dominions ; which Zebina refusing, he sends a great army under Grypus against him ; they engage, Zebina is routed, and flies to Antioch , where robbing the temples to pay his men, the inhabitants drive him out with great slaughter ; and Phyfon's army coming against him, he flies into a ship, with intent to go to Greece , but is taken by a pirate, who delivers him up to Grypus , who puts him to death, and so settles himself upon the throne of Syria .	III	613
4187	2880	119	Grypus now acting as king, as well as bearing the name, his ambitious mother took it into her head to poison him ; but he being advertised of her treachery, when she offered him the cup he desired her to drink first, which she refusing, he called in some lords of the court and charged her with it ; they insist upon her drinking the preparation, which she doing, dies in a few minutes. She had been the wife of three kings of Syria , and mother of four.	III	613
4187	2880	119	Antiochus Cyzicenus , half-brother to Antiochus Grypus , sets up for the throne of Syria , by the assistance of his wife Cleopatra (daughter of Phyfon late king of Egypt) who had been divorced from her brother Lathurus , the present king of Egypt : They engage, Cyzicenus is defeated, and flies to Antioch that had declared for him ; Grypus takes Antioch , and in it Cleopatra , who, though own sister to his wife Tryphæna , she caused to be murdered in a temple where she flew for sanctuary. Soon after Cyzicenus engaged and overthrew Grypus , and took and sacrificed Tryphæna , and drove Grypus out of the kingdom.	III	614
4187	2880	119	The consul L. Cæcilius Metellus was sent into Illyricum to reduce the Scythians , who had shaken off the Roman yoke : He defeated them in the field, and made himself master of their city and territory ; and then he unjustly made war upon the Dalmatians , who were forced to submit to his superior strength. At his return to Rome he took the surname of Dalmaticus , and was honoured with a triumph.	V	1
4187	2880	119	L. Licinius Crassus , a young orator of twenty years of age, accused Papirius Carbo at the tribunal of the prætor Q. Fabius Eburnus , and pleaded so strongly against him, that to avoid punishment he poisoned himself : This oration was so highly valued, that it was put into the hands of all learners of oratory, as a copy for them to imitate ; and Cicero called it the inimitable.	V	1
4187	2880	119	Marius , though of obscure birth among the Volsci , began now to appear as a publick person, (a man of an extraordinary size, great strength, uncommon understanding, courageous and enterprising, and of a fine aspect and savage manners) being tribune of the people, threatens the consul L. Aurelius Cotta to send him to prison, for opposing a law he had proposed about collecting the suffrages for curule magistrates, and so becomes the idol of the people.	V	II
4188	2881	118	The Roman consul Marcus , surnamed Rex , opens a way from the Alps to the Pyrenees for the Roman army, and founds a city called Narba-Marcus , since Narbonne . The people called the Stœni , at the foot of the Maritime Alps , finding themselves by this means surrounded by the Roman troops, and that they could not escape, set fire to their houses, killed their wives and children, and then threw themselves into the flames. Marcus was honoured with a triumph at his return to Rome .	V	3
4188	2881	118	Grypus returns, and overcomes Cyzicenus , and then they agree to part the kingdom, and Cyzicenus reigned at Damascus over Cæle-Syria and Phœnicie ; and Grypus at Antioch , over all the other provinces. Peace being now established, both brothers give themselves up to all manner of debaucheries and luxurioufness, &c. they likewise continually quarrel between themselves about the extent of their dominions, and neglected the due administration of justice, which gives opportunities to several cities to revolt, and set up seignieuries in themselves independent of the kingdom of Syria , viz. Tyre , Sidon , Ptolemais , Gaza , and Theodorus caused himself to be called sovereign lord of Gadara and Amathus .	III	615
4189	2882	117	C. Marius chose prætor by open bribery, for which he was tried, but came off.	V	3
4190	2883	116	C. Marius is appointed governor of Further Spain , where he behaved unblameably, and cleared the country of the banditti, and cured the people of their old way of living by rapine.	V	3
4191	2884	115	Emilius Scaurus and L. Cæcilius Metellus being consuls, Scaurus reforms Rome by proscribing games of hazard, concerts of musick, restraining luxury, &c. In his time a census being made, 394,336 citizens were found able to bear arms

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pag.
			in Rome. He subdued the Gentisci and Garni , and made a fine road from Rome to the Alps , for which he is honoured with a triumph.	V	3
4192	2885	114	C. Porcius Cato , consul, going into Macedon against the Scorisci , a people of Thrace that had invaded that province, was by them drawn into narrow passes, &c. and all his army cut off to a man, Porcius saving himself alone by flight. Upon his return to Rome he was banished to Tarracon in Spain , where he spent the remainder of his life.	V	4
4192	2885	114	Some vestal virgins are detected with polluting themselves; for which they are punished by being buried alive, and their gallants are whipped to death.	V	4
4193	2886	113	The Cimbri from the northern part of Germany near Jutland , attempt invading the Roman provinces, and defeat the consul Papirius's army; then they invade Helvetii , and enter Transalpine Gaul , and commit great ravages.	V	5
4193	2886	113	Jugurtha , Hiempsal and Adherbal succeed Micipsa in the kingdom of Numidia : Jugurtha hires the chief officer of Hiempsal's guards to murder him, and gets the kingdom divided between himself and Adherbal .	VII	129
4194	2887	112	Drusus the consul prevails with the Scordisci to quit the country they now possessed, and repays the Danube , which river ever after was a barrier between them and the Roman provinces; for which Drusus at his return to Rome was honoured with a triumph.	V	5
4194	2887	112	Jugurtha makes war upon Adherbal , overcomes and disperses his army, and besieges him in Cirtba , his capital; who appealing to Rome, they send commissioners, who return without doing any thing; whereupon Adherbal capitulates, but as soon as Jugurtha enters the city he puts Adherbal to death with cruel torments, and kills the soldiers and inhabitants, &c.	VII	129
4194	2887	112	Upon the death of Phycon king of Egypt , he bequeathed the kingdom of Cyrene to his natural son Apion , Egypt to his queen Cleopatra and one of her own sons; she prefers Alexander the youngest, but the people oblige her to take Lathyrus , the eldest, whom she compels to divorce Laodicea his eldest sister, whom he had married, and to take Selene , his younger sister; and after the death of her daughter Cleopatra , she gave Cyprus to her youngest son Alexander .	III	659
4195	2888	111	The senate of Rome resolve to make war upon Jugurtha , upon which Jugurtha sends his son to Rome to solicit for him, who is sent back without success.	V	9
4195	2888	111	Bestia and Scaurus , the Roman generals, clap up a peace with Jugurtha , upon very dishonourable terms, for the sake of large sums paid themselves.	VII	129
4196	2889	110	Jugurtha summoned to appear at Rome, appears, but through bribery escapes, and gets Massiva (the natural son of Gulussa , brother to Micipsa) murdered, to prevent his getting the crown from him. The senate disannuls the peace, and sends the consul Albinus against Jugurtha , who does nothing considerable, Jugurtha delaying the time by amulements.	VII	130
4196	2889	110	Autla marches into a defile, where Jugurtha obliges him and the whole Roman army to pass under the yoke, and to quit Numidia in 10 days; from whence he went into Africa Propria to winter.	VII	130
4196	2889	110	Hyrca high-priest of the Jews besieges and takes Samaria , defeats Antiochus , (who came with a great army to relieve it) and so made himself master of all Palestine , and the provinces of Gallilee and Samaria .	IV	94
4197	2890	109	Scaurus at the head of the commission appointed to examine into Jugurtha's affair, ended their enquiries, and banished several consular men and one pontifex, &c.	V	12
4197	2890	109	The Cimbri and Teutones defeat and rout the Romans under the consul M. Junius Silenus , in Narbonne Gaul , at the first onset.	V	12
4197	2890	109	The consul Q. Cæcilius Metellus reduces Vacca , (a large opulent city, and the greatest mart in all Numidia) and defeats Jugurtha's army in a pitched battle.	VII	131
4198	2891	108	Jugurtha is again several times defeated by Marius , lieutenant-general of the Roman army under Metellus the general and proconsul; upon which Jugurtha sends his submission to Metellus , who ordered him to send the Romans 200,000 pounds weight of silver, all his elephants, a number of horses and arms, and deliver up all the deserters, &c. which he performing, was ordered to go to Tifidum : Upon this he flies to arms again, and the Numidians massacre the Romans in a city called Vacca , which Metellus revenges very amply.	V	17
4199	2892	107	Marius becomes an enemy to Metellus , and uses all possible means, both just and unjust, to undermine and defame him; gets himself declared one of the consuls for this year, and is appointed general in Numidia instead of Metellus by the people, and behaves most audaciously impudent to all the nobility, &c. L. Cassius Longinus the other consul is defeated and killed, and the Roman army shamefully made to pass under the yoke in Narbonne Gaul by the Tigurini .	V	19
4199	2892	107	Jugurtha is defeated by Metellus before Marius's arrival from Rome with his army, who also pursued Jugurtha , and besieged him in the city Thala , whither he had carried most of his treasure: He flies from thence, and when the garison found they must be prisoners, they take all the valuable effects they can find and put them into the king's palace, and burn it, the treasure, and themselves. Upon Metellus's return to Rome he is honoured with a triumph, and the surname of Numidicus .	V	21
4199	2892	107	Marius marches to Capfa in the middle of the burning sands of Africa , takes it, levels it, puts all the citizens able to bear arms to death, and sells the rest for slaves, &c. Then he took Mulucha , (situate on the summit of a rock, and the strongest fortress in the world) puts the inhabitants to the sword, and seized the king's treasure.	V	22
4199	2892	107	Sylla and Marius defeat Jugurtha and his confederates several times, and kill a prodigious number of people each time.	V	24
4199	2892	107	Hyrca dying, his eldest son Aristobulus succeeded him in all his dignities, to which he added that of king, &c. At first he admitted his brother Antigonus a partner with him in his kingdom, but soon after put him to death, and kept his

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pg.
			other three brothers prisoners during his reign, and murdered his mother, all in one year.	IV	97
4200	2893	106	Bocchus king of Mauritania having made a truce with Marius , which is confirmed by the senate, promises Sylla to deliver up his ally Jugurtha .	V	26
4200	2893	106	Jugurtha is treacherously delivered up to Sylla , by Bocchus : Jugurtha , laden with chains, is carried by Sylla under a strong guard to Marius , who was then at Cirtba , from whence Marius sent him to Rome , where he is imprisoned.	V	27
4200	2893	106	Q. Servilius Cæpio the Roman consul recovers Toulouse from the Cimbri , and plunders the temple of Apollo of 100,000 pounds weight of gold, 100,000 pounds weight of silver, &c.	V	27
4200	2893	106	Pompey the Great born at Rome , and Cicero the orator in Arpinum , a city of the Volsci .	V	28
4200	2893	106	Aristobulus king of the Jews dies, and is succeeded by his brother Jannæus , who puts his brother to death for raising a commotion against him, then marches to Ptolemais , but is forced to raise the siege and come back to oppose Ptolemy Lathyrus , who besieged and took Azochis in Gallilee , and carried off 10,000 prisoners.	IV	93
4201	2894	105	The Cimbri , &c. cut off all the Roman army under M. Aurelius Scæurus , and make him prisoner.	V	28
4201	2894	105	Cæpio the proconsul, and Mallius , having quarrelled and separated, are engaged, and so intirely defeated by the Gauls and Cimbri , that out of the two Roman armies under their command but 10 men and two generals escaped, above 110,000 being slain, &c. The conquerors destroyed all the spoils they took, pursuant to a vow they had made before the battle; the gold and silver they threw into the Rhone ; the horses they had taken they drowned; and the prisoners they put to the sword. The people frightened and enraged at Rome , depose Cæpio , and declare him for ever incapable of serving the state.	V	29
4201	2894	105	The consul Rutilius for the first time introduced fencing-masters into Rome , and obliges all the inhabitants without distinction to take up arms.	V	29
4202	2895	104	Marius , upon the same day that he entered his second consulate, also had his triumph for his Numidian conquest: He was preceded by 3700 l. weight of gold in ingots, 5775 pounds weight of silver in bars, and 287,000 drachmæ in specie, and by Jugurtha and his two sons in chains, &c.	V	30
4202	2895	104	Vettius , a young Roman knight, having spent his fortune in debaucheries, encourages all the slaves in and about Capua to make an insurrection, and proclaimed himself their king. The prætor Lucius Lucullus goes against him, and is strongly repulsed; but having gained one Apollonius , general under Vettius , he got the city; but Vettius to prevent his being punished laid violent hands upon himself. Another insurrection upon the like account happened in Sicily , where the prætor Vicinus cut off vast numbers of them; but others assembling, chose one Salvius a flute-player for their king, who engaging, Vicinus killed 600 and took 4000 prisoners.	V	30
4202	2895	104	Jannæus (or Alexander) king of Jerusalem , and Ptolemy Lathyrus , king of Egypt , engage, wherein Jannæus loses 30,000 men: Cleopatra comes to his assistance, and saves him from utter destruction.	IV	98
4204	2897	102	Alexander king of Judea goes to Ptolemais to wait upon Cleopatra queen of Egypt , to return her thanks and make her presents for her assistance, and makes an alliance with her.	IV	98
4204	2897	102	The famous orator M. Antonius is sent with a Roman fleet against the Cilician pirates, who had carried his daughter into captivity: He soon cleared the seas of the robbers, and is honoured with a triumph.	V	34
4204	2897	102	Marius engages, defeats, and cuts off a vast number of Ambrones ; pursuing them, their wives arm and fight violently; but being overcome, offer to surrender upon assurance given them that their honour should be safe; which being denied, they first killed their children and then themselves. Three days afterwards the Teutones fall upon the Romans , even in their camp; but after a long dispute they are intirely defeated. In these two battles more than 100,000 Gauls were killed, and their king Teutobocchus taken prisoner: Their camp was plundered, &c. For this Marius was a fifth time elected consul, and allowed a triumph.	V	35
4205	2898	101	Publius Malleolus having killed his mother, (this was an unheard-of crime, which the law had appointed no punishment for) the parricide was ordered to be sewed up in a leathern sack, and with a thousand execrations cast into the Tiber .	V	37
4205	2898	101	Marius and Catulus engage and gain a compleat victory over the Cimbri , kill 120,000, and take 60,000, with two of their kings or generals, who were all sold for slaves: They also took 33 colours, and the brazen bull that they worshipped, for which both the consuls had a triumph upon their return to Rome .	V	38
4205	2898	101	Atbenio , the captain of the revolted slaves in Sicily , attacks the Roman prætor, defeats him, routs his army, takes his camp, and then besieges and takes Macella . The senate sends Aquilius the consul with an army against him, who reduced him to great straits for want of provisions; and being continued proconsul the next year, he engaged him and put an end to the war by first killing Atbenio in single combat, and then a prodigious number of his men, only 10,000 escaping to their camp, where they killed one another rather than surrender: Being reduced to 1000, one Satyrus capitulated with the proconsul; he promised them their lives, but afterwards sent them to Rome to fight the wild beasts in the shews in the Circus ; but they chose rather to kill one another. Thus ended a rebellion that had lasted four years, at the expence of near 1,000,000 of slaves. For this Aquilius had only an ovation, the senate not allowing triumphs for the conquering of rebels.	V	40
4205	2898	101	Cleopatra wickedly and falsely accuses her own son Lathyrus with offering violence to her person; for which the Alexandrians set on him with an intent to kill him; but he escapes into a ship, and flies; then Cleopatra proclaims Alexander her colleague in the crown of Egypt , and obliged Lathyrus to accept of Cyprus .	III	660

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4206	2899	100	Nonnius being chose tribune, his competitor Apuleius stabbed him, and got him self proclaimed tribune, which Marius (now a 6th time consul) confirmed, and by treachery got the great Metellus banished, and then they governed the state just as they pleased.	V	43
4206	2899	100	Theodorus , the son of Zeno tyrant of Philadelphia , having laid up an immense treasure in Amathus , Janneus king of the Jews (Alexander) besieges it and takes all the treasure; but the prince coming with a great army, suddenly falls upon him, kills him 10,000 men, routs the rest, and recovers the plunder, with a very considerable addition made thereto by Alexander's baggage, which he likewise took and carried off.	IV	99
4206	2899	100	Julius Cæsar born, in the sixth consulate of Marius , on the 12th day of the month Quintilis , which afterwards occasioned that month to be called July in honour of him.	V	43
4207	2900	99	Glaucia being disappointed of being chose consul, kills Memmius who was nominated: Then he and Apuleius break into open rebellion; but after much mischief done they submit to their friend Marius , the then consul, who, notwithstanding the orders of the senate expressly against it, he let march out of the capitol great numbers of their adherents; but the people seized Glaucia , and cut off his head; and Marius shut up Apuleius and many of his followers, and placed a guard over them to preserve them from the rage of the people, as it he intended to punish them; but the senate drives away the guards, and murders Apuleius and the heads of his gang. The new consuls begin their year with purifying the city, polluted with much bloodshed in the late troubles.	V	43
4207	2900	99	By the careful and diligent management of the consul Antoninus , the factious Sex-tius Titius is banished, and the great Metellus with all possible marks of esteem is recalled from banishment, which so enrages Marius , that he retires into Asia to stir up disturbances.	V	44
4207	2900	99	Alexander king of Jerusalem after a year's siege takes Gaza , and murders the people most cruelly, and then razed the city.	IV	99
4208	2901	98	The consul Didius overcomes the revolted Spaniards of Nether Spain , and cuts of 20,000 in a pitched battle; then treacherously invited a colony of Spaniards that were settled five years before by a Roman general, into his camp, and separating the men, women and children, into three companies, orders every one of them to be massacred, not one escaping.	V	45
4208	2901	98	Mucius Scaevola in Pergamus punished very exemplarily the publicans, or Roman knights, for misapplying the publick money, using extortions, &c.	V	45
4210	2903	96	Grypus is assassinated by Heracleon , and is succeeded by his eldest son Seleucus ; but his uncle Seleucus having seized Antioch , Seleucus goes against him with an army, and defeats him and kills him, takes Antioch , and makes himself king over all Syria : But Antiochus Eusebes (the son of the deceased Antiochus) having escaped, fled to Aradus , and was proclaimed king of Syria , and goes against Seleucus , and having cut great part of his troops to pieces, Seleucus shut himself up in Mopsuestia , a city of Cilicia ; but using the people ill, they invest his palace and set fire to it, and so destroy him and all his attendants. Antiochus and Philip , the twin-sons of Grypus , to revenge the death of their brother Seleucus , raise an army and march against Mopsuestia , took it by assault, put all the inhabitants to to death, and razed the city. Their cousin Eusebes engages them at their return, upon the banks of the Orontes ; Antiochus was drowned, but Philip retreated and disputed the kingdom with Eusebes a long time. Eusebes married Selene , the widow of Grypus , which made Lathurus king of Egypt (whose wife she had been) angry, so that he sent for Cnidus the fourth son of Grypus , and makes him king of Damascus . Philip at last conquered Eusebes , and forced him to fly to the Parthians ; so that now all Syria was divided between Philip and Demetrius ; but Demetrius striving to depose Philip , was conquered and driven out himself, and died a prisoner in Parthia . The Syrians quire tired out with the continual wars between the princes of the Seleucan family, resolved to banish all of them, and chose Tigranes king of Armenia to be their king, who governed them 18 years with great peace and humanity.	III	617
4211	2904	95	Tigranes at the death of his father was a hostage among the Parthians , who set him at liberty and let him succeed his father in the kingdom of Armenia , upon condition of yielding up to them a good part of his kingdom for his ransom: This done he enters into a league with Mithridates , king of Pontus , against the Romans , agreeing, that the conquered cities and countries should be Mithridates's , and the captives and plunder Tigranes's . Upon this Tigranes marries Cleopatra , daughter of Mithridates ; then marches into Cappadocia , and takes all the kingdom immediately, Ariobarzanes their king flying to Rome ; upon which he proclaims Ariarathes (the son of Mithridates his brother-in-law) king of Cappadocia , to the satisfaction of all the people, who was soon after dispossessed by the Romans , and Ariobarzanes restored.	III	700
4211	2904	95	The Romans declare Cappadocia and Paphlagonia free, upon which the Cappadocians affirm they can't live without a king, and choose Ariobarzanes , whom the Romans acknowledge and confirm. He was three times driven out of his kingdom, and as often restored to it by the Romans .	III	767
4211	2904	95	Alexander being both high-priest and king of the Jews , and having quarrelled with the sect of Pharisees , as he was performing his office at the great altar, was pelted and ignominiously used by that sect; which so enraged the pontiff, that ceasing from his office he was then about, orders his soldiers to fall upon the mob, who by his command killed 6000 of them, and disperses the rest; a while after these commotions broke out into a civil war that lasted 6 years, in which time he killed 50,000 of the rebels, and lost abundance of men himself: However, pitying the people, he promised to grant any thing reasonable that they

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			they would ask, for the sake of peace ; but the Pharisees required him to cut his own throat : They join Demetrius , surnamed Eucærus , who comes against Alexander with an army of 3000 horse and 40,000 foot ; Alexander is defeated, and forced to fly into the mountains with a few attendants.	IV	100
4213	2906	93	Tigranes invades Armenia Minor , kills king Artanes , routs his army, and conquers his whole kingdom in one campaign. From hence he marches among the Asiatick Greeks , and obliged all to acknowledge him for their sovereign where-ever he came, enriching himself with vast booties and great spoils ; and then invades Cappadocia a second time, and plunders the country and carries off 300,000 captives ; with these and other prisoners he builds and peoples a new and large city called Tigranocerta .	III	700
4213	2906	93	Bocchus king of Mauritania sent Sylla a present of 100 lions, and some Mauritanian hunters to fight them in the Roman circus : This fight vastly pleased the Romans , and contributed much to Sylla's promotion.	V	46
4214	2907	92	Arbaces king of Parthia sends an embassy to Sylla as he was returning from Cappadocia , where he had resettled Ariobarzanes in his kingdom, desiring to make an alliance with the Romans .	V	47
4214	2907	92	Apion king of Cyrene bequeaths his kingdom (consisting of Cyrene , Berenice , Arfinoe , Ptolemais and Apollonia .) to the Roman republick.	III	612
4215	2908	91	Drusus the tribune with great difficulty got a law passed, that a sufficient quantity of bread should be given to the poor citizens in Rome gratis ; alledging the publick treasury could afford it, being then loaded with 1,620,829 pounds weight of gold : Shortly after he was murdered.	IV	48
4216	2909	90	The Marfi , Peligni , Samnites , Campanians , and Lucanians revolt at once, and erect themselves into a separate republick, choosing consuls, prætors, and 500 senators to govern them. Corfinum (a great and strong town of the Peligni) is made their capital. The proconsul Q. Servilius , governor of the province of Picenum , is cut off, his lieutenant and all the Romans , by the revolters. Cn. Pompeius comes with an army from Rome against them ; but they put them to flight with great slaughter. The consul Rutilius and the Marfi engage, and after a long obstinate battle the Romans fly with the loss of 4000 men. A few days after they have another engagement, wherein the Romans lose 8000 men, the consul and many officers of distinction. A small time after Pompeius Silo (chief commander of the Italians) deludes Q. Cæpio the Roman general, draws him into narrow defiles, and then kills him and the greatest part of his army. The confederate revolters had great successes in other places : The consul L. Julius Cæsar , uncle to the emperor Julius Cæsar , at first was defeated at Samnium , by Vettius Cato , which with the revolt of many of his men, so imboldened Ascinus , that he braved the Romans at the gates of their camp, who sallying suddenly, put him to the rout and killed him 6000 men, which occasioned such joy, that the soldiers saluted Cæsar by the name of Imperator , which the senate confirmed. Marius likewise defeated the Maracini under Herrius Asinus , and forced him to fly into the strong holds, where Sylla attacked them, killed their general, and cut off most of their troops, and so completed the victory. Servius Sulpicius also defeated the Peligni in a pitched battle, and reduced their whole country ; then marched to the relief of Pompey , who was besieged in Fiernum by Afranius , whom he killed, and the greatest part of his men : But Marius was overcome by the Marfi , upon which he retired to Rome and laid down his command. The Umbrians and Ætrurians revolt, and are defeated.	IV	50
4216	2909	90	Selene having prevailed with many of the Syrian cities to join her against Tigranes , he goes against her with an army 500,000 men, besieges her in Ptolemais , takes it, and carries her to Seleucia in Mesopotamia , where she was put to death.	III	617
4216	2909	90	Mithridates king of Pontus invades Bythinia , and drives out Nicomedes , the natural son of the late king just now deceased, and seizes the kingdom, but is driven out again by the Roman legates, and Nicomedes reinstated, who enters Pontus , laying waste whole provinces, and destroys all with fire and sword : Mithridates complains first to the legates, and then to the senate, but without redress. All sides arm, and as Nicomedes was going to take possession of an advantageous post, Mithridates engages and defeats him, by cutting off almost his whole army and forcing the rest to fly ; he takes all their money, baggage, provisions, &c. He then attacks the Roman general Aquilius , kills 10,000 of his men, takes 300, and disperses the rest : Soon after, his admirals takes the greatest part of the 300 ships that guarded the passage of the Euxine sea at Byzantium : The Romans retiring, he over-run all Asia to Ionia , the people readily submitting to him, calling him their deliverer, their god, &c.	III	730
4216	2909	90	The consul Julius Cæsar got a law passed, That all the Nations of Italy, whose Alliance with Rome was indisputable, should enjoy the Rights of Roman Citizens. (This ever after was called the Julian law .) As war was begun for refusing this privilege, it caused many to remain friends that would have deserted, and some to return who had.	IV	51
4217	2910	89	The consul Cn. Pompeius Strabo (father of Pompey the Great) went to carry on the siege of Asculum , and destroyed the whole army of Marfi that came to relieve it, with their general Francus . The tribunes got the Julian law amended, ordaining, That all the Citizens of the allied Cities that were in Italy at the Promulgation of this Law, should be deemed Citizens of Rome if they registered their Names with any of the three Prætors in 60 Days. This brought great numbers, and the censors incorporated them into new tribes. They likewise took the authority from the Roman knights, who had most shamefully abused it, and ordered each tribe to choose 15 of their own members to administer justice in

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			civil matters. The consul Pompeius defeated Vettius Cato , and put an end to the war of the Vestini . The consul Porcius Cato attempting to force the camp of the Marfi , was killed, and the whole Roman army routed with great slaughter. But the proconsul Cosconius defeated and killed the famous Samnite , Marius Egnatius , and his successor Trebetius , killing him 15,000 men, and reduced the countries of the Larinates , Venusians and Pediculi , to obedience.	IV	52
4217	2910	89	Sylla took Stabiae in Campania by assault, then incorporates the Roman army that had killed their general Posthumus into his legions, and besieges Pompeii ; Cluentius , general of the allies, coming to relieve it, he repulsed him with great loss; but soon after coming with a great reinforcement of Gauls , Sylla cut off 30,000 of them, and took Pompeii : He then went after Cluentius to Nola , and fought him under the walls, killed him and 20,000 Samnites , plundered his camp, and went into Hirpinia , and reduced the capital Asculana and the whole country; then passed into Samnium , where he was reduced to great distress by Aponius , but got away by night and conquered the enemy, and took Bovianum by storm. The consul Pompeius reduced the city of Asculum , punished the inhabitants with the utmost severity for the murder of a Roman prætor, and saved only a few chiefs to grace his triumph, and confiscated all the lands.	IV	53
4217	2910	89	Oppius , governor of Pamphilia , is delivered into the hands of Mithridates by the people of Laodicea upon the Lycus : The Lesbians also send him Marius Aquilius in chains, with many other Romans of distinction, who upon his arrival at Pergamus , he orders first to be whipt, and then hot liquid gold to be poured down his throat. All places wherever he came submitted to him, so that his wealth was so great as to keep his vast army five years without taxing his subjects.	III	731
4218	2911	88	The rebels are generally reduced, but a civil war breaks out in Rome , between Sulpicius and Marius against Sylla , now consul. Sylla comes from the siege of Nola , enters Rome , and kills abundance of Marius's partizans, then proposes the following laws; 1. That no law should be brought before the people till it was approved of by the senate. 2. That the Comitia should be held by centuries, and not by tribes. 3. That no citizen who had been tribune of the people should be capable of any other magistracy. 4. That Sulpicius's laws should be void; which were all agreed to. Impeachments were drawn up against Marius , his son, Sulpicius , and many others; they were all prosecuted, declared enemies to Rome , and a reward set upon their heads. Sulpicius was taken and beheaded; but Marius being taken and carried to Minturnæ , the citizens help him to escape.	IV	58
4218	2911	88	Mithridates king of Pontus besieges Rhodes with a vast fleet and a great land army, which by the assistance of the Romans were defeated and the siege raised.	III	158
4218	2911	88	Mithridates orders all the Italians , men, women and children, all over Asia , to be murdered, promising great rewards to them that did it; upon which 150,000 suffered death. He then went to Rhodes , whither the Romans that escaped flew, but was twice defeated: But Archelaus his general goes to Athens , takes it, puts all the Romans and their friends to death; and so went on, till Mithridates was master of all Asia , Greece , and the adjacent islands, except Rhodes .	III	733
4219	2912	87	Cinna (one of the present Roman consuls) cites Sylla the late consul to answer for his conduct: Sylla retires to the east; Cinna orders the new citizens to come armed into the forum; Octavius the other consul orders the old citizens to do the like; a battle ensues, and much blood is spilt; at last the new citizens are drove out of the city, and the consul Cinna and six tribunes. The senate deposes Cinna , and chose L. Cornelius Merula in his room. Cinna raises a great army, and the revolted Italians join him in vast numbers. He sends for Marius , to whom abundance of slaves, &c. resort: They besiege Rome ; Marius takes all the maritime places; Ostia he took by treachery, pillaged it, put most of the people to the sword, built a bridge over the Tiber , and cut off the city's communication with the sea, and blockaded up Rome on the side of the Janiculum .	IV	63
4219	2912	87	Athens sides with Mithridates against the Romans , is besieged, and holds out long, but at last is taken by storm by Sylla the Roman general, when the slaughter was so merciless, that the very channels of the streets ran down with blood, &c.	II	736
4219	2912	87	Rome by its intestine disturbances is brought to a most deplorable condition, the plague destroying great numbers, famine more, but the sword most; for when the gates were opened to let Cinna and Marius in, all manner of butcheries and cruelties were committed, particularly by a band of slaves that constantly attended Marius , which he called Bardiæans ; but Cinna in the night-time ordered them all to be cut off. Cinna , Marius , and Sertorius conclude to murder all the senators, &c. who had opposed them, which for five days they executed, killing most of them and sticking their heads upon poles, and their mangled bodies being dragged into the forum, were left there to be devoured by dogs.	III	65
4220	2913	86	Cinna , without the choice of the people, declares himself and Marius a seventh time consuls for the year ensuing. Sylla writes to Rome , acquaints the senate of his victories, &c. and threatens to be revenged of the consuls and their adherents, for the personal injuries done him, his wife and family; upon which Marius gave himself up to excessive drinking, and so killed himself: Cinna associated with him in the government young Marius , (but not in the consulship) who put all the senators he could find to the sword. Valerius Flaccus (one of their creatures) was nominated to the consulship, who to ingratiate himself to the people, published a law declaring all debtors free from their debts upon paying a crown in the pound.	III	67
4220	2913	86	Alexander king and high-priest of the Jews engages the rebellious Jews , and defeats them with great slaughter; the remainder fly to Bethsæ , which he be-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			sieges, and after a year's time takes and treats the people with all manner of cruelties, crucifying 800 in one day, and causing their wives and children to be butchered before their faces as they hung upon the crosses; after this he continued victorious, and took many places and cities, and vast spoils.	IV	101
4220	2913	86	Sylla , with an army but of 1500 horse and 15,000 foot, engages Mithridates king of Pontus at Charonea , with 120,000 men, and kills him 110,000, with the loss only of 12 men. Soon after Dorylaeus , chief favourite of Mithridates , engages Sylla again, who in two engagements intirely overthrew Dorylaeus , and a mighty army cut to pieces.	III	734
4221	2914	85	Fimbria , lieutenant to the consul Flaccus , revolts from him, and draws the greatest part of the army along with him; then besieges him in Nicomedia , takes it by storm, and puts Flaccus to death, and makes himself commander in chief, and commits all manner of cruelties. Mithridates sends a great army against him, which he engages and entirely routs, and pursues young Mithridates and the other generals to Pergamus ; he enters it sword in hand, but the king being fled to Pritane , he pursues and besieges him there, from whence he escapes to Mytilene : Fimbria took Pritane by storm, and reduced most part of Asia , setting large fines on them; then besieges and takes Old Troy in 11 days, and puts most of the people to the sword, and burns the temple of Minerva , with many of the inhabitants who had fled thither for sanctuary, levelled the walls, and reduced the city to a heap of ashes; then racked and murdered the remainder of the people he met with.	III	736
4221	2914	85	Sylla and Mithridates have an interview, and conclude a peace, by which it was stipulated, that Mithridates should relinquish all his conquests and content himself with Pontus ; that he should release all the prisoners and captives he had taken since the war, without ransom, and pay the Romans 2000 talents: Thus in three years time Sylla drove him out of Greece , Macedon , Ionis , and the province of Asia , and killed above 160,000 of his best troops, without losing 1000 of his own. After this Sylla rebuilt Troy , and declared the Chians , Rhodian , Lycians , Magnesian and Trojans , free people and the friends of Rome ; but all the other cities he fined heavily, condemning them to pay 20,000 talents in one year, and quartering his foldiers upon them.	III	739
4221	2914	85	Cinna declares himself a third time consul, and chose Papirius Carbo for his colleague; all the other offices were filled with their creatures, and the whole government of Rome subverted. All the friends of Sylla were murdered, and their estates confiscated; which occasioned most of the men of honour and fortune to fly from Rome to Sylla for protection.	III	67
4221	2914	85	Sylla and Mithridates having concluded a peace, go against Fimbria , the lieutenant under the late consul Flaccus , and summons him at Thyatira in Lydia to surrender up his troops, upon which many revolt from Fimbria to Sylla : Fimbria hires a slave to murder Sylla , which is discovered. Sylla marches his troops against Fimbria , who retires into Pergamus and stabs himself.	V	68
4222	2915	84	Cinna and Papirius Carbo declare themselves consuls again: Cinna marries his daughter Cornelia to the famous Julius Cæsar . Sylla marches towards Rome with great threatnings; Cinna goes against him; the soldiers mutiny and kill him. Carbo now reigned alone, and raised 200,000 men to keep Sylla out of Italy . Sylla harangues his army, who take a new oath to him, and promise to commit no devastations in Italy : They are first met and joined by Metellus Pius and his men. Sylla sends offers of peace to the consul Narbo , who uses his messengers ill; upon which a battle ensues, wherein Narbo has 6000 killed, and then abundance desert the consul and join Sylla . Pompey raises an army and does the same. Scipio the other consul coming against Sylla , Sylla desires peace; a truce is agreed on, during which Sylla draws off his men, then takes the consul and his son prisoners, but sets them at liberty, with a guard to escort them safe to their friends. The consul Scipio raises a new army and goes against Pompey , but is a second time deserted, and his men go over to Pompey , who joined Sylla .	V	70
4224	2915	84	Ptolemy Alexander tired with his mother Cleopatra 's usage, retires from Alexandria to live privately: She coaxes him to return, with a design to murder him; but he being informed of it, murders her; and the Alexandrians expel him; whereupon Lathyrus comes from Cyprus , and becomes king over the whole dominions of Egypt by himself.	III	662
4223	2916	83	The temple of Jupiter Capitolinus at Rome burnt, and with it the Sybyline books, which two years afterwards Sylla ordered to be restored, by collecting the fragments and copies, &c. and thereout to make new books, which was the work of the quindecevirs, five members being added to the former ten.	V	79
4224	2917	82	The consul Narbo and C. Marius rob all the temples at Rome of their gold and ornaments, to raise money to pay their troops. Carinas for the consuls engages Metellus Pius , and is defeated with great loss: This so exasperates young Marius , one of this year's consuls, that he sends orders to Junius Brutus the prætor in Rome to murder all the friends of Sylla , which was immediately executed, among whom was Carbo the consul's brother, Pompey 's father-in-law, and Mucius Scaevola pontifex maximus; upon which Sylla advancing towards Rome , is met by the consul Marius at Setia upon the banks of the Liris , where they engage a long time, but at last Marius being deserted by seven cohorts at once, is intirely overthrown and routed with a dreadful slaughter. Sylla then marches to Rome , which opens its gates to him. His generals gained continual victories over the consular armies, which by slaughter and desertion was greatly decreased. Telefinus , a noble Samnite , raises a great army, and joins all the scattered forces of the consuls, and marches to Rome with an intent to massacre all the inhabitants and raze the city: Sylla goes and engages him, but is defeated with great loss: But Craffus , another Roman general, defeated the

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page.
			Samnites , and killed Telefinus , and took Carinas , Brutus and Censorinus , (who were soon after beheaded) and routed the rest: 3000 of them come to Sylla to beg for their lives; he orders them to kill of their countrymen so many as refused to join them; they kill vast numbers, and then 6000 of them he carries to Rome , puts them into the circus, and while he was haranguing the senate, orders all to be killed there. Marius kills himself, and all the Samnites and Prænestines able to bear arms are put to the sword that were in the city of Præneste , and the city plundered: This so terrified the inhabitants of Norba , that they set fire to their houses, and perished in the flames. The civil war now ended; Sylla put governors into all the Italian provinces, and kept small armies in several places to keep them in awe: Then he assembled the Comitium at Rome , and told them that he would put every person to the sword that had bore arms against him, proscribed 40 senators and 1600 knights, with severe penalties against any that concealed or assisted them: Cataline was the executioner of his vengeance, who slew a great many even before they knew they were proscribed. All ranks and degrees were murdered in vast numbers in Rome , and in the adjacent parts; some cities were dismantled, others excessively taxed, some demolished, and all the citizens proscribed, &c. Thus he became master of Rome , and all its provinces except Spain ; after which he got himself proclaimed continual dictator. —	V	78
4224	2917	82	Muræna the Roman general having broke the peace with Mithridates , and taken many towns, &c. Mithridates engages him, overthrows him, and drives him into Phrygia : But Sylla being now dictator, orders Muræna to return home, and sent M. Thermas to be prætor in Asia , and Gabinus to settle all things with Mithridates . —	III	739
4224	2917	82	Alexander late king of Egypt , after divers defeats, dies, and leaves a son named also Alexander . —	III	662
4224	2917	82	Thebes (a great city in the Upper Egypt) refusing to submit to Lathyrus , he besieged it, and after three years took it, and gave it to be plundered by the soldiers, who so destroyed it that it never after was famous. —	III	663
4225	2218	81	Sylla makes great changes in the laws of Rome , and restores the patrician power very much, and gives the right of citizenship to 10,000 slaves, and calls them Cornelians ; and gave his legionaries the lands of the Municipia , and colonies that had declared against him; and then orders himself a triumph for his conquests in Asia , Greece and Pontus , which lasted two days; on the first, 15,000 pounds weight of gold and 115,000 of silver, brought from Greece and Asia , were carried before him; and on the second, 13,000 of gold and 7000 of silver, which young Marius had saved out of the fire of the capitol, &c. —	V	80
4225	2918	81	Sylla sends Pompey (who had reduced all Sicily) against Domitius , who had stirred up Hiarbas (king of part of Numidia) against Sylla in Asia ; they come to an engagement; Domitius has 17,000 men killed on the spot; Pompey pursues him to his camp, which he forces, kills Domitius , and takes Hiarbas prisoner, and thereby recovered all the revolted cities of Africa . Sylla orders Pompey to disband his troops and come to Rome , which he does, and is received with the highest honour, and surnamed the Great . —	V	80
4226	2919	80	Sylla (though dictator) names himself and Q. Cæcilius Metellus for consuls, and are chose, upon which he treats all the city of Rome for many days with great profusion. Pompey requires a triumph, and after much opposition from Sylla has it. Sylla reduces Nola in Campania , and Volaterræ in Ettruria , the two only cities that held out against him. —	V	81
4227	2920	79	Cicero pleads for the first time in favour of Rofius , and having used too much freedom against Sylla , retires to Athens to complete his studies. —	V	82
4227	2920	79	Alexander king and high-priest of the Jews dies, in his camp before Ragaba , which he was then besieging, and left the kingdom to his queen Alexandra , and upon her death to which of his two sons she should choose. —	IV	102
4227	2920	79	Sylla , after having destroyed above 100,000 Roman citizens, 90 senators, and proscribed or murdered 2600 Roman knights, and buried numberless multitudes of the allies in the ruins of their cities, assembles the people, mounts the rostra, and making a speech to them, concludes with, Romans , I resign my Office, divest myself of the unlimited Power you have conferred upon me, and am ready to answer in a private Capacity whatever can be alledged against me; then dismissed his listeners, came down from the rostra, and went to his own house in the rank of a private man, and so continued to his death. —	V	83
4228	2921	78	The quarrels between the consuls threatening Rome with another civil war, Sylla retires to his country house, and gives himself up to all manner of debaucheries, which threw him into a violent disease that bred an imposthume in his bowels, which produced vast quantities of vermin that in a small time determined his life: His burial was honoured with all the pomp and publick respect possible. —	V	83
4228	2921	78	Towards the end of the consular year, Lepidus comes with a great army against Rome to force them to chuse him a second time, but is repulsed by his colleague and Pompey , and obliged to save himself by a shameful flight into Ettruria : M. Junius Brutus espousing his cause, Pompey marches against him into Cisalpine Gaul , besieges and takes Mutina , forcing him and all his army to surrender at discretion: Pompey ordered Brutus to be beheaded, but used the troops with great humanity. Lepidus having recruited his army, went a second time to Rome , but was again forced to retire, first into Ettruria and then into Sardinia , where he soon died, and his rebellion with him. —	V	85
4229	2922	77	Alexandra (queen of the Jews) having restored the Pharisees to that power from which her husband had reduced them, used it so exorbitantly as to compel her to reverse all the former decrees made against them, and to persecute the Sadducees with great cruelty. —	IV	103

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol. Page
4230	2923	76	Julius Cæsar appears for the first time at the bar, and impeaches Cn. Cornelius Dolabella , formerly prætor of Macedonia , by which he gained great reputation, tho' the accused was excused.	V 50
4230	2923	76	Ptolemy Lathyrus king of Egypt dies, and is succeeded by his only legitimate child, Cleopatra Berenice . Sylla being now perpetual dictator of Rome , sends Alexander , the son of Ptolemy Alexander late king of Egypt , to take possession of the crown of Egypt : The Alexandrians persuade him to marry Cleopatra , that now reigned, which he does, but orders her to be murdered 19 days afterwards; then reigned very cruelly for 15 years, at the end of which time the Alexandrians expel him the kingdom; upon which he went to Tyre , and died a few months after.	III 66;
4231	2924	75	The consul Aurelius Cotta consents to abolish one of Sylla's laws, and to admit the tribunes to be advanced to superior offices.	V 92
4231	2924	75	Sertorius having for many years supported the Marian faction in Spain , and advanced Lusitania into a commonwealth, and continually harassed and defeated Metellus , Hiruleius , one of his lieutenants, is attacked by Metellus , who defeats and kills him 20,000 men. Sertorius engages and defeats Pompey ; a small time after he defeated him again, and killed 6000 of his men, and soon after reduced both Pompey and Metellus to the utmost straits. Mithridates king of Pontus sends Sertorius 5000 talents, and 40 ships completely armed; and Sertorius sends him a body of troops, under the command of Marcus Marius .	V 95
4231	2924	75	Mithridates and his son-in-law Tigranes join; Tigranes besieges Cappadocia , and Mithridates Paphlagonia , with 120,000 foot, 16,000 horse, and 100 chariots armed with scythes. Paphlagonia submits; then he goes into Bythinia .	III 740
4232	2925	74	M. Antonius the Roman admiral going against the Cretan pirates, is defeated, and sees many of his ships taken, and his men hung upon the enemies masts; which so affects him, that he dies of grief soon after.	V 96
4232	2925	74	Mithridates advances with two large armies, and a fleet of 400 ships of 30 oars, and abundance of smaller vessels; the one under Diophantus Maribarus marches into Cappadocia ; the other, consisting of 150,000 foot, 12,000 horse, and 100 armed chariots, Mithridates commanded in person; and a third army commanded by Marius and Eumachus , near Heraclea in Pontus : Lucullus commanded Cotta to keep the fleet in the harbour of Chalcedon ; Cotta sends his legate Rutilius to watch Mithridates's motions, whom Marius and Eumachus meet, who slew him and cut his army in pieces; Mithridates serves several other officers in the same manner, and orders his admiral to sail into the harbour of Chalcedon , where he burnt some and sunk others, and took the remainder of the Roman fleet without opposition; 8000 sailors are killed, and 4500 taken prisoners, and 5300 land forces, all Italians . Lucullus following Mithridates to the siege of Cyzicum , kills 10,000 of his men, and takes 13,000; Lucullus a while after cuts off a large detachment of Pontines , and got the mastery of a mountain whereby he cut off all communication by land from Mithridates ; this caused both a famine and a plague in his army: They endeavoured to break up the siege and retire; but Lucullus falls upon them as they were passing the river Rhyndacus , took 600 horse, and all the beasts of burthen, 15,000 men, and put the rest to the sword: He also took Ariflonicus , the king's admiral, and a large sum of money. The king breaks up the siege, and embarks in the night. Marius goes by land with 30,000 men for Lampascus ; Lucullus follows, engages, and kills him 20,000 men. Upon Lucullus's return to Cyzicum , the people pay him the highest honours, and institute sports, and call them Lucullea ; he declared the city free, and the senate gave them the same privileges with Rome . Mithridates is said to lose 300,000 men by this siege. Lucullus comes up with the king's fleet of 50 ships, and 10,000 land forces on board, and takes 32, and puts most of the land forces to the sword: The next day Marius , Alexander , and Dionysius , three generals, are taken in a cave, and carried to Lucullus ; Marius he ordered to be put to death. The king encamps near to Lucullus ; but his detachments being several times defeated, at last his whole army runs away without being attacked, and leaves only a small guard to go with the king to his son-in-law Tigranes . In his passage he sends Bacchides to Pharnacia , to put his sisters, wives, and concubines to death, which was done accordingly. All the governors of towns, &c. in Pontus submit to Lucullus . Heraclea , a chief city of Pontus , having vigorously stood a two years siege, was at last betrayed by their governor Conacorex , who delivered up one of the gates in the night: The Romans under Cotta and Triarius murder most of the people, and plunder the town, with its temple, &c. and then reduced it to ashes. Thus was all Pontus subdued, and made a Roman province. Then Lucullus went against Armenia Minor , who all submit.	III 747
4232	2925	74	Perperna cabals against Sertorius in Spain , and strives by all means to bring him into disgrace with the people, and at last treacherously murdered him. Perperna commands the army of Sertorius , is defeated, and taken prisoner by Pompey , and by him put to death, which put an end to the war in Spain .	V 97
4233	2926	73	The Italian slaves, under one Sparticus a gladiator, make an insurrection; they first defeat the Capuan militia, then the Roman prætor Claudius Pulcher with 30,000 men, and then overthrew the prætor Vatinus .	V 97
4234	2927	72	Cnexus , one of the chiefs of the Gaulish slaves, separates from Sparticus , and is cut to pieces with his whole army in Apulia , by the consul Gellius ; upon which Sparticus falls upon the other consul Lentulus , and gave him a total overthrow; and then marched against Gellius , and defeated him. Sparticus sacrificed all the Roman prisoners round Cnexus's funeral pile.
4234	2927	72	Tigranes engages Lucullus , and is entirely defeated: But Mithridates recovers a great part of Pontus , and overthrew Fabius the Roman governor of that province, but was soon after defeated by Triarius , another Roman general.	III 749

Mithridates

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Pag.
4235	2928	71	Mithridates and Triarius engage again; the Romans are defeated with great slaughter; but the king being greatly wounded by a Roman, who was one of his own men, occasioned a retreat to be sounded, which gave the remaining Romans an opportunity to escape, having lost 7000 men, 150 centurions, 24 tribunes: After the king was recovered from his wound, he ordered all the Romans in his army to be formed into one body, and when they were retired to their tents, he ordered every man of them to be cut to pieces.	III	750
4235	2928	71	The Roman senate appoints Licinius Crassus general of the forces sent against the rebel-slaves: He dispatches Mummius his lieutenant with two legions to watch their motions; but he offering Spartacus battle, is put to flight at the first onset. Crassus soon after falls in with 10,000 of the rebels, who were laying the country waste, fell upon and cut them all to pieces. Spartacus posted himself in a peninsula near Rhegium , where Crassus shut him in with a ditch from one sea to the other, 300 furlongs long, 15 foot broad, and 15 foot deep; but Spartacus one snowy night filled up part of it, and forced his way through the enemies army, and again encamped in the open country. Part of the slaves quarrel with their leader, and separate: Crassus attacks them, and kills 12,300. Soon after Crassus engages Spartacus , kills him and 40,000 rebels: A party of them retired under the conduct of one Publiscus into Lucania , where Pompey entirely defeated them, and so put an end to this rebellion.	V	98
4236	2929	70	Pompey and Crassus are made this year's consuls at Rome . Pompey refuses to disband the troops brought out of Spain , till he has a triumph; and Crassus would not part with the command of his army, till Pompey laid down his arms, affirming that Pompey aim'd at the sovereignty, and, like Sylla , to govern by a standing army; but with great difficulty they are both prevailed upon to disband their armies, and are seemingly reconciled; but each of them strove to make themselves friends; Pompey by popularity, reinstating the tribunes in their former power, and restoring the power of judging civil causes by the Roman knights. Crassus , though naturally covetous, entertained the people with prodigious profusion at 10,000 tables, and gave corn to the populace sufficient to maintain their families three whole months, he being the richest man in all Rome , being worth 7000 talents, or 1356,250 l. sterling . This year the censorship was again revived, and the number of the Roman citizens fit to bear arms was found to be 450,000.	V	99
4236	2929	70	Queen Alexandra dies, and her son Hyrchanus , then high-priest of the Jews , is proclaimed king of the Jews by the Pharisees ; but his brother Aristobulus opposes him; they come to a battle, Hyrchan is defeated and flies to Jerusalem , whither Aristobulus follows him, and obliges him to surrender the crown and priesthood to him, which he did, after a reign of three months, and by the artifice of Antipater , the father of Herod , was persuaded to fly to Aretas king of Arabia for safety and protection.	IV	107
3237	2930	69	Aretas king of Arabia comes with an army to resettle Hyrchan in Judea : Aristobulus engages him, is defeated, and flies to Jerusalem , whither Aretas , &c. follows him, and besieges him in the precinct of the temple.	IV	107
4238	2931	68	The Cretans send 23 of their chief members to Rome to appease the senate; but P. Lentulus Spinther opposes them, and Metellus is sent against them, who entirely overthrew Lasthenes , and besieged Cydonia , the metropolis of the island, which the governor Parares surrendered: Then Metellus went to Gnosus , whither Lasthenes was flown, which after setting on fire, Lasthenes withdrew; so that Metellus conquered the whole island of Crete in one campaign.	III	172
4239	2932	67	The Cretans and Sicilian pirates, upon account of Metellus 's severity, send a deputation to Pompey , and offer to submit to him, (who was vested with an absolute power for three years, by the senate, to act and do whatever he thought advantageous for the commonwealth:) He receives their hostages, and promises them an advantageous peace, and declares Metellus had no right of acting within his proconsulate; this caused a sort of civil war between the Roman generals and troops; but Metellus taking Lappa (a strong city of Crete) put all the Cretans and Sicilians to the sword he found in it: Having absolutely conquered the island, and Lasthenes and Parares laid down their arms, all the inhabitants submitted to the yoke: Metellus changed the form of government, obliged them to live by the Roman laws, imposed an annual tribute on the whole island, and made it a Roman province. At his return to Rome , Metellus was honoured with a triumph, and the surname of Creticus .	III	172
4239	2932	67	At the instigation of Gabinus the Roman tribune, the people empower Pompey to equip 500 ships, raise 120,000 foot and 5000 horse, and to choose twenty senators for his lieutenants: He had also two quaestors, and 6000 Attic talents paid him before he left Rome . In four months time he quite cleared the seas of the pirates, taking and sinking 1300 of their ships, cutting 10,000 of their men to pieces, and taking 120 towns and castles on the sea coasts from them, setting an incredible number of captives free, and taking 20,000 prisoners, whom he sent to repeople the deserted cities of Mallus , Adana , Epiphania , and Soli in Cilicia : These successes occasioned the passing the Manilian law at Rome , whereby Pompey was made absolute governor of all the armies, fleets and provinces belonging to Rome .	V	102
4239	2932	67	Lucullus is deposed, and the Roman consul Glabrio sent to command in his stead, during which time Mithridates and Tigranes recovered the greatest part of Pontus , Bythinia , Cappadocia , and Armenia Minor .	III	750
4240	2933	66	Pompey having made peace with the Cilician pirates, offers the same to Mithridates , upon condition of his laying down his arms and surrendering up the deserters: This being refused, and both armies encamped on two hills opposite to one another, Pompey cuts a ditch 150 furlongs in circuit at the foot of the king's hill,

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			which extremely straitened the king's army, forcing them to live upon their dead horses, which perished for want of forage: He resolves to break through the Roman fortifications; and first he put all the sick and disabled to the sword, to prevent their falling into the enemy's hands, and then in the night forces his way into the open country, and marches towards Armenia Major , where Tigranes waited for him: Pompey pursues him with his whole army, overtakes and kills 40,000 of his men, with the loss of about thirty Roman soldiers and two centuries. Mithridates , forsaken by all his attendants, flies with his wife Hippocratia , his daughter Dripetine , and one officer; meets a body of mercenaries that were coming to join him, to the number of 3000, who escort him to the castle of Sinoria , on the borders of the two Armenia 's, where his treasures were; he rewarded them very liberally, took 6000 talents and retired into Armenia , from whence he sends to Tigranes ; but he being about clapping up a peace with the Romans , put his ambassadors in irons. Pompey built a city called Nicopolis in the field of battle, which he bestowed upon his old and disabled soldiers; and many resorting to it from all parts, it soon became noted.	III	753
4241	2934	65	Catiline , at the head a great number of extravagant debauchees, conspire the death of the consuls, and the seizing the government of Rome by the murder of the senate; but giving the signal at a wrong time, it proved abortive.	V	103
4241	2934	65	Julius Cæsar is this year made ædile at Rome : He courts the people by all acts of popularity possible; he finishes the Appian way, almost wholly at his own expence, and entertained the people with 320 couple of gladiators, and the Megalestian games, running himself 251,875 l. sterling in debt.	V	103
4241	2934	65	Aristobulus send ambassadors to Scaurus , one of Pompey 's generals, and offers him 400 talents for his assistance: Scaurus writes to Arctas , ordering him to raise the siege of Jerusalem , upon pain of being declared an enemy to Rome . Arctas immediately decamps, and returns homewards: Aristobulus pursues and overtakes him at Papyrion , overthrew him, killed 7000 of his men, and quite dispersed the rest. Pompey being come to Damascus , ambassadors are sent to him from Judea , Syria and Egypt , with great presents: Aristobulus sent him a golden vine, with fruit on it, upon a square mount, with deer, lions, &c. about it, all of most exquisite workmanship, valued at 5000 talents, which Pompey set up in the temple of Jupiter at Rome : Pompey orders the two brothers to appear personally before him at Damascus .	IV	109
4242	2935	64	Aristobulus and his brother Hyrca appear at Damascus before Pompey , who after hearing each side, defers the umpirage till he should come into Judea himself, intending first to subdue Arctas king of Arabia . Aristobulus goes away in a huff, and raises an army: Pompey goes after him, and at Coeca sends for Aristobulus ; who going to him, and after several conferences Pompey demands all his fortresses, &c. Aristobulus , to get his liberty, consents; but as soon as he got from him, flies to Jerusalem , whither Pompey follows him: Aristobulus comes out, offers him a large sum of money, and prostrate at his feet begs for peace: Pompey sends Gabinus with his troops to receive the money, but the garrison shuts the gates, and refuses their consent: Aristobulus is clapt in chains, and the city besieged. Hyrca 's party opens the city to him, but the other's retire within the precincts of the temple; but falling into a superstitious observation of the Sabbath, was attacked on that day, and the place taken, with the slaughter of 12,000 by the Romans , and abundance murdered themselves, the priests all the while continuing their sacrifices. Pompey puts multitudes of the captives to death, who had espoused Aristobulus 's cause, while others destroyed themselves by setting fire to their houses, and leaping from precipices, &c. Thus the whole kingdom of Judea was at once subdued by the Romans .	IV	111
4242	2935	64	Mithridates sues to Pompey for peace, but is answered, he must come in person; which he refusing, enters Pontus , and takes several places from Pompey ; but Castor , whom he had made governor of Phanagorium , having killed Tripbo , the king's favourite, to avoid the king's anger stirs up the inhabitants to revolt; but the king having four sons there, they maintained the castle against Castor , who besieged, and took it and them, with their sister Cleopatra , and sent them all to the Romans . Mithridates sends eunuchs ambassadors to the Partians , with the offer of his daughters to such princes as would assist him; but their guard murders them, and delivers up the girls to the Romans , as well as themselves: Soon after Pharnaces his son was proclaimed king by the soldiers, &c. who grew weary of his severe government, upon which he poisoned himself, and such of his daughters and concubines as remained with him; the women died, but he survived, and was forced to stab himself to get rid of his life, at the Panticapæum in the Cimmerian Bosphorus , in the 60th year of his reign; during which time he subdued 24 nations, and could speak all their languages fluently; he was an excellent scholar, and wrote many books of physick, and as great a statesman and general as the age he lived in afforded, &c.	III	756
4243	2936	63	Pompey bestows the kingdom of Bosphorus upon Pharnaces , son of Mithridates late king of Pontus , and honours him with the title of friend and ally of Rome ; upon which he orders all his governors, &c. in Pontus to submit to Pompey , and deliver all the treasure to him. In the city of Tulaura Pompey found 2000 onyx cups set in gold, and a vast number of rich saddles set with jewels, &c. the statues of Minerva , Mars and Apollo , of pure gold, &c. Pompey having reduced Pontus into a Roman province, goes to Ephesus , and in a fleet of 700 ships sails for Italy ; and coming to Brundisium , to take off all suspicion, disbands his army. His triumph (which lasted two days) was attended with 124 captives of distinction; he would not suffer any of them to be put to death, but sent most them back to their respective countries detaining only those of royal extraction; delivered 20,000 talents into the publick treasury, notwithstanding he had distri-

			(999)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			buted 16,000 talents among the officers of his army, and given every soldier 50 sesteritiums.	III	758
4243	2936	63	Cicero , the now consul, acquaints the senate of Catiline's conspiracy to his face; upon which 'c.s enacted, that the consuls should take care that the republick suffered no detriment, by an antient form, that invested them with absolute power to raise men and money for war, &c. Catiline prompts Cethegus , Lentulus , &c. to set the city on fire; goes into Hetruria , takes upon him the command of an army, is declared an enemy to Rome by the senate, and his companions seized and executed.	V	108
4243	2936	63	Hyrcau is restored to his pontifical dignity at Jerusalem , with the secular title of prince, tributary to Rome , but forbid to resume the diadem, or royal stile, or to extend his dominions beyond the old borders of Judra . Pompey , to mortify the Jews , orders the most holy places in the temple to be opened to him and his attendants, where he viewed the golden table, candlestick, censers, lamps, &c. the spices and rich perfumes, &c. and 2000 talents in the treasury, all which he left untouched, and ordered the priests to purify it, and go on with their usual worship: Then he commanded the walls of Jerusalem to be pulled down, and left Scaurus with a sufficient force governor of it, and returned with Aristobulus , his two sons and two daughters captive; but Alexander , one of the sons, made his escape.
4244	2937	62	Alexander (son of Aristobulus , the deposed king and high-priest of the Jews) is defeated by the Roman general, with the loss of 3000 men killed, and many taken prisoners, who afterwards followed and besieged him in Alexandriou , where he surrenders up all the fortresses he had seized, which the Romans demolished, and then divided the Jewish state into five districts, and appoin's separate courts of judicature at Jerusalem , Gadara , Amath , Jericho and Sepphoris , changing the government from monarchical into aristocratical.	IV	114
4244	2937	62	The proconsul Antonius pretends to be sick, and resigns the command of his army to Petræus , his lieutenant, who engages Catiline , kills him and 3000 of his troops, and so quashed the rebellion, by punishing the guilty heads wherever they were taken.	V	109
4244	2937	62	Julius Cæsar is made Pontifex Maximus , and divorces his wife Pompeia , for her amorous intreagues with P. Clodius , a debauched young patrician.	V	110
4245	2938	61	Ptolemy Auletes (or the flute-player) the natural son of Ptolemy Lathyrus , succeeds in the throne of Egypt , by the choice of the Alexandrians : He was the most effeminate king that ever had been in Egypt : He purchased an alliance with Rome at the price of 6000 talents, or 1,162,500 pounds sterling, but was soon after drove out of the kingdom by the Alexandrians , who set up his daughter Berenice , who marrying Seleucus king of Syria , soon after caused him to be strangled, and married Archelaus , high-priest of Comana in Pontus .	III	666
4246	2939	60	Cæsar being appointed governor of Further Spain , comprising Lusitania and Bæ-tica , viz. Portugal and Andalusia , was stopped by some of his creditors; Crassus pays some, and becomes surety to others for 830 talents, or 160,812 pounds sterling. When he arrived in Spain , he subdued several nations that had never yet been subject to Rome , and returned home, bringing with him sufficient to discharge all his debts, amounting to 1,600,000 l. sterling. Pompey and Crassus being at variance, he undertakes to reconcile them, and proposes all things to be managed by them three, called the first great triumvirate.	V	112
4247	2940	59	C. Julius Cæsar being chose consul, proposes to divide the lands belonging to the state in Campania among such poor Roman citizens as had three children or more: The senate opposed it to the utmost, but the people pass it tumultuously.	V	114
4248	2941	58	C. Julius Cæsar gets himself the government of Transalpine and Cisalpine Gaul for five years, with the command of four legions, contrary to all law, &c.	V	114
4248	2941	58	Clodius being advanced to the tribuneship at Rome , used all his power against Cicero , who had accused him about Cæsar's wife, and got him banished, burnt his fine palaces at Rome , and his country houses, and confiscated all his estate.	V	116
4248	2941	58	Cæsar engages the Hetrurians , who had burnt down their own towns and houses with a resolution to enter Gaul , cuts off 130,000 of them, and the rest submit: Cæsar obliges them to lay down their arms, and sends them back into their own country. Soon after he engaged Ariovistus , intirely defeated him by cutting off most of his troops; himself escaped with difficulty cross the Rhine , but his two wives and one of his daughters perished; and another of his daughters, and a great many Germans of distinction were taken prisoners.	V	118
4249	2942	57	Cicero is recalled from banishment with all the demonstrations of joy possible, and received with the greatest respect at Rome , where he has his palace rebuilt at the publick expence, &c.	V	119
4249	2942	57	The several nations of Belgium conspire against the Romans : Cæsar marches against them; the Rhemi submit, but the rest appoint Galba king of the Suef-jones their commander, being 150,000. Cæsar attacks them as they are crossing the Axona , now the Aisne , and made such a dreadful slaughter of them, that they relolved to disperse and return home. Several places submitted; but the Nervii (a very fierce people) fell upon Cæsar's army, and killed abundance of them; but at last, Cæsar having destroyed almost all of the young men, the old men, women, and children surrendered. Then going against the Advatice , they pretended to give up their arms and submit; but having concealed a third part of them, attacked the Romans in the night, for which Cæsar the next day broke down the city gates, put many to the sword, and sold the rest (to the number of 53,000) for slaves. This brought the submissions of several nations beyond the Rhine , and vast spoil and treasure to Cæsar .

Aristobulus

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4249	2941	57	Aristobulus and his son Antigonus escapes out of prison at Rome , and returns into Judea , who with 8000 men that he had collected, sets about building the castle of Alexandria ; but the Romans engage, defeat, and kill 5000 of his men, and force him to fly with 1000 into the ruined castle of Macheron , where after two days stout resistance, they take him by assault, and send him and his son prisoners to Rome , where he remained to his death, but the rest of his family was set at liberty.	IV	114
4250	2943	56	Alexander son of Aristobulus raises a large army and comes again into Judea , and conquers all before him; but being at last engaged by Gabinus , the Roman general, near mount Tabor , is intirely defeated with the loss of 10,000 men killed on the spot, and the rest dispersed.	IV	115
4250	2943	56	Gabinus governor of Syria undertakes to restore Ptolemy Auletes to the throne of Egypt for 10,000 talents, or 1937,500 l. sterling , one half to be paid down, which is agreed to. Accordingly, he sends Mark Antony , who marches into Egypt and takes Pelusium , and Gabinus marches into the heart of the country, and is met by Archelaus , the husband of Berenice ; they engage, the Egyptians are all cut off, and Archelaus taken, who is set at liberty for a large ransom, and being several times defeated, is at last besieged in Alexandria , where after defending the place to the last extremity, he marches out, and engages the Romans , who killed him and routed his army, and so re-establishes Auletes again upon the throne of Egypt , who first put his daughter Berenice to death, for accepting the throne from the Alexandrians , and then destroyed most of the great men for driving him away, confiscating their goods to raise money to pay Gabinus , &c.	III	671
4250	2943	56	Galba , one of Cæsar's lieutenants, being attacked at Ododurus by a great body of Gauls , he defeats and kills 10,000 of them. Cæsar having appointed Brutus his admiral, sends him against the Veneti , who engages their fleet, and obtains a compleat victory; whereupon the Veneti submit, but Cæsar puts the chiefs to the sword, and sells the rest for slaves. Craffus goes against part of the Aquitani , and kills 30,000 in one battle, and so reduced all Aquitane .	V	121
4251	2944	55	Cæsar attacks the Usipites and Tenchtheri , of whom he cut off almost 400,000; then ordered a bridge to be built over the Rhine , entered Germany , plundered and sacked the Sicambri , and frightened the Suevi , and returned in 18 days to Gaul again, and broke down the bridge.	V	112
4251	2944	55	Cæsar prepares to invade Britain ; the Britains send ambassadors into Gaul to him, offering to submit and give hostages: He marches into Piccardy , and from thence sails into Britain , lands, is opposed, and defeats the Britains : They sue for peace, and deliver hostages. A storm shatters his ships; the Britains fall on his seventh legion; he comes to their assistance, and intirely overthrows the Britains with great slaughter several times, and then returns to Gaul . The senate order a supplication or general thanksgiving, for 20 days, for Cæsar's success in Britain .	VII	423
4251	2944	55	The Trebonian law (so called from Trebonius , the tribune of the people) passed at Rome , whereby Cæsar had the command of Gaul , &c. given him for 5 years; Craffus Syria , Egypt and Macedon ; and Pompey the two Spains for the same time, absolutely, (so that no power could reach them for that time) with full power to raise men, money, &c.	V	123
4251	2944	55	Atius (one of the tribunes of the Roman people) strove with all his might to hinder Craffus , the consul, and one of the triumvir's, going into Asia ; but being opposed, went so far as even to arrest his person; but eight of his colleagues delivered Craffus from the officer who had seized him; Pompey conducted him out of Rome with a strong guard; but Atius coming to the city gate through which he was to pass, threw perfumes into a fire he had caused to be kindled there, and cursed Craffus with a thousand imprecations and invoking of the infernal gods. Craffus leaves Rome , and coming into Syria (the province assigned him) marches to Jerusalem to seize all the treasures that Pompey had left untouched: Eleazer , one of the priests, in order to satisfy his avaricious temper, discovers to him a golden raster, weighing 3000 Hebrew , or 750 common pounds; but though he had solemnly sworn he would meddle with nothing else, as soon as he had got that, he plundered the treasury of 2000 talents, and the temple of all else that was valuable, to the amount of 8000 talents more: From hence he went into Parthia , though then in alliance and peace with Rome ; he besieges Nicephorium , which Dio the governor offered to surrender; but when Craffus sent a party to take possession, Dio surrounded and cut them all to pieces. Craffus takes the city by assault, sold the inhabitants for slaves, and confiscated their goods.	IV	296
4252	2945	54	Cæsar lands a second time in Britain , without opposition, the people being frightened at his great number of ships, pretending they had not sent the hostages agreed upon: He marches against and defeats the Britons ; a storm destroys and shatters a great part of his fleet; the Britons often attack him, but are always defeated with great loss. Having ravaged the country he returned to Gaul .	VII	426
4252	2945	54	Julia (the daughter of Julius Cæsar and wife of Pompey) dies, who while living behaved with so extraordinary a prudence, as to keep her father and husband from coming to an open rupture, which soon after broke out between them, and was so highly honoured and esteemed by all ranks of people, that she was buried in the field of Mars , an honour allowed only to great heroes, and never to any woman before.	V	124
4252	2945	54	The Gauls make a general insurrection: Cæsar upon account of a famine that then was, being forced to divide his army and place them in different parts in small parties, several of them are cut off, but at last he reduced them again to obedience, having a reinforcement of two legions from Pompey .	V	124

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(1001)	Vol.	Pag.
4252	2945	54	Crassus spends much of his time in improving, by all scandalous methods, the annual income of his province, by robbing the temples, extorting extravagant sums from the people, &c. and by neglecting military discipline his soldiers became effeminate. Orodes the Parthian king sends ambassadors to Crassus , complaining of his usage, and desires his reasons for it; but Crassus answering very haughtily, is at length attacked at Carrhae , by Surenas the Parthian general, his son is killed, himself defeated, and his army routed with great slaughter, and his camp took and plundered; and pursuing Crassus , takes him by a treacherous proposal of conferring about a peace, kills him and his attendants, and cuts off his head, and brings it to Orodes , who ordered his mouth to be filled with melted gold, thereby reproaching his avariciousness. In this battle 20,000 Romans were killed, and 10,000 taken prisoners.	IV	306
4253	2946	53	Pompey postponed the election of new consuls for seven months, and his creature C. Lucius the tribune proposed to the people to make Pompey dictator; but Cato , &c. opposing it strongly, Domitius Calvinus and Valerius Messala were chose consuls for the remaining five months; but corruption was so notoriously settled at Rome , that the candidates for the curule offices brought their money openly, and the heads of the faction employed force, so that many massacres happened in the installing them in their offices.	V	124
4253	2946	53	Orodes king of Parthia having made peace with Artabazes king of Armenia , and becoming jealous of the growing power of his general Surenas , who had lately defeated the Romans and killed Crassus , orders him to be put to death.	IV	306
4254	2947	52	Orsaces general of Orodes king of Parthia enters Syria , and conquers all the country from Euphrates to Antioch , and besieged it: Cicero meets a large party of Parthian horse, and cuts them all off to a man; this forces them to raise the siege, and Cicero falls upon them and cuts off great numbers, and their general Orsaces , as they were making their retreat.	IV	306
4254	2947	52	Cassius the Roman general besieges Tarichæa (a city on the south shore of the lake Gennesareth) where Pitalaus with the remains of Aristobulus's party were; he takes and carries off 30,000 Jews prisoners, and Pitalaus he puts to death.	IV	116
4254	2947	52	Pompey and his faction creates great disturbances and does much mischief, and he is declared sole consul at Rome , a thing never known before; and new troops, with 1000 talents to pay them, are allowed him: But he having married Cornelia , the daughter of an eminent senator, Q. Cæcilius Metellus , associates him with him in the consulship, which greatly pleased the patrician senators.	V	127
4254	2947	52	Cæsar after having reduced the revolted Gauls in Transalpine Gaul , sends vast sums of money to be distributed among his partizans in Rome , and the populace, paying the debts of some, lending money without interest to others, and obliging and caressing all, he himself staying in Insubria , during which the Gauls revolt again, and though winter, goes against them, besieges Noviodunum ; prince Vercingetorix , the Gaulish generalissimo, comes to their relief; Cæsar defeats him, takes the town, and marches to Avaricum and takes it by storm, and out of 40,000 Gaulish troops, kills all but 800. The Edui revolt, and kill all the Italians in their capital, seizes Noviodunum , and in it Cæsar's military chest, baggage and provisions, and then set fire to the town: In return, Cæsar besieges Alesia , in which was Vercingetorix , with 80,000 men; 16,000 Gauls come to his relief, who engaged three times, but were as often defeated with great loss: The city, being compelled by famine, surrenders at discretion; and so he reduced the Gauls once more, for which 20 days thanksgiving to the gods were ordered at Rome .	V	127
4255	2948	51	The Parthians return, and besiege Antioch a second time, but are obliged to raise the siege, to suppress a rebellion raised by one of their own noblemen.	IV	306
4255	2948	51	Several of the Gaulish communities revolt, which Cæsar continually defeats, and reduces Uxellodunum , a strong place, holding out a long siege against Caninius , one of his generals: Cæsar goes himself, reduces the place, and cuts off the right hands of all able to bear arms; and having now reduced all Gaul from the Pyrenees and Alps to the Rhine , turns it into a Roman province. He is said to have taken 800 cities, and subdued 300 different nations, and defeated 3,000,000 men, 1,000,000 killed, and 1,000,000 taken prisoners, in his several expeditions against the Gauls .	V	129
4255	2948	51	Ptolemy Auletes , king of Egypt , dies, and makes the Romans executors of his will, by which he bequeathed his crown to his eldest son and eldest daughter, ordering them to inter-marry: Pompey is appointed guardian; but Photinus the eunuch, and Achillas , general of all the forces, depose Cleopatra , with intent to reign absolutely, the young king being but thirteen years old: She retires into Syria and Palestine , raises a great army, and heads it herself, being about seventeen years of age.	III	678
4256	2949	50	Scribonius Curio , a great enemy to Cæsar , is by Pompey set at the head of the tribunes; the most debauched and extravagant patrician in Rome , who, though but young, had contracted debts to the amount of 600,000 great sesterces, or 4,843,750 l. sterling . A census is made by which 320,000 citizens fit to bear arms are found in Rome , which is ended with a lustrum: This is the last census under the republic.	V	129
4256	2949	50	Cæsar for 1500 talents, or 310,625 l. sterl. buys over the consul Æmilius Paulus , and the tribune Curio for great sums.	V	129
4257	2950	49	The Roman senate makes an order, declaring Cæsar an enemy if he did not resign his office of proconsul, at a short limited time; and ordering the consuls, &c. to provide for the publick safety. Both sides arm powerfully against each other, and the commonwealth, Pompey reigning with the absolute uncontrollable power of a king, under the name of generalissimo, and his friends nominated to all the posts of honour and profit in Rome and all its provinces.	V	131
4257	2950	49	Mark Antony , Cassius Longinus , and Curio , three of the tribunes, are driven out of Rome for speaking in Cæsar's favour: They fly to his camp in the disguise of

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol. Page
4257	2950	49	slaves: Upon their arrival Cæsar shews them to the legion he had with him, exaggerating their and his ill usage, &c. begs their defence and protection, which they all promise; upon which he crosses the Rubicon into Italy, and seizes Arminium, and orders all his army in Gaul to come to him there. Rome and all its inhabitants are in the utmost consternation at Cæsar's taking Arminium. Pompey retires to Capua, and declares all should be treated as traitors that did not attend him: Upon which the consuls, senators, and magistrates left Rome to wait on Pompey. Cæsar takes all places where he arrives, with little resistance, pardons all the senators he takes, and uses great mildness to all degrees of people. Pompey quits Capua, and retires to Brundisium, whither Cæsar followed and besieged him; from whence Pompey and his army escapes by stratagem on board his fleet, and left Cæsar master of all Italy from the Alps to the sea; then sends Curio with three legions into Sicily, which Cato abandoned as soon as Curio landed, and ordered Valerius his lieutenant to go into Sardinia, where the inhabitants join him, and drive away Aurelius Cotta, who commanded there for the senate, and submit to Cæsar, who sent for all the senators he could come at to come to him at Rome, particularly Cicero, but could not prevail on him to come. To so many as came he proposed to send a deputation to Pompey, and to settle all things amicably, as hitherto no blood was spilt; but none of the senators would take upon them the message. Cæsar goes to the public treasury, breaks open the doors, and takes out ('tis said) 300,000 pounds weight of gold: With this money he raised troops all over Italy, and sent governors to all the provinces subject to Rome: This occasioned a general war in all parts of the known world, Pompey having done the same. Cæsar goes into Spain, where many declare for him: But violent rains and the melting snow so overflowed the two rivers between which his army lay, that his bridges were broken down, and his communication cut off from those towns that supply'd his army, so that a famine raged among them, a bushel of wheat being sold for 50 Roman denarii, or 1 l. 2 s. 3 d. $\frac{1}{2}$ sterl. Upon this Cicero and many senators at Rome hasten to join Pompey. However, Cæsar (by the help of boats and great labour) got succours and forced Asranus and Petrius out of Hisiber Spain, without a battle, and obliged them to disband their troops, and swear never to make war on Cæsar. One legion in Further Spain deserted from Varro, Pompey's governor in Further Spain, which obliged him to surrender his other legion, and all his money. Cæsar now master of all Spain, appoints Cassius Longinus governor of both provinces, with four legions to defend them, and returns to Marseilles, which surrendered; he grants them their lives and liberties, but strips them of all their arms and their ships; and then returned to Rome, when M. Æmilius Lepidus names him dictator, which he accepts, without abusing his power: He grants to all the Gauls beyond the Po the rights of Roman citizens, and got himself and Servilius Isauricus declared consuls.	V 132
4257	2950	49	Cæsar releases Aristobulus, the captive king and high-priest of the Jews, out of prison, and sends him with two legions into Palestine, to keep Syria in awe; but Pompey's party find means to destroy him by poison: Alexander his son coming with some troops to his father's assistance, Q. Metellus Scipio, Pompey's governor in Syria, takes him and beheads him.	V 137
4258	2951	48	Cæsar confirms Hyrca in the Jewish high-priesthood, and makes Antipater procurator or lieutenant of Judæa, and citizen of Rome; and adds abundance of favourable privileges to the Jews, and that they might be publicly known, causes his grant to be engraved on tables of brass, and hung up in the temples of Tyre, Sydon, Ascalon, and the capitol at Rome.	IV 116
4258	2951	48	Cleopatra causes herself to be conveyed to Cæsar, in Alexandria, where enamoured with her beauty, he espouses her cause, has a son by her called Cæsarion, afterwards obliges her to marry her younger brother Ptolemy, a lad of 11 years old, by which means she reigned absolutely over Egypt.	IV 117
4258	2951	48	Cæsar goes in quest of Pompey, and is reinforced by all nations and people. Pompey had likewise a vast army and fleet. Pompey and 200 senators reside at Thessalonica, where they assemble and give orders as if at Rome, from whence all the great men flew to him, calling him the Good Cause, and Cæsar and his adherents the Abettors of Tyranny. Cæsar first goes to Oricum (a strong city in Epirus) which surrenders as soon as he approaches: Then he marches to Apollonia, on the confines of Macedon, another important place, which does the like: From hence he goes to Dyrrachium, another strong town in Macedon, the magazine for Pompey's arms and provisions. In the mean time Cæsar is informed a Squadron of Pompey's fleet had attacked his fleet, taken 30 of them, and burnt them with the men in them. Cæsar sends Vibullus Rufus, a friend of Pompey's, whom he had taken prisoner, to propose the disbanding both their armies in three days, renew their former friendship with solemn oaths, and return to Italy. Pompey refuses: Cæsar again sends Vatinius to treat with him; but while he was treating with Labienus, Pompey's men attacked and wounded them. Gabinus and his men endeavouring to go through Illyrium to join Cæsar, is killed by the Illyrians, who had declared for Pompey, and all his army to a man cut off. Soon after, Cæsar being strongly reinforced, besieges Pompey and his army, and reduces them to great straits for want of forage. Pompey gains advantages several times in skirmishes, so that Cæsar is obliged to decamp, and retire to Apollonia, where he paid his men, and left the wounded, and then marches into Macedon, is joined by Domitius with three legions; then goes into Thessaly, which all submit to him: Pompey follows him, and at last by the importunity of his commanders, contrary to his own inclinations, comes to a general battle in the plains of Pharsalia, near Thebes; Pompey's people were so confident of victory as to lay in their claims for their respective offices in the state, &c. depending upon their number; being 45,000 foot, 7000 horse, well armed, and	III 678

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			(1003)
4258	2951	48	a great number of dartmen and slingers. Cæsar had but 20,000 foot and 1000 horse : They engage, and Cæsar intirely defeats them with great slaughter, and Pompey gets away in disguise.	V	146
			In the battle of Pharsalia Cæsar is said to lose but 200, thirty whereof were centurions, which he buried with great solemnity. Pompey had 25,000 slain, ten of which were senators, and forty Roman knights, and 24,000 were taken prisoners, eight eagles and 180 ensigns. Cæsar ordered all the citizens immediately to be set at liberty, and then pursues after Pompey to Larissa , and from thence to Tempe in Thessaly , from thence to Mytilene , where he took into his ship his wife Cornelia and his son Sextus , and sails to Attalia in Pamphilia , and from thence goes to Egypt , where he is slain, and his head cut off and embalmed. Cæsar pursuing him, upon his arrival at Alexandria Pompey's head is presented to him, which he caused to be buried with great pomp in the temple of Nemesis , the goddess of revenge, in the suburbs of Alexandria . Cæsar demanding the money that Auletes owed him, Photinus the young king's minister put him off with delays, and stirs up the mob against him, who had now only 3200 foot and 800 horse ; whereupon Cæsar is forced to take shelter in the king's palace, summons Cleopatra and her brother Ptolemy to come before him, that he might determine the difference between them, and orders them to disband their armies. Cleopatra causes herself to be carried privately, and so enamoured him that he declared on her side, sends for Ptolemy , and presses him to make up all difference with his sister : Ptolemy runs into the street, takes the diadem off his head, tears it to pieces, and throws it on the ground, and complains to the people of being ill used, who all rise against Cæsar ; but Cæsar appeased them with fair words, and bringing Ptolemy and Cleopatra out before the people, caused Auletes' will to be read, and declared they should reign jointly ; and then also declared that Ptolemy the younger son and Arctinoe the youngest daughter should reign jointly in Cyprus ; but Pothinus the chief minister uses all his skill and power among the people, and Achillas the general besieged Cæsar with 20,000 in Alexandria , and murdered one and abused another ambassador Cæsar sent to him ; Cæsar was forced to burn what ships were in the port, some of which when on fire run ashore, and set fire to the famous library that at an immense expence was collected by several kings, to the amount of 400,000 volumes. Cæsar detects Photinus in corresponding with Achillas , and puts him to death ; upon which the eunuch Ganymedes conveys young Arctinoe to the army, who proclaim her queen, and putting their general Achillas to death, Ganymedes succeeds him in that office : Cæsar defeats him in two sea engagements, with great loss : The Alexandrians demand their king, and offer to cease all hostilities ; Cæsar complies, but the young king strives to intercept Cæsar's provisions ; this occasioned a third sea fight, wherein the Romans came off victorious.	III	678
4258	2951	48	Mithridates , Antipater , and Hyrchanus jointly come to the assistance of Cæsar : They take Pelusium , and advanced towards Alexandria , and are engaged by the Egyptians , whom they totally rout. Cæsar goes out of the city, and joins Mithridates and Antipater : Ptolemy with his whole army engages them, has 20,000 cut to pieces, 12,000 taken prisoners, and the king himself was drowned in the Nile , after three years and eight months reign : Upon this Cæsar returns to Alexandria , proclaims Cleopatra queen, and obliges her to marry her younger brother, a lad of eleven years old.	III	679
4258	2951	48	Upon Pompey's death, the senate and people of Rome declare Cæsar consul for five years, dictator for one year, tribune of the people and head of that college for life, with power to make peace and war at pleasure, to levy what sums he thought fit, &c.	V	153
4258	2951	48	Pharnaces , (king of the Cimmerian Bosphorus , son of Mithridates the Great) taking advantage of the civil war between Pompey and Cæsar , seizes a great part of his father's dominions. Cæsar sends Domitius against him ; He engages Domitius the Roman general, defeats him, and cuts off most of his army ; but Cæsar himself marching against him, he desires peace, sends him a crown of gold, offers him his daughter, and to submit to any thing he should require. Cæsar ordered him to retire from Pontus immediately, release all his prisoners, and to restore the Romans all their goods he had seized : He promised, but delayed : Cæsar attacks and defeats him, cuts off or takes most of his army, and that so expeditiously as to make him use this memorable sentence, I came, I saw, I conquered , in a letter to Anitius at Rome . After this he made Mithridates Pergamenus king of Bosphorus instead of Pharnaces .	III	706
4259	2952	47	Pharnaces having raised some recruits, is engaged by Asander , whom he had made governor in Bosphorus , and who had seized the crown while he was in Pontus , and is slain, and his army cut to pieces, after he had reigned in Bosphorus 15 years, which Pompey gave him. Upon his death Pontus was again reduced to the form of a Roman province.	III	707
4259	2952	47	Cicero , upon Cæsar's return to Italy , goes to make his court and submission to him, for having espoused Pompey's cause : Cæsar meets him with the highest respect, civility, and good-nature ; the like he did to all the other great men who came to see him ; and coming to Rome , he restored peace and tranquility ; but those particular persons who still remained in arms against him, he confiscated their goods and sold their estates.	V	156
4259	2952	47	Cæsar again chose consul, goes into Africa , where Pompey's party were still very numerous. He summons Considius , commander of Adrumetum , to surrender, who kills his messenger, and goes out against him. Cæsar being but illly provided with troops, decamps ; Considius pursues and harrasses him, till he got to Leptis , where part of his troops from Sicily were come, from whence he sent orders for the rest to come ; but in the mean time is greatly distressed for want of

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(1004)	Vol.	Page
			of forage, and frequently defeated in parties; but receiving more succours, he went to Utica to besiege it, and was himself besieged by three armies under Juba king of Mauritania , Scipio general of the Roman forces, and Labienus his lieutenant. Cæsar having offered the enemy battle, and they refusing, he decamps and goes to Thapsus , whither he is followed by the three armies. Cæsar falls upon Scipio first, and puts him to flight; then Labienus , and defeats him; and then Juba , and routs him, killed 50,000 men, takes the three camps, and loses but 50 of his own men. Thapsus surrendered, and all the heads of the party either laid violent hands on themselves, or were taken prisoners, and put to death, except Labienus , who escaped. Cato maintained Utica , where he governed with a senate of 300 Romans , who upon the approach of Cæsar resolve to submit: Cato stabs himself, and Utica surrenders. All Africa being now Cæsar's , from hence he goes into Mauritania and Numidia , reduces both kingdoms, and makes them Roman provinces, which he ordered to be pillaged and plundered, to prevent their revolting.	V	165
4259	2952	47	Herod , son of Antipater , being made governor of Gallilee , goes against and subdues the banditti that infested the country round about, killed many, and took some prisoners, whom he put to death, for which he is cited to answer to the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem , who would have condemned him, but he made his escape to Damascus , and remained there under the protection of Sextus Cæsar , the Roman governor of the province.	IV	120
4261	2954	45	Cæsar returning to Utica , orders the rebuilding of Carthage and Corinth , (which two years afterwards were repopled by Roman colonies, sent to settle in them) and set sail for Italy ; and upon his arrival at Rome he is received with all possible marks of joy and honour, and publick thanksgivings are made in all the temples for 40 days for his successes: He is decreed four triumphs, in which kings, princes, &c. went before him in chains, and vessels of gold and silver, to the amount of 65,000 talents, which is more than 12,000,000 sterl. and 1820 golden crowns, weighing 15,033 pounds. Out of these sums he first paid his soldiers, then gave every private soldier 150 l. sterl. 300 l. to each centurion, and 900 l. to each tribune and commander of the cavalry; and to the commonalty of Rome he gave ten bushels of corn, and ten measures of oil, and 400 Denarii per man, then entertained them at 20,000 tables with 6000 murena's , and a vast profusion of uncommon dainties, and representations of land and sea fights, &c. then sets about reforming Rome by many good laws, and invites learned and ingenious men of all nations with great privileges and encouragements to come and settle at Rome .	V	169
4261	2954	45	Cæcilius Bassus , a Roman knight, raises an army, seizes Tyre , and gives out that Cæsar was killed in Africa , and that the senate at Rome had appointed him president of Syria : But Sextus Cæsar , governor of the province, goes against him, and entirely defeats him. Bassus retires to Tyregeti , is cured of his wounds, inveigles Sextus's army, who kill their general for his lewd way of living, and join Bassus , who by the assistance of Alacaudonius , an Arabian prince, kept up the revolt for many years.	V	170
4261	2954	45	Young Ptolemy king of Egypt , now 14 years old, claims a share in the government, according to the custom of the country, with Cleopatra his wife and sister, for which she soon after poisoned him.	III	679
4261	2954	45	The Roman year now consisting of but 12 lunar months, the pontifex maximus and his colleague intercalated once in two years a month of 22 and 23 days alternately, between the 23d and 24th of February ; but this was oftentimes omitted, &c. therefore Cæsar , by the advice and assistance of learned men, reduced the year to the form we now have it.	V	171
4261	2954	45	Cæsar sets out for Spain against Pompey's two sons, who had got great footing there. He besieges Alegua , the parties magazine, and having reduced it to great straits, the Roman garrison cuts the throats of all the inhabitants, sets fire to the city, and by a general sally endeavours to break through Cæsar's line; but being drove back into the town with great slaughter, L. Minucius Flaccus surrenders upon honourable terms. From hence Cæsar goes to Burjabolis , took it by surprize, and puts great numbers of the inhabitants to death. Soon after, near the city, both parties come to a general engagement where after a most bloody and obstinate battle from morning till night, Cæsar by stratagem gains the victory, kills 30,000 of Pompey's men, (among which were the famous generals Labienus , and Attius Varrius) and 500 Roman knights, 17 great officers, and takes the camp, the enemies eagles and ensigns, and Pompey's fasces, which he had assumed as governor of Spain , with the loss only of 1000 killed and 500 wounded on Cæsar's side. The elder Pompey fled, but was soon after taken, and put to death. Several engagements, sieges, and other warlike exploits, in seven months reduced all Spain ; and Cæsar returned to Rome with immense treasures that he had taken from the Pompeian party. Soon after his arrival at Rome he gave himself and his two lieutenants each a triumph, at which great exception was taken by many, who were but to outside shew his friends.	V	177
4262	2955	44	The senate make Cæsar consul alone, and dictator for life, subjected all the magistrates, even the tribunes, to him; impowered him, alone, to levy troops, command armies, declare war, make peace, &c. and conferred the title of Cæsar and Imperator (or emperor) to him and his posterity: He governed most excellently and mildly, and strove by all acts of kindness to gain over his enemies: He increased the prætors to 16, and the quaestors to 40: He made fix new ediles, and increased the other magistrates proportionably, making the senate to consist of 900 members.	V	878

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4262	2955	44	Aurelius Cotta , one of the keepers of the Sybiline books, declares that the Parthians , against whom Cæsar was going, could never be overcome but by a king; therefore it was proposed that Cæsar should bear the name of dictator in Italy , but king every where else: But a conspiracy being formed by many of the chief senators against Cæsar , Artimedorus , a rhetorician, puts into Cæsar's hands an account thereof, as he was going to the senate-house; but he neglecting to read it, as soon as he had taken his place the conspirators stab and kill him, after he had fought successfully 56 pitched battles, and killed 1,192,000 men.	V	185
4262	2955	44	The death of Cæsar occasioned such an extraordinary ferment in the state, that no one knew what to say or do. Mark Antony , Cæsar's colleague in the consulship, got a guard of 6000 veterans, under pretence of securing his person from insult, &c. Octavianus , Cæsar's great nephew and adopted son, being declared his heir by Cæsar's will, comes to Rome and claims his estate, where being opposed by Mark Antony the then consul, Octavianus sells his own patrimony and bribes the people; upon which Antony pretends to be reconciled to Octavianus ; they quarrel and are friends several times, so that at last they both arm, and Octavianus enters Rome with a large body of men; the senate declare for Octavianus ; Antony invades Cisalpine Gaul , and besieges Mutina , which the senate order him to raise; Antony refuses, and is declared an enemy to his country.	V	203
4262	2955	44	Brutus , Cassius , and several others of the murderers of Cæsar , retire into Greece , Asia , &c. and raise large armies, and keep up the Pompeian faction, and make themselves masters of those provinces, which were confirmed to them by the Roman senate.	V	220
4262	2955	44	The Jews renew their alliance with Rome : Hyrca n petitions Dolabella , one of this year's consuls, for the discharge of some Jews that were impressed into the Roman service: Dolabella sends a letter to the governor of Ephesus , ordering the discharge of the Jews , and a free exercise of their laws and religion. Bassus having seized the governorship of Syria , was soon after driven out by Cassius , who laid a tribute of 700 talents upon Judea : Herod soon after carried the 100 talents for his district, and his brother quickly after brought his quota, by which means they gained favour; but the others not coming with theirs, so irritated Cassius , that he ordered the inhabitants of Gophna , Emmaus , Lydda , Thamma , &c. to be sold by auction, and their governor Malichus to be put to death, to prevent which the high-priest purchased his life and liberty at 100 talents. Upon Cassius's going against Dolabella , he left the government of Cælo-Syria to Herod . Malichus hired the high-priest's butler to poison Antipater as he was at dinner with his master, and seized upon the government of Jerusalem , but was soon after cut off by the garrison of Tyre , as he was going to wait on Cassius at Laodicea : His brother espoused his cause, and got Felix with some Roman soldiers to join him; but Phasaël drove him away, and Herod soon after coming to his assistance, they forced him to surrender Masada and the other fortresses, and to capitulate for his life: They upbraided Hyrca n as privy to all the disturbance; but his fair daughter, whom Herod had married, named Mariamne , reconciled all their differences.	IV	123
4263	2956	43	The consul Pansa goes against Mark Antony in Cisalpine Gaul ; they engage; the consul is mortally wounded, and his army defeated; but Hirpius the other consul falls upon and defeats Antony , whither Hirtius and Octavianus go after him; they engage again, and Hirtius is killed, but Octavianus gained a complete victory, and obliged Antony to shelter himself behind his intrenchments, and to raise the siege of Mutina . Pansa dying of his wounds, is carried with his colleague Hirtius to Rome , and interred with great pomp. Octavianus demands a triumph, which the senate refuses, but grants it to Decimus Brutus ; upon which Octavianus sends back a great number of officers he had taken to Antony , and resolves to be reconciled to him. Brutus goes against Antony , and forces him to pass the Alps ; upon which the senate seizes and confiscates all his estate. Pollio and Plancus join Antony with their armies. Octavianus privately agrees with Antony , and makes use of the power he was invested with by the senate for their destruction. After raising an army, he harangues them; they send deputies to the senate to choose him consul; they refuse it, and he marches his army to Rome , declares he comes as a friend, and is chose consul, and Quintus Pædius his colleague. Octavianus (who was afterwards called Augustus) was scarce twenty years old when he entered upon the consulate.	V	213
4263	2956	43	Octavianus , now consul, first gets his adoption by Cæsar confirmed; and his colleague Quintus gets a law passed for impeaching and trying Cæsar's murderers; upon which they were all summoned to take their trial. Octavianus gets the decree against Mark Antony and Lepidus revoked: They go against Decimus Brutus at Mutina , where the greatest part of his army revolt to Antony and Lepidus , and Brutus is taken and killed by one Camillus , a free-booter: Upon this Antony , Lepidus , and Octavianus meet in a small island formed by the river Rhenus , now Reno , where they agree to divide all the Roman provinces between them, and are called the second great triumvirate; and in order to support their usurped authority they agree to cut off all possessed of great estates, or were any ways friends to liberty and law. They and their armies go to Rome , and get their usurped authority confirmed for five years by law, having first sent and murdered many of the greatest senators; then they proscribed 300 senators, and upwards of 2000 knights: Rome was then filled with blood, many mangled carcasses, and the most horrid scenes of cruelty; then they seized the goods and estates of the victims, without any concern for

Y. of Y. of Before World Flood Christ

(1006)

Vol. Pag.

			their widows or orphans; and thus, and by excessive taxes, proposing to make up the sum of 200,000 talents, which falling short of, they make a list of 1400 of the richest ladies in Rome , and taxed them all alike in a great sum: They come all in a body to the senate, where Hortensia made, so moving a speech, that the number was reduced from 1400 to 400; but to make up the proposed sum they taxed above 100,000 men, as well strangers as natives, priests as laymen; in levying whereof the soldiers committed unheard of cruelties. The triumvirs having satiated themselves with blood and plunder, declared to the senate the proscription was at an end, and appointed M. Æmilius Lepidus and Lucius Munatius Plancus consuls for the ensuing year; and because they were going into the east against Brutus and Cassius , the triumvirs named consuls, prætors and ædiles, for several years to come.	V	232
4264	2957	42	Cleopatra hearing of Mark Anthony and Octavianus's coming into Syria with a great army, sets out with a great fleet, &c. to meet and join them; but falling sick on the way, and having lost abundance of her ships in a storm, is forced to return home.	III	679
4264	2957	42	Cassius sends a body of horse into Cappadocia against Ariobarzanes , for having sided with Cæsar and his friends, overcomes, takes, and puts him to death, and raises great contributions upon his subjects.	III	768
4264	2957	42	Cassius goes against the Rhodians , for assisting the triumviri: They sue to him for peace; he requires their fleet and city, &c. to be delivered up to him; they refuse, have two engagements at sea, and are beat both times with great loss: Then he takes their city, punishes the great men with death, plunders the treasury, temples, and city, punishing with death those who concealed any part of their wealth, extorted from them 8000 talents, taxed the city at 500 talents, and leaves L. Varus there with a strong garison to exact it.	III	159
4264	2957	42	Brutus besieges Xanthus , the strongest city in Asia , which, after the slaughter of many Romans , he took. The Xanthians set fire to the town, and burn their own houses and goods, and destroy their wives, children, and themselves, in the flames, choosing death rather than slavery.	V	237
4264	2957	42	Brutus and Cassius , with 19 legions and 20,000 horse, meets Anthony and Octavianus , with 19 legions and 13,000 horse, in the plains of Philippi , the boundary of Macedon and Thrace : They engage; Brutus falls upon Octavianus , kills abundance of his men, and takes his camp, a great many ensigns, and three eagles. In return, Anthony defeated Cassius , kills many of his men, takes his camp, and entirely routs the rest; Cassius only with a few attendants retiring to the top of a hill. Brutus coming towards him, Cassius imagining it was Anthony , killed himself, and then both armies retire. The same day the admirals and fleets of both parties meet and engage; Anthony's is entirely defeated, and most of his ships being taken or destroyed, together with a vast quantity of stores and provisions they were bringing: This so straitened Anthony , that day after day he offered Brutus battle, which at last by the importunity of his men he consented to. Anthony having massacred all the prisoners he had taken in the last battle, Brutus now orders only all the slaves he had prisoners to be killed: They engage, and Brutus is intirely defeated, and his army routed; upon which he kills himself.	V	253
4264	2957	42	Upon Mark Anthony's coming into Bytbinia , after the defeat of Brutus and Cassius , the governors and heads of provinces come to make their submission and court to him: The Jews come and accuse Phasaël and his brother Herod ; but they being there likewise, had so prepared the conqueror by large gifts, that he would not hear them. When Anthony arrived at Ephesus , Hyrcean petitions for the releasement and lands of those Jewish prisoners Cassius had sold; which Anthony readily grants. Upon Anthony's coming to Daphne , near Antioch , the Jews again petition him against the two brothers, Phasaël and Herod ; but Hyrcean appearing in their behalf, Anthony makes them both etrarchs ; but the Jews at Jerusalem sent a third embassy of a thousand persons to Tyre , who were killed, wounded, and dispersed, &c.	IV	124
4264	2957	42	Anthony and Octavianus having conquered their greatest enemies, disband part of their troops and separate, Octavianus for Italy , and Anthony for Asia : In his passage thither Anthony passed through Greece , and assisted in the schools and academies, administering justice with great equity, and making large presents: Leaving Lucius Censorinus , one of his lieutenants, governor of Greece , he went into Asia , where he was met by all the kings and princes subject to the Roman power, who brought their wives and daughters with them to tempt him with their charms, who strove among themselves to render themselves most agreeable to him by great presents and compliances; Ephesus seemed most to hit his taste; the women dressed in the habits they celebrated the feasts of Bacchus , and the men and boys like fauns and satyrs. Anthony cites queen Cleopatra to come and clear herself for giving assistance to Brutus ; she obeys, and appears at Tarsus in Cilicia : Her wit and beauty so bewitched him, that he spent all the winter in sojourn with her in Egypt , neglecting all business both of the camp and court.	V	262
4265	2958	41	Octavianus coming into Italy , sets about distributing the lands promised to the soldiers, which raised great complaints, as many were injured and beggared: The soldiers were as much displeased as the people, and set against Octavianus . Fulvia , the wife of Anthony , with the present consuls, join to raise the publick discontent against him still higher. He divorces Clodia , the daughter of Fulvia , declaring she was for him still a maid. The state is divided into two powerful and inveterate parties; and cruel murders, &c. were daily committed in Rome , by the populace and soldiers. All things thus in a flame, a famine encreased their distress, each side blaming the other. Fulvia

retires

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol. Pag.
(1007)
			retires to Præneste , and heads the troops and acts like a general: Octavianus did all in his power to harass and distress her and her troops, which were numerous. Lucius , brother and general for Fulvia , having lost abundance of his men by famine and a vigorous defence, sallies out of Perusia , goes to Octavianus , who promises a free pardon for all his troops provided he surrendered the town; Lucius orders his men to march out, and acknowledge the conqueror for their general; but the senators, &c. to the number of 300, were carried in chains to an altar, and there sacrificed to the manes of Julius Cæsar , and then order'd the city to be plundered: But one Cæstius setting fire to his own house, the wind being high, communicated the flames, so that the whole city was reduced to ashes. Upon this Fulvia and her adherents flew, some to one place and some to another; and so ended this war, called the war of Perusia . Fulvia retiring to Sicyon , died there of grief soon after.	V 269
4266	2959	40	Anthony's negligence occasioned an universal revolt in Asia , where his lieutenants were defeated several times; upon which he comes into Greece , and in his crossing the Ionian sea is joined by Abenobarbus and his fleet; upon their arrival at Brundisium , the garison shuts the gates against them; upon which Anthony invites Pompey in Sicily to join him against Octavianus : He comes immediately, and they make a descent upon Italy , and take many cities. But by the mediation of Cocceius , Pollio and Mæcenat , all disputes are adjusted, and the two triumvirs make a new distribution of the Roman empire, and Octavia (the sister of Octavianus) and Anthony are married together. Pompey by his fleets and armies prevented corn coming from Sicily to Italy , so that there was a famine in Rome . Anthony at last prevails upon Octavianus to make peace with Pompey , and to settle all their disputes amicably; which being done, plenty is again restored to Rome , and many of the proscribed nobility comes home, and are restored to their former dignities.	V 273
4266	2959	40	Antigonus the son of Aristobulus , by the assistance of Ptolemy and Pacorus , invades Judea , and goes to Jerusalem , where they had several skirmishes, with great loss on both sides. Phasaël and Hyrca n are prevailed on to go to Barzapharnes , the general of the Parthians , where they are surprized by treachery, and Herod forced to fly into Idumea : The Parthians plunder Herod's palace, the city and country round about, and Marissa , (an opulent city) which they entirely destroyed, and then installed Antigonus upon the Jewish throne; and Phasaël and Hyrca n are soon after brought to him in chains; Hyrca n's ears were cut off, which disqualified him for the office of high priest, and Phasaël killed himself. Herod went to Rome , where by the senate he is made king of Judea , and Anthony having ordered Ventidius to assist him, he went to the relief of Massada , now besieged by Antigonus ; in his way he took Joppa , and made Antigonus raise the siege of Massada ; from whence he marched to Jerusalem .	IV 129
4267	2960	39	While Herod was gone to wait on Ventidius the Roman general at Samseta , his brother Joseph was defeated and killed by Antigonus , and Gallilee taken. Herod upon his return engages Antigonus , and defeats him with very great slaughter, and recovered Gallilee , &c. Then he went to Samaria , to consummate his marriage with Marianne , whom he had betrothed four years before.	IV 130
4267	2960	39	Pompey and Octavius quarrelling, renew their hostilities against each other: Menas , governor of Corfica and Sardinia for Pompey , and also admiral of his fleet, being disgusted with his master, goes over to Octavius with three legions, the whole fleet, and surrenders the two islands: Octavius entertains him with great respect, and makes him commander of his whole fleet. Pompey sends Menecrates to ravage the coast of Italy , which he doing, is met by Calvisius and Menas ; a bloody engagement ensues; Menas wounds, boards Menecrates galley, and takes it; Menecrates jumps into the sea, and is drowned; Demachares takes the command, took several of Calvisius's galleys, and drove most of the rest on the rocks, where they were lost. Octavius going to Messina , is attacked, and most of his ships sunk or dashed to pieces, and a violent storm the next day destroyed a great part of the remainder.	V 275
4267	2960	39	Anthony having restored the Rhodians to their ancient rights and privileges, which Cassius had taken from them, bestows also upon them the islands of Andros , Naxos , Tenos , and the city of Myndus : But the Rhodians tyrannizing over them very extraordinarily, Anthony is forced to take their sovereignty over them away.	III 159
4267	2960	39	Cleopatra going as far as Tarsus , to meet and enchant Anthony , strove with all the temptations of luxury, presents, and complaisance to gain him, which she did so effectually, that no request of her's, however dishonourable, was deny'd; nor any complaint, however just against her, heard so as to be redressed: So bewitched was he to her charms, that, instead of putting his troops into winter quarters, he marched over hills, rocks, &c. to the loss of 60,000 of his men, by the length and severities of the march, in the depth of winter, to go to her.	III 687
4263	2961	38	Anthony and Octavius , by the mediation of Octavia , settle all their differences, and mutually assist each other, and by their own authority continue themselves five years longer in the triumvirate; and Julia , Octavius's daughter, is betrothed to Antyllus , Anthony's son. Octavius having again got a large fleet under the command of Agrippa , (Menas having left him and returned to Pompey) they set out in July , but a violent storm arising, destroyed many of their ships; but soon after repairing his damages, they land in Sicily : Several skirmishes happen by land and sea, with various success; but at last a general action at sea happening, Pompey is intirely defeated, losing 333 sail of large ships, making his

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			his escape with only 17 galleys. Soon after Octavius and Lepidus quarrel so high as to come to blows; but Octavius bribing his soldiers, Lepidus is deserted, and begs his life of Octavius , which he grants him. Octavius now has 45 legions under his command, 25,000 horse, 160,000 light-armed foot, and 600 ships of war. The war in Sicily being ended, his soldiers mutiny, demanding great rewards; he discharges 20,000, and pacifies the others with large promises, and a present of 500 drachma's a man. At his return to Rome he is greatly flattered, and made perpetual tribune of the people.	V	283
4268	2961	38	Herod besieges Jerusalem , with the assistance of Sofus the Roman general; and after five months resolute defence, takes it by assault: A terrible slaughter is made of the inhabitants by the Romans, to whom Herod made a large present, to prevent their further plunder. Antigonus was carried in chains to Anthony , and afterwards put to death, by the instigation of Herod .	IV	131
4269	2962	37	Herod , now absolute king of Judea , seizes and confiscates the estates of the most wealthy Antigonians , and put 45 of the head men to death. Herod having advanced one Ananel , a private obscure babylonish priest, to the pontifical dignity, is continually teased by his mother-in-law Alexandra to depose Ananel , and advance her son Aristobulus ; he does it, but in less than a year's time has him stifled as he was bathing.	IV	135
4270	2963	36	Anthony goes against the Parthians , but fails in his attempt, losing more than 70,000 men by war, famine, and excessive cold weather.	IV	312
4270	2963	36	Pompey flying to Leibes , and there hearing of Anthony 's ill success against the Parthians , raises great disturbances in the east, where he got an army, and took several cities; but being engaged by Marcus Titius , is defeated, taken, and put to death.	V	283
4274	2967	32	Anthony early in the spring sets out for Syria , in order to go to Parthia ; Cleopatra will attend him to the Euphrates ; he bestows all Cyrene , Cyprus , Cælo-Syria , Iuerea , and Phœnice upon her, with great part of Cilicia and Crete ; but not satisfied, she solicits him to put Herod king of Judea and Malchus king of Petræa to death, to have their kingdoms also, which he refused: In her return home, she came by the way of Jerusalem , where Herod treated her very splendidly; she pretends to be in love with him, and strove to induce him to familiarity; which so exasperated Herod , that he would have put her to death, but was persuaded and advised to the contrary.	III	682
4274	2967	32	Anthony , contrary to the most solemn oaths, takes Artabazes king of Armenia prisoner, and reduced the whole country; then makes a match for Alexander , one of his sons by Cleopatra , and a daughter of the king of Media ; and then returned to Alexandria , entering it in a triumphal chariot, his booty, king Artabazes , his wife, children, &c. being carried before him in the Roman manner: Cleopatra seated on a golden throne, &c. sits to receive him, to whom the captive king, &c. in golden chains, were presented, and ordered to kneel to her; but they refuse: and all the Romans are angry at the whole procedure.	III	683
4274	2967	32	Antony treats all the Alexandrians at an immense expence; and being seated on one golden throne, and Cleopatra on another, in the Gymnasium , he makes an oration to the people, and proclaims Cæsarion (Cleopatra 's son by Julius Cæsar) king of Egypt and Cyprus in conjunction with his mother; and having three children by her himself, viz. Alexander , Ptolemy , (surnamed Philadelphus) and Cleopatra , to Alexander he gave Armenia , Media , Parthia , &c. from the Euphrates to India ; to Cleopatra , Alexander 's twin-sister, Lybia and Cyrene ; and to Philadelphus , Phœnice , Syria , Cilicia , and all Asia Minor , from the Euphrates to the Hellepont , with the title of King of Kings ; makes queen Cleopatra change her name to Isis , and he takes the name of Osiris , the great god and goddess of the Egyptians .	III	683
4274	2967	32	Cleopatra resolves upon the destruction of Herod , sends an army under the command of her general Athenion , pretending to assist him against Malchus king of Arabia , who, when Herod and Malchus was engaged, falls upon Herod 's army, and cut most of it to pieces, himself escaping with difficulty.	IV	136
4274	2967	32	Octavius sends his sister Octavia to his colleague Anthony her husband, who was revelling in the arms of Cleopatra at Leucopolis : Octavia sends him word of her arrival at Athens ; he orders her to return to Rome , and goes to Alexandria with Cleopatra , and spends the winter in a shameful manner with her: She returns to Rome ; Octavius is highly incensed, but Octavia strives to moderate between them. Anthony declares Cleopatra queen of Egypt , Cyprus , Africa , and Cælo-Syria , joining Cæsarion (her son by Cæsar) her colleague with her. Octavius and Anthony reciprocally accuse each other to the people of Rome ; and Anthony collects 800 ships at Ephesus , with a great army and a vast sum of money; From hence he goes to Athens , and Cleopatra with him. The consuls C. Sofus and Domitius Ahenobarbus fly from Rome to Athens , and so incite Anthony against Octavius , that he divorces Octavia , and sends officers to turn her out of his house at Rome . Cleopatra using some of Anthony 's friends ill at Athens , they forsake him. Anthony having made a will in favour of Cleopatra , in prejudice to Rome , and lodged it with the vestal virgins, Octavius comes and seizes it, first reads it himself, and then assembles the senate, where it is read publickly; and Anthony is accused by Calpurnius of many faults; and Cleopatra behaving very haughtily, many of his friends desert him. Octavius declares war against Cleopatra , and deposed Anthony from his commands, &c.	V	287
4275	2968	31	Anthony and Octavius come to an engagement at sea near Actium , which remained long doubtful; in the midst of the fight Cleopatra comes with 60 sail of ships, stands for some time between both fleets, and then sets sail for Peloponnesus ;

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(1009)	Vol.	Pag.
			Anthony is so infatuated as to leave his fleet and army, and go after her : 300 of his ships yield to Octavius , and his land forces did the same, after standing out seven days without leaders.	V	293
4275	2968	31	A terrible earthquake happens at Jerusalem , which destroyed a vast number of people and cattle; upon which Herod is forced to sue to the Arabians for peace, who refuse it, and murder his ambassadors, and come in great numbers to invade Judea : Herod gave them two signal defeats, and after forcing them to accept of peace upon his own terms, returns to Jerusalem in triumph.	IV	137
4275	2968	31	Artaxias II. the eldest son of Artaxades , is proclaimed king of Armenia , in opposition to Alexander , Cleopatra's son, whom he defeated, but did not hold his kingdom long, being strangled by his pretended friends.	III	709
4276	2969	30	Tiberius the Roman general sets up Tigranes (the son of Artaxias) upon the Armenian throne, putting the crown upon his head with his own hands, and honours him with the title of friend and ally of the Roman people; but this did not last long, Tiberius ordering him soon after to be put to death.	III	709
4276	2969	30	Augustus sets up Artaxades for king of Armenia ; but the people drive him away, and chuse Phranates king of Parthia : But a Roman army comes against him under Caius , Augustus's adopted son: Phrabates retires, and sues for peace, which is granted, and Artaxades restored; he dying soon after, Tigranes III. seizes the kingdom, but is drove out by Caius .	III	710
4276	2969	30	Anthony being defeated by Octavius , Herod king of Judea sends advice to him to murder Cleopatra , and to come into Egypt and raise an army, and promises to assist him with all his own force of money, troops, strong holds, &c. but Anthony refuses. Hircan the former high-priest being still alive, Herod orders him to be beheaded, in the 80th year of his age, for fear the people should prefer Hircan's to Herod's title to the crown.	IV	137
4276	2969	30	Herod king of Judea goes to Octavius now at Rhodes , and offers his service to him against Anthony and Cleopatra , who send messengers to Octavius to make up the breach between them, but are refused by him; at last they offer to resign up all, and live a private life in Athens , or where else soever he should think fit to appoint them: Octavius receives the queen's presents, and promises to pardon her, if she would put Anthony to death; but would not hear the ambassadors of Anthony , though he sent his own son with a vast sum of money, and offered to kill himself if he would settle Egypt on Cleopatra's children. Cleopatra betrays Anthony , and he kills himself; she is taken by Octavius , and kills herself, after reigning 22 years. Octavius turned Egypt into a Roman province. Augustus is met by Herod at Ptolemais ; Herod treats him and his whole army with great magnificence, and presents him with 800 talents in money, besides bread, wine, &c. for his army; in return for which Octavius gave him several towns, &c.	III	690
4277	2970	29	Octavius spends the whole winter in settling the provinces of Asia Minor and the adjacent islands: In the spring, he first goes into Greece , and from thence to Rome , where he had three triumphs for three successive days, and afterwards he had the title of emperor, with sovereignty and uncontroll'd power; but to deceive the people, continued the usual magistrates with only so much power as he thought fit to allow them, having overcome his qualm of laying down his usurped authority: However, he courted the populace by many seeming acts of kindness; the senate he encreased to a thousand members, and advanced all his own creatures: He raised many publick buildings, repaired the old ones, and added many stately ornaments to the city, which was now said to be 50 miles in compass, and contained 4,000,000 souls.	V	296
4277	2970	29	Mariamne , Herod's favourite wife, and Herod have great quarrels; she is falsely accused of adultery, and of corrupting his cup-bearer to poison him, is tried, condemned and executed, by means of the furious hatred of Salome , Herod's sister.	IV	140
4278	2971	28	A great plague breaks out in Judea , which sweeps away multitudes of the people: Herod grows prodigious uneasy, and frenzical for the loss of his Mariamne : Being now informed of her innocence, he revenges himself upon many of his best friends and nearest relations, and puts them to death, and among them Alexandra , the mother of Mariamne .	IV	140
4278	2971	28	Tiberius gives Armenia to Mithridates Iberus . Artabanus invades Armenia , who was defeated and drove away by Tiberius .	III	710
4279	2972	27	Octavius in open senate offers to lay down his authority, and to retire to a private life; but they in return desire him to take upon him the whole government, which with much seeming reluctance he does, and has the title of Augustus conferred on him. Thus ended the greatest commonwealth, and began the greatest monarchy ever known, infinitely excelling all others in power, riches, extent, and continuance, whose yearly revenue is said, upon a moderate computation, to be 40,000,000 l. sterl.	V	297
4280	2973	26	Salome , Herod's sister, quarrelling with her husband Cestobares , governor of Idumea , first sends him a bill of divorce, and then accuses him of treason to Herod , who puts him, Lyfimachus , Dositheus and Antipater , to death. Being now delivered from all fear of the Asmonean race, he abolishes several Jewish ceremonies and customs, and introduced foreign ones that were forbidden; builds a stately theatre in the city of Jerusalem , and a spacious amphitheatre in the suburbs, and ordered publick games there every fifth year in honour of Augustus , and by large rewards to the conquerors drew vast numbers of people of all nations thither: This so displeased the zealous Jews, that they no longer looked upon him as their king, but as a heathenish tyrant: Ten Jews goes into the theatre to kill Herod ; but being discovered, were put to death with the most exquisite torments; but the people tore the informer to pieces, and

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		(1010)	Vol.	Page.
4280	2973	26	gave his flesh to the dogs ; which so exasperated Herod , that he put whole families to death, tormenting the women to make them discover the men, &c.		IV	141
			Augustus takes a census of Gaul , now divided into three districts, being the first ever made out of Italy ; then he goes into Spain , and defeats the revolted Cantabri , and soon after his general C. Antistius defeated again the united strength of the Cantabri and Asturians , and then besieges them upon the hill of their retreat, where they were so much straitened for provisions, that the women eat their children, and the young men the old ones; the Asturians are for surrendering, the Cantabri will not; they fight with one another, and kill many on both sides, and 10,000 Asturians are drove to the Roman intrenchments; Tiberius (the emperor's son-in-law) will not admit them; many kill themselves with their swords, others light fires and jump into the flames, and the rest poison themselves.		V	299
4281	2974	25	This year Spain , after a struggle for its liberty of 200 years, is entirely subjected to Rome . The Cantabrians to the number of 23,000 surrendering at discretion, 10,000 are incorporated among the auxiliaries, and the rest sold for slaves, most of whom destroyed themselves, preferring death to slavery: Most of the Asturians are cut to pieces, and all their towns and strong places taken: Augustus built several cities to keep the natives in awe, as Cæsar Augusta , (now Saragossa) and Augusta Emerita , (now Merida): He likewise built a stone bridge over the Iberus , for his troops to march out of one province into another.		V	299
4281	2974	25	Crassus overcomes the Mæsans , a fierce and savage people beyond the Danube . Terentius Varro reduced the Salassi , obliging them to submit to his terms, who after they had delivered up their arms, sent 40,000 of their youth to Empredia , (now Ivrea) to be slaves for 20 years.		V	299
4281	2974	25	Cornelius Gallus having tyrannized over the people of Egypt , where Augustus had sent him governor, and stripped all the cities, particularly Thebes , of all valuable in it, was recalled and deposed; for which he inveighing against Augustus , the senate condemned him to banishment; upon which he killed himself.		V	230
4281	2974	25	Amytas king of Pisidia dies; he had been secretary to old king Deiotarus , and raised by Marc Anthony to the throne: Upon his death Pisidia , Galatia , and Lycaonia were reduced to a Roman province, and first governed by M. Lollius , in quality of prætor.		V	300
4281	2974	25	Marcellus (the adopted son of Augustus) son to Octavia , sister of Augustus , by her first husband, marries Julia the daughter of Augustus by Scribonia ; and Juba king of Getulia marries Cleopatra Selene , daughter of Cleopatra queen of Egypt by Mark Anthony .		V	301
4282	2975	24	The senate free Augustus from the restraint of all law, and allow him to govern absolutely by his will, and that Marcellus (the adopted son of Augustus) might, though but sixteen years old, have a place among the senators of the pretorian rank, and might stand for the consulate 10 years sooner than the law allowed; and that Tiberius his son-in-law might stand for the curule offices five years sooner than usual, upon which Marcellus was immediately made ædile, and Tiberius quæstor.		V	302
4282	2975	24	The Asturians and Cantabrians revolt, surprize a considerable body of Romans , and cut them all off; but Ælius Lama , governor of that part of Spain , lays their whole country waste with fire and sword, and kills most of their young men, and so, absolutely reduced them again in about a months time.		V	303
4282	2975	24	Ælius Gallus makes an expedition against Arabia-Felix , with 10,000 men given him by Augustus , 500 out of Herod king of Judea 's guards, and 1000 given him by Obodes king of the Nabathean Arabs , under the command of Sylleus , Obodes 's chief favourite, who pretended to be Gallus 's guide, but led him out of the way on purpose; at last he got thither, and took the metropolis of the country by assault; then falling in with a large number of the natives, he kills 10,000 of them, with the loss of only two men; and so went on, taking all the cities he came at; but his men being sick, he returned back to Egypt , having lost but seven men in all his assaults and battles, but almost all his army by fatigue and sickness; so that at the end of two years arriving in Egypt , this expedition was never after attempted any more by the Romans .		V	302
4282	2975	24	Candace , queen of Ethiopia , invades the province of Thebais in Upper Egypt , surprizes several cities, carries the Roman garrisons away prisoners, throws down Augustus 's statues, and laid the whole country waste. C. Petronius assembles 10,000 foot and 800 horse, attacks Candace at Pjelcha in Ethiopia , upon the banks of the Nile , defeats her army of 30,000 men, takes Pjelcha , the key of Ethiopia on the side of Egypt , and then went 800 miles up into the country; then went to Napata , the metropolis, and took and destroyed it; then put a garrison of 400 men into Premnis , with provisions for two years; and then returned with many 1000 captives, which he sold for slaves. Candace attacks Premnis , Petronius goes to its relief, defeats Candace , and forces her to a very disadvantageous peace; but some time after Augustus remitted the tribute, and gave her the cities, &c. again.		V	303
4283	2976	23	Augustus being very ill, sends for the curule, magistrates, and senators of equestrian order, and in their presence delivers to Calpurnius Piso his colleague his will, and a book of his own writing, containing a distinct account of the towns, provinces, allies, forces, riches and taxes, of the whole Roman empire: But Antonius Musa , a famous Greek physician, restored him unexpectedly to his health, for which he and all of his profession were allowed to wear a gold ring, and to live tax-free.		V	304
4283	9976	23	Augustus resigns the fasces to P. Sestius , a man of unblameable character, upon which the senate confer the title of continual proconsul of the Roman empire upon him, with power to assemble the senate when he pleased, and to exercise the authority of tribune in Rome , and in all its distant provinces. His

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ	(1011)	Vol.	Page
			successors would never part with this power, that rendered them uncontrollable by, and unaccountable to any power whatever.	V	334
4283	2976	23	Marcellus (the adopted son of Augustus) dies, highly lamented of all, and is honoured with the utmost funeral magnificence in the Campus Martius , Augustus himself pronouncing his funeral oration.	V	305
4283	2976	23	Herod king of Judea growing cruel and excessively severe to the people, they shew a general dislike to him; wherefore, to prevent a revolt, he fortifies Jerusalem , rebuilds Samaria , and garrisons the strong fortresses of Judea . This year there happened a great drought, which brought on a famine, and ended in a raging pestilence, of which multitudes die for want of help and sustenance. Herod is forced to melt down his plate to buy corn in Egypt , &c.	IV	142
4283	2976	23	Herod deposes Jesus , the son of Phabeus , from the high-priesthood, and advanced Simon , the son of Boethus , a Jewish priest of Alexandria , to that dignity, for the sake of his beautiful daughter Mariamne , whom he married.	IV	142
4284	2977	22	A dreadful plague rages in Rome and all over Italy , which occasioned the lands to be untilld, so that a general famine attended it: The Tiber overflowed, and laid a great part of the city under water: Lightning dashed several statues in the Pantheon to pieces. The populace imagining these punishments happened because Augustus laid down the consulship, oblige the senate to name him dictator; but he refused it, but accepted the office of general purveyor, but would in no wise accept of being perpetual censor.	V	305
4284	2977	22	A conspiracy is formed against Augustus by Murena , a man of unblemished character, and Fannius Cæpio , the greatest debauchee in Rome : 'Tis discovered, and they are put to death; after which Augustus delivered to the senate Cyprus and Narbonne Gaul , which were turned into proconsular provinces.	V	306
4284	2977	22	The Cantabrians and Asturians revolt again, but were soon reduced by C. Furius : The people finding they could not shake off their slavery, many of them destroy themselves.	V	306
4284	2977	22	Gallia is divided into 16 provinces.	VII	401
4284	2977	22	Herod lends his two sons to Rome , to be educated under the care and direction of Augustus , who gives Herod several additional provinces, and leave to name either of his sons to be his successor.	IV	143
4285	2978	21	Great uproars and much mischiefs are committed by the partizans of L. Silenus and Q. Æmilius Lepidus , candidates for the consulship for this year; to prevent which for the future, Augustus creates a new magistrature, whose province was to maintain peace and tranquility in the city; for this purpose he marries his daughter Julia to Agrippa , with the utmost splendor, and gave him that office, which he discharged to the intire satisfaction of the senate and the people.	V	306
4285	2978	21	Zenodorus , from whom Augustus had taken several provinces, accuses Herod of male-administration: Augustus appoints a day to hear the cause, but shews so much partiality in favour of Herod , that he poisons himself, and his adherents destroy themselves various ways, for fear of falling into Herod's hands, and then Augustus makes Herod procurator of Syria .	IV	143
4285	2978	21	Herod to ingratiate himself with the Jews , in a set speech proposes to pull down the temple at Jerusalem , and to rebuild it equal or superior to Solomon's ; and to convince them of it, proposes to have all the materials for the new one ready upon the spot, before he pulls down the old one: They consent; he immediately sets 10,000 men to work under the direction of 1000 priests, and 1000 carts are employed in fetching materials: So much expedition was used, that in two years time they begin to pull the old one down; and in a year and half's time more the carcass of the new one was erected in a most sumptuous manner, and in eight years the whole finished for use.	IV	147
4285	2978	21	Augustus goes into Sicily , and settles matters there; then goes into Greece , and bestows the island of Cybera and five other cities on the Lacedæmonians , and punishes the Athenians for erecting statues to Brutus and Cassius , and took from them the island of Egina and the city of Eretria , and then went to Samos , and wintered there.	V	307
4286	2979	20	Augustus goes into Asia , deprives the Cyzicans of their liberty, for having whipt and put to death some Roman citizens: The same he did by Tyre and Sidon , and so frighted Phraortes king of Parthia , that he sent all the ensigns and captives to him taken in the war with Crassus and Antony , and submits to all the conditions Augustus required of him.	V	307
4286	2979	20	Julia , the daughter of Augustus and wife of Agrippa , brings forth a son, who was named Caius , on whose birth-day a perpetual sacrifice, &c. was decreed by way of thanksgiving to the gods.	V	308
4287	2980	19	Augustus is named consul, but he refuses: The disputes between the candidates rise so high, that abundance on both sides are killed: To quiet all disturbances Augustus names Q. Lucretius Vespillo to be the colleague of C. Senius Sæterninus . The consuls and Agrippa , punish the rioters with great severity.	V	308
4287	2980	19	Porus king of India sends to Augustus to desire an alliance and an interview, offering all his strength and the strength of his 600 kings, over whom he reigned, to assist him: Zarmar , one of the ambassadors, follows Augustus to Athens , and there burnt himself before him.	V	309
4287	2980	19	Upon Augustus's return to Rome , the senate decree him three triumphal arches, erected an altar to Fortune , and ordered that this day should be annually solemnized with sacrifices, shews, sports, &c.	V	309
4287	2980	19	Virgil , the prince of Latin poets, dies, in the 51st year of his age: By his will he ordered his Æneid to be burnt, not having put the finishing stroke to it; but Augustus preserved it.	V	309
4287	2980	19	The senate prevail upon Augustus to be censor for five years, and confer the consular power on him for life: He sends Agrippa against the revolted Cantabrians

in

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
			in Spain, and the Germans, who had crossed the Rhine and committed horrid disorders; but upon his approach they retire, and he goes into Spain, where after a very obstinate fight, all the Cantabrians fit to bear arms were cut off, their castles and strong holds razed, and the women, children, and old men brought out of the mountains and forced to live in the plains.	V	310
4287	2980	19	Agrippa returns to Rome, refuses a triumph, and lays out vast sums of money to embellish the city, and build and repair aqueducts, of vast beauty, expence, and serviceableness.	V	310
4287	2980	19	Augustus grants a triumph to Lucius Cornelius Balbus, for having subdued the Garamantes, a people of Africa before unknown: Balbus was the first foreigner that ever had a triumph, he being a Spaniard by birth.	V	311
4288	2981	18	Augustus prorogued his absolute authority for five years more, his first ten being near expired, and takes Agrippa to be a partner with him in his power, and made him tribune for five years; then sets about reforming the senate, by reducing them from 1000 to 500 members; he names thirty, and impowers each to name five, out of which one was chose by lot, &c. then proceeds to reform many abuses, &c. Julia brings forth a second son, named Lucius, and Augustus adopts both of them.	V	312
4289	2982	17	The secular games, which had been discontinued for 100 years, were exhibited by Augustus and Agrippa with great pomp and magnificence: They encourage a great number of stage-players, but severely correct their immorality.	V	312
4290	2983	16	Augustus pretends to go into Gaul to quell disturbances, but it was really to have an opportunity of enjoying Terentia, the wife of Mecenas, whom he took with him, where he staid this and the following year, though all was quiet.	V	313
4290	2983	16	Herod goes to Rome, where Augustus receives him with all possible marks of friendship, and returning suitable presents and thanks, receives his two sons, now grown up, and vastly polished and improved: At his return he married Alexander to Glaphyra, daughter of Archelaus king of Cappadocia; and Aristobulus to Berenice, daughter of his sister Salome.	IV	147
4291	2984	15	The Rhæti invade Italy, and make a dreadful havock, putting all the males they meet with to the sword: Against these went Drusus, 2d son of Livius, who though but a youth, gained a great victory over them, and cut great numbers of them to pieces: The remainder of them join the Vindelici, and go to invade Gaul; Tiberius, brother of Drusus, meets them at the lake Brigantium (now Constance) gave them a total overthrow, and forced the whole nation to accept of his conditions, and planted two colonies in two cities to keep them in awe.	V	314
4291	2984	15	Agrippa goes into Syria to quell disturbances that were risen there; Herod invites him into Judea, and entertains him with vast splendor and honour; which so pleased Agrippa, that he bestowed many gifts and favours on the Jews; and while he was at Jerusalem he offered up a whole hecatomb at the temple. When he went against the Bosphorean rebels, Herod met and joined his fleet at Lesbos, with another of his own, replenished with men, arms, provisions, money, &c.	IV	147
4291	2984	15	Augustus orders Agrippa a triumph for his successes in the east. Augustus takes upon him the office of Pontifex Maximus, which he held to his death, as did all of his successors, both Christian and heathen, till the year 375 of the Christian æra.	V	316
4292	2985	14	The Ligures Comati, who inhabited the maritime Alps, are subdued, their country made a Roman province, and Augustus returns to Rome, and then he made a law, that the veterans should not be rewarded with lands, as had formerly been done, (to the great oppression and disturbance of the publick) but with money.	V	316
4292	2985	14	Herod returning from the Bosphorus, remits the people of Judea a fourth part of the tribute. Salome his sister strives by wicked ways to accuse his two sons of treason against him: Herod at last carries them to Aquileia to Cæsar, and there accuses them: Alexander pleads his own and his brother's cause so effectually, that they are honourably acquitted, and Herod blamed for his rash belief and ill will against his own children.	IV	148
4293	2986	13	Augustus as Pontifex Maximus corrected a great error that had crept into the calendar, it being usual to reckon the leap year every third year, which he set to rights, and ordered it as it now is, every fourth year. Agrippa returns, and brings Herod's son Antipater with him to Rome, is graciously received, but refuses the honour of a triumph.	V	317
4294	2987	12	Agrippa goes against the revolted Pannonians; they submit upon his terms; he takes away their arms, and has hostages for their peaceable behaviour, but dies in Campania as he was returning to Rome.	V	318
4295	2988	11	Augustus takes Tiberius partner with him in the empire, and sends him against the Pannonians, who upon the death of Agrippa revolted: He overcomes them, disarms them, takes hostages, and all their towns and strong holds, laid waste the fields, plundered the cities, and sent their young men into other countries, and then returned to Rome.	V	318
4295	2988	11	Drusus so ingratiates himself with the Gauls, that they lay aside their intention of revolting, and erect a temple to Augustus at Lyons, and pay him divine honours, while living, and games like the Nemean games instituted in honour of him. Drusus then gains great advantages against the Germans, who were crossing the Rhine to come into Gaul, whom he drove back, and followed them into Germany, and then returned to Rome, and was made prætor.	V	319
4296	2989	10	The city of Cæsarea having been 12 years in building, is now finished, and Herod dedicates it with the utmost pomp, and appointed games to be performed every fifth year: He also built Antipatriis, Cypron, and many others.	IV	148

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Before Christ		Vol.	Page
4296	2989	10	Drusus conquers many German nations, who joining together, surrounded him, but at last he overthrew them, and found in their camp abundance of chains, with which they intended to load the Romans , &c.	V	319
4296	2989	10	Octavia , sister of Augustus , dies, a lady of the most consummate wisdom, and greatest pattern of virtue in her time: Augustus honoured her so far as to pronounce her funeral oration himself.	V	320
4297	2990	9	The Jews of Asia and Cyrene send a deputation to Augustus , who obtains a redress of their grievances, and a decree very favourable to them.	IV	148
4297	2990	9	Tiberius subdues the Daci , a German nation, and transplants 40,000 into Gaul . Drusus subdued all from the Rhine to the Elbe , and died.	V	321
4298	2991	8	Herod's jealousy having carried his warm temper to a great pitch of rage against his two sons, he puts to death, rack, and torment, all that he suspects; but Archelaus king of Cappadocia (whose daughter Herod's son Alexander had married) interposes, and makes peace, so that he is forced to go to Rome to clear his sons from the accusations he had laid against them there.	IV	150
4298	2991	8	The Sicambrians and Sueves submit to Augustus , who orders 40,000 of them to be transported into Gaul , to repopulate several places depopulated by the wars.	VII	341
4298	2991	8	Augustus pretends to lay down his power, but the senate renews it for ten years more: He makes a census, and finds 4,233,000 Roman citizens in Rome . This year the famous Mecænas dies, Horace the noted poet, and one Caius Cæcilius Iulius , remarkable for his extraordinary wealth, leaving behind him 4116 slaves, 3600 yoke of oxen, 200,057 head of other cattle, and 3,000,000 sterling in money.	V	324
4299	2992	7	Herod's new temple at Jerusalem being completely finished, he caused it to be dedicated with great solemnity.	IV	150
4299	2992	7	A dreadful fire happens at Rome , occasioned by the debtors setting fire to their creditors houses, to escape from their cruelty. To prevent the like for the future, Augustus divides the city into fourteen wards, under proper governors.	V	324
4300	2993	6	Augustus confers the honour of tribune for five years on Tiberius , but he begs to lay down all his dignities, and to retire to Rhodes , to live there privately, which with great difficulty Augustus yields to: He spends his time in study, and converses only with philosophers, &c. but after living so upwards of a year, he grows weary of his retirement, and petitions Augustus for leave to return to Rome ; but is absolutely refused it till 17 years after.	V	327
4300	2993	6	Herod , through the instigation of his sister Salome , again complains to Augustus against his sons; Augustus orders them to be tried at Berytus before the governors of Syria ; he gets them condemned, and executes them himself.	IV	151
4301	2994	5	Antipater , Herod's son is discovered plotting against his father; many persons are put to death and banished, and Mariamne (Herod's present wife), banished, and her father deposed from the high priesthood.	IV	153
4304	2997	2	Augustus is a thirteenth time consul: Having conferred the highest honours upon his two grandsons, Lucius and Caius , (sons of his daughter Julia) is so mortified by account of her wicked behaviour, that he shut himself up several days, refusing to be seen or to speak to any body; then he banished Julia to Pandataria , a desert island on the coast of Campania (now called Santa Maria) and punished by banishment and death many of those who had been her partners in lewdness, debauchery, &c.	V	326
4304	2997	2	Augustus , to divert his melancholy upon account of his family disgrace, exhibits all manner of expensive and magnificent shews, such as chariot-races, gladiators, &c. and caused a canal, 1800 paces long and 200 broad, to be dug, and let in the Flaminian water, which was covered with crocodiles, 36 of which were killed by Egyptians , brought there on purpose, and then two fleet of ships representing a sea-fight succeeded, &c.	V	327
4305	2998	1	John the baptist (the son of Zachary , a priest of the course of Abiah , and Elizabeth his wife) born.	IV	154
4306	2999	0	Peace being settled in all the world, and the temple of Janus shut at Rome , Augustus orders a fresh survey of the Roman empire to be taken, and as it was executing Christ is born at Bethlehem in Judea . Soon after Herod ordered all the male-children from two years old to a day old to be murdered, in order to kill Jesus Christ , who was miraculously sent into Egypt before this cruel massacre was put in execution.	IV	159
4307	3000	1	Antipater , Herod's son, sends Batillus (one of his servants) from Rome into Judea with poison for Herod his father; 'tis discovered, and Antipater , now arrived at Rome , is arrested, and tried before Quintilius Varus , and cast and imprisoned.	IV	182
4307	3000	1	Herod being very ill, 'tis reported he was dead: Judas the son of Saripheus , and Mattias the son of Margalothus , (two learned Jewish doctors) raise the youth in Jerusalem , and threw down the statues that Herod had set up, particularly a golden eagle of an extraordinary size and workmanship over the temple gate: The two chiefs and 40 others are taken, and carried before the dying king, where they justify their proceedings, and are burnt for their pains. Herod's disease made him loathsome to himself, as well as to his attendants; and so cross and cruel, that he issued his summons for all the heads of the people to meet in the circus at Jericho at a set day, and gave his sister Salome and her husband Alexas strict charge to butcher them all as soon as the breath was out of his body: The messengers return from Rome with Augustus's confirmation of Antipater's sentence of death, which was immediately executed.	IV	184
4307	3000	1	Five days after the death of his son Antipater , Herod dies himself, but in the mean time alters his will, and left his kingdom to his son Archelaus , &c. Salome and her husband Alexas , instead of executing his cruel orders, sets the prison-door open. Archelaus is proclaimed king, and he indulges the people with granting all their requests: But a mutinous mob did much mischief, and made great demands, and kills the soldiers sent against them; but Archelaus sends the whole army, kills 3000, and disperses the rest; then goes to Rome , where being opposed by Herod's other children, Augustus gives him half the kingdom, viz. Judea Propria , Idumea , and Samaria , with the title of Ethnarch , and divides the rest between his two sons, Philip and Antipas , and his sister Salome .

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vd.	Pg.
4307	3000	1	Many of the Jews side with one Alexander , who pretended to be the son of Herod , but being detected he is sent to the galleys.	IV	191
4308	3001	2	Tiberius is allowed to return to Rome , and Lucius Cæsar dies, which brings Tiberius again into Augustus's favour.	IV	191
4308	3001	2	Archelaus upon his return to Jerusalem deposes Jozar from the high priesthood, and puts Eleazar in his stead; then divorces his wife Mariamne , and marries his brother Alexander's wife Glaphyra , contrary to the Jewish law; then he deposes Eleazar , and advances Jesus the son of Sias to the high priesthood; he bestows immense sums upon beautifying his palace at Jericho .	V	330
4309	3002	3	The famous temple of the mother of the gods at Rome is reduced to ashes.	IV	192
4310	3003	4	Numidia revolts from Rome , but is again reduced by Pfennus and Cossus . The Parthians invade Armenia : Caius goes against them, and is treacherously wounded at Artagera by Addo the governor, as they were in conference; for which the Romans assault the city, take it by storm, and dismantle it, putting the governor and the whole garrison to the sword, and died soon after of the wound he had received from Addo , at Limgra , in the 24th year of his age, as he was returning to Rome ; and Augustus adopts Tiberius , and bestows the tribunitial power on him for five years.	V	331
4310	3003	4	Cinna (grandson to Pompey) with many other great men, conspire against Augustus ; it is discovered; Augustus pardons Cinna and his colleagues, and nominated Cinna to the next year's consulate.	V	332
4311	3004	5	Tiberius goes into Germany , and conquers abundance of the revolted nations, and returning to Rome is highly honoured and carressed.	V	333
4311	3004	5	This and the following year the famine is so extravagant at Rome , that all foreigners, gladiators, wrestlers and slaves, (except physicians and school-masters) are driven out of the city to 80 miles distance. Augustus procured provisions from Sicily , Sardinia , &c. at the publick expence, and sold them at a low rate. The Parthians desire Augustus to give them a king; he names Vonones , son of Phrabates , who is gladly received by the Parthians .	V	333
4312	3005	6	Tiberius returns into Germany , and subdues the revolted Germans wherever he comes. Cornelius Cossus goes against the Gituli , who revolting from king Juba , massacred all the Romans they found in his country, and committed dreadful ravages; he defeated them with vast slaughter, and obliged them to accept of what conditions he thought fit to grant them. Augustus banishes his grandson Posthumus , for his scandalous and wicked behaviour.	V	334
4312	3005	6	The Jews and Samaritans complain to Augustus against Archelaus for his wicked and tyrannical reign; Augustus sends for him to Rome , and hears both his accusers and him, condemns him to banishment, and confiscates all his goods, and makes Judea a Roman province, and Cyrenius the governor of Syria is sent to tax it, and then sells Archelaus's palaces, seizes upon all his treasure, and returns to Antioch .	IV	192
4313	3006	7	One Judas and one Saducus spirit up some of the Jews to commit the most horrid butcheries and devastations upon the Gentiles , and the other Jews that did not join them; this brought on a grievous famine, and that a pestilence.	IV	193
4313	3006	7	The Samaritans , out of spite to the Jews , privately strew dead men's bodies up and down the temple at the time of the passover: So that the priests are forced to leave off their solemnity till it was repurified.	IV	194
4313	3006	7	Tiberius goes against Maroboduus king of the Martomanni , a prince of vast personal strength, who with an army of 70,000 foot and 4000 horse, threatened Italy with an invasion. Messalinus going out of Pannonia and Dalmatia to reinforce Tiberius , the Pannonians and Dalmatians under the two Botta's , with each 100,000 men, revolt, and penetrate into Macedon , and kill all the Romans they meet with. Augustus raises a very large army, and puts Germanicus the son of Drusus at the head of it.	V	335
4314	3007	8	A famine rages to such a degree in one of the Botta's camp, that he offers Tiberius to treat of peace; which being granted, this Botta engages and kills the other Botta , which subdued most of the revolters.	V	337
4314	3007	8	Augustus , upon hearing the petitions of the Roman knights about the Papian Peperan law, he doubly rewarded those who were married and had children, and heavily fined the unmarried debauchees.	V	338
4315	3008	9	After various battles and different successes, Tiberius and Germanicus proved too hard for the Pannonians and Dalmatians , disarmed them, and restored peace; and returning to Rome , are received with great honour.	V	340
4315	3008	9	Quintilius Varus being now appointed governor in Germany , by his cruelty and covetousness stirred up the people to revolt; Arminius deceives Varus , persuades him to remove to the distant provinces, then pretends to be his guide against the revolters, conducts him into a large forest, surrounded on all sides with steep hills, where he is attacked, and not finding it possible to get away, he and most of his officers kill themselves; the enemy cut off almost three complete legions, and six cohorts, a few escaping by favour of the night: Augustus was so extremely concerned at this loss, that in fits of frenzy he would tear his hair, and knock his head against the wall, crying out, Restore the Legions Varus ; which he continued several months, letting his hair and beard grow, and kept this as a day of mourning annually during his life.	V	343

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4316	3009	10	Tiberius passes the Alps , enters Germany , forces the Germans from the neighbourhood of the Rhine , and so secures Gaul from their inroads, and having celebrated Augustus's birth-day in his camp, &c. returns to Rome .	V	342
4317	3010	11	The poet Ovid is banished to Tomas , a cold barren country, by Augustus , where he continued to his death, though he often petitioned Cæsar for relief.	V	343
4317	3010	11	Augustus publishes a law, forbidding all augurs, astrologers, and fortune-tellers to utter publicly or privately predictions concerning the death of any person whatever, upon account of the disturbance among the nobility those practices had already bred.	V	344
4317	3010	11	Augustus growing old and declining, causes the senate to declare Tiberius his colleague in the government, with power equal to himself.	V	344
4318	3011	12	Augustus publishes a law against the authors of all lampoons and satirical writings, declaring it high-treason, and punishable with death; and causes the ædiles in the city, and the governors in colonies, to make a strict search after such books and writings, and to commit them to the flames, and to punish the authors with great severity.	V	345
4318	3011	12	Augustus writes two letters, one to Tiberius in favour of the senate, the other to the senate in favour of Germanicus , desires them to choose 24 of their members with whom he may advise, and begs to be excused coming to the senate-house upon account of his age; they agree, that what the twenty senators, the consuls for the year, the consuls elect, Augustus , and his adopted son and nephew should enact, should be accounted the edict of the senate.	V	345
4319	3012	13	The senate desire Augustus to accept of another ten years absolute government, his former being near expired, which doing, he confers the tribunitial power on Tiberius for the same term.	V	345
4320	3013	14	Augustus takes Tiberius into the censorship with himself, and makes a census, by which the people in Rome appeared to be 4,537,000.	V	345
4320	3013	14	Augustus leaves Rome , and goes to Naples to assist at the solemn sports that were to be exhibited on his birth-day: Soon after they were over he was seized with a Diarrhœa (or flux) leaves Naples and returns towards Rome ; but growing too weak to travel, stops at Nola in Campania , and is confined to his bed: Livia attending him, sends for Tiberius , who comes; Augustus declares him his successor, and desires him to pursue his steps in the government: He died 19th of August , aged 75 years, 10 months, and 26 days, and reigned from his first consulship 56 years, but from the battle of Actium only 43: He was carried to Rome with great honour and solemnity, where Tiberius ordered the senate to meet, and the vestal-virgins to bring out his will, which began thus; Since the Gods have been pleased to deprive me of my grand children, Caius and Lucius, I declare Tiberius my Heir, &c. His body was carried with the utmost pomp, and burnt in the Campus Martii , his wife Livia and some of the chiefs of the Roman knights watching the pile and gathering up the bones and ashes, which they put into a golden urn, for five days together, and then buried it in the pompous mausoleum he had prepared for that purpose in his life-time.	V	349
4320	3013	14	Tiberius orders the tribune who had young Agrippa in his custody to murder him, which he doing, Tiberius denies he gave any such orders, but it was afterwards smothered.	V	354
4320	3013	14	The two consuls, Sextus Pompeius and Sextus Apulius , first take the oath of fidelity to Tiberius , and then administer it to the senate, people, and soldiery: The senate offers Tiberius the government; he pretends inability; they humbly beg him to accept it; he complies, beginning his reign in the 56th year of his age, invested with the same unbounded power that Augustus died in possession of: He would not let his mother receive the honours voted her by the senate, and took away Julia's pension, so that she died miserably, in the 15th year of her banishment, and Sempronius Gracchus , one of her chief favourites, he put to death.	V	358
4320	3013	14	Percennius raises a mutiny in the army in Pannonia , which plunder all the country round Bleffus : Their general strives to reduce them, but is not able: Tiberius sends his son Drusus , with his governor Sejanus , against him, who strives to appease them, but is not able; but an eclipse of the moon happening the night of that day Drusus had harangued them, the mutineers (being ignorant of the cause) thought 'twas a signal of the god's displeasure, and so were easily prevailed upon to return to their duty, and the authors of the revolt were executed, and all things being settled amicably, Drusus returned to Rome .	V	364
4320	3013	14	The legions in Germany revolt, kill some of the centurions and drive away the rest: Germanicus , the emperor's nephew, strives to appease them; they offer to make him emperor; he strives to get from them, is stopped and threatened to be murdered; but at length by stratagem quits them, and some are executed: Then he goes against the Germans , and comes upon the Marfi , and destroys all for 50 miles round, without the loss of one Roman ; but as he returned several nations attacked him, but he defeats them all, and goes into winter quarters, loaded with booty. Tiberius , jealous of Germanicus , strives by all arts possible to make himself popular, refuses many of the honours offered him, forbids priests or temples to be decreed him, lessens the taxes, &c.	V	372
4321	3014	15	The Germans quarrelling among themselves, Germanicus enters the country of the Catti , puts vast numbers to the sword; some submit, and others fly into the woods, so that he laid waste all the open country, burnt their villages, and reduced Mattium their capital to ashes.	V	373
4321	3014	15	Arminius the German quarrels with and besieges Segestes in his camp: Germanicus goes to the relief of Segestes , engages Arminius , and puts him to flight; and among the many prisoners that were taken was Thufeldis , the wife of Arminius.

			(1016)		Vol. Pag.
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
			Arminius , great with child; but Arminius gets recruits, and skirmishes with Germanicus , and gets advantages over him and Corcina , but at length is put to flight.		V	379
4321	3014	15	Tiberius recalls Rufus , and sends Valerius Gratus governor of Judea , who continued in that post 11 years.		IV	194
4322	3015	16	Germanicus again engages Arminius , assisted by many German princes, and defeats him with great slaughter and spoil, ascribes the whole glory to Tiberius , and caused him to be declared emperor in the field of battle; and raising a mount, put the arms of the enemy on it as trophies, with the names of the conquered nations under each: This so enraged the Germans that they come to a second battle, wherein they are again defeated with prodigious slaughter; upon which the Angriarii submit, are pardoned, and suffered to live quietly under their own laws. The war being over, Germanicus imbarques himself and a good part of his army on board 100 transports; a storm arising, the fleet is dispersed; some swallowed up by the waves, some dashed to pieces against the rocks, &c. so that abundance of damage was done, and very great loss sustained; but upon his landing he made good his losses, by celebrating and plundering the Marfi .		V	387
4322	3015	16	A slave of Posthumus Agrippa gives out that he was the prince, and had escaped death; and as he was like him, caused great commotions in Italy ; but being seized by stratagem, he was put privately to death, and so the affair dropt.		V	389
4323	3016	17	Tiberius soon after the return of Germanicus to Rome , orders him a most magnificent triumph, and shews him all possible outside marks of favour and esteem, but secretly strove and resolved to destroy him.		V	390
4323	3016	17	Archelaus , king of Cappadocia , coming to Rome to make his submissions to Tiberius , is by him accused, but excused by the senate; but being slighted, is said to die of grief, after having reigned 50 years, and his country reduced to a Roman province. At the same time dies Antiochus king of Comagene , and Philopater king of Cilicia . The provinces of Syria and Judea apply for a relief in their taxes; all which occasions great disturbances in the east, whereupon Germanicus is sent thither to regulate them.		V	391
4323	3016	17	The most dreadful earthquake ever known happens this year in Asia , which overturned twelve very famous cities, most of whose inhabitants were buried in the ruins of their houses, and those that fled to the fields swallowed up by the opening of the earth: Tiberius remits the taxes of these cities for five years to come, and gave large sums to rebuild the cities.		V	392
4323	3016	17	Tacfarinas the Numidian having drawn his countrymen and several other African nations into a revolt, was overthrown by Furius Camillus , in a pitched battle, though Camillus had but one legion and a few auxiliaries, and the other a very numerous army.		V	393
4323	3016	17	The poet Ovid dies at Tomos in Pontus , whither he was banished by Augustus ; and the historian Livy , at Padua in Italy , his native city.		V	394
4324	3017	18	Germanicus at his arrival in Armenia , with the consent and approbation of the nobility and people, puts the diadem upon the head of Zeno , the son of Polemon king of Pontus , and then reduced Cappadocia and Comagene to two Roman provinces, their kings being dead. Piso being the declared enemy of Germanicus , the king of the Nabatheans at a grand entertainment presenting Germanicus and Agrippina with large and heavy golden crowns, gives Piso one much less, as his publick character was much lower; Piso throws it away with much contempt and provoking behaviour.		V	395
4325	3018	19	Maroboduus , king of the Suevians , whose power Rome dreaded, was this year drove out of his kingdom, and obliged to live the last 18 years of his life at Ravenna in Italy . Some of the Sueves are allowed to settle beyond the Danube , to whom Tiberius gives them one Vannius to be their king.		VII	541
4325	3018	19	Germanicus blaming Piso for his ill conduct, Piso poisons him, of which he dies at Antioch in his return to Rome , in the 34th year of his age.		V	398
4325	3018	19	Occia , the president of the vestal virgins at Rome , after having governed that society 57 years, dies, and Tiberius puts Afinus , Pollio's daughter, in that office. Corn being very scarce and dear, he fixed the price; and that the seller should not lose the advantage of the advanced price, paid himself two Nummi , or 14 pence per bushel, to make it good.		V	402
4326	3019	20	Piso coming to Rome , is accused of Germanicus's death, debauching the army, &c. upon which great commotions are among the populace, and Piso is said to lay violent hands upon himself, though highly favoured by Tiberius .		V	405
4326	3019	20	Tacfarinas having again stirred up commotions in Africa , is put to flight by L. Apronius the present governor of that province, who decimated a Roman cohort for giving ground at the first onset, and put them to death; this severity so animated the Romans , that 500 of them put a large body of the enemy to flight, and their whole army was routed by Apronius Cestianus , the proconsul's son.		V	407
4326	3019	20	Valerius Gratus governor of Judea deposes Ananus (or Annas) the high-priest, in the 15th year of his pontificate, and raised Jshmael the son of Fabas to that dignity.		IV	194
4326	3019	20	Tiberius publishes a decree forbidding all Jews and Egyptians staying any longer in Rome , upon account of the scandalous behaviour of many of the meaner sort of the Jews and Egyptians .		IV	195
4327	3020	21	The Gauls , under Julius Florus , (a native of Treves) revolt, and are defeated by Acilius Aviola ; they are again defeated by Julius Indus , after which Florus killed himself with his own sword; this put an end to the insurrection of Treves ; but the Edui under Sacrovir appear 4000 strong, but are likewise overthrown by Silius , and then Sacrovir kills himself.		V	414

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1017)	Vol.	Pag.
4327	3020	21	Valerius Gratus deposes Ishmael from the high-priesthood at Jerusalem , and gave it to Eleazar , the son of Ananus the late deposed high-priest.	IV	194
4328	3021	22	Valerius Gratus deposes Eleazar the Jewish high-priest, and advances Simon the son of Camith to that dignity.	IV	194
4328	3021	22	Bleesus the Roman general engages Tacfarinas the Numidian prince, defeats him, follows him into the mountains, kills many of his men, and took his brother prisoner, and then returned to Rome .	V	414
4329	3022	23	Sejanus poisons Drusus , and debauches his wife Livia , and sets about the destruction of Agrippina and her two sons.	V	416
4329	3022	23	Tiberius moves the Roman senate in favour of the cities of Cytra in Asia , and Ægyra in Achaia , both overthrown by an earthquake, and they decree an exemption from taxes for three years.	V	419
4329	3022	23	Tiberius complains to the Roman senate against the stage-players so effectually, that they are prohibited acting in, and banished from Rome and Italy .	V	419
4329	3022	23	Simon the Jewish high-priest is deposed, and Joseph (surnamed Caiaphas , son-in-law to Annas) put in his stead.	IV	194
4330	3023	24	Tacfarinas the Numidian king is utterly routed and killed, and his son and many of his nobles taken prisoners, by P. Dollabella , proconsul of Africa . One Curtisius strove to raise a servile war, but was happily prevented before much mischief was done.	V	421
4331	3024	25	Cremutius Cordus , a celebrated historian, is accused and tried for praising Brutus in his Annals , &c. apprehending the revenge of Tiberius would fall heavy upon him, starved himself to death, and his books were publicly burnt at Rome , though privately read afterwards.	V	423
4331	3024	25	The Cyzicans are accused of neglecting the worship of the deified Augustus , and of committing violence upon some Roman citizens, for which they are deprived of their liberty granted them for their assistance in the Mabridatick war.	V	424
4331	3024	25	The Lacedæmonians and Messenians send ambassadors to the Roman senate to decide their pretensions to the temple of Diana , which is done in favour of the latter.	V	426
4332	3025	26	Poppæus Sabinus is honoured with the ensigns of a triumph, for entirely defeating the revolted Thracians .	V	427
4332	3025	26	Ambassadors from Asia come to Rome to have it there determined in which of the eleven contending cities the temple decreed to Tiberius should be erected, which by the senate is given to Smyrna , and a legate extraordinary appointed to superintend the building.	V	428
4332	3025	26	Tiberius leaves Rome , under pretence of going to Capua to dedicate a temple to Jupiter , and one at Nola to Augustus , but really with an intention never to return to it again, attended by Sejanus , Cocceius Nerva , Curtius Atticus , and some learned Greeks , and lived retired eleven years. Sejanus maliciously accuses young Nero and his brother Drusus of conspiring against Tiberius .	V	429
4332	3025	26	Pontius Pilate is made governor of Judea instead of Valerius Gratus , which office he held 10 years, and made it one continued scene of venal justice, rapine, tyranny, and every wicked action: At his first coming he ordered his standards to be carried into Jerusalem , and his army quartered there in the night-time, but next morning lets them up publicly, which occasioned great disturbance and contention among the Jews , who esteem them idolatrous; they go in a body to him at Cæsarea , and continue prostrate before his house five whole days and nights, beseeching him to remove them; the fifth day he comes out, mounts on his tribunal, as if come to hear and redress them, but orders his troops to murder all that did not depart immediately; but at last on their offering to suffer, without making any resistance, he promise to remove the standard from their metropolis.	IV	194
4333	3026	27	Atilius having built an amphitheatre at Tidene , to exhibit shews of gladiators, vast numbers of people from Rome , &c. coming thither, by their weight pull down the building about their ears, so that 50,000 persons were killed and maimed; this occasioned a law, that no person worth less than 400,000 sesterces should exhibit the shew of gladiators. At the same time a fire breaks out on Mount Cælius , which burnt with so much rage and fury, that it utterly consumed all the houses in that part of the city of Rome ; and Tiberius makes good the loss out of his own treasury, for which the senate ordered the name to be changed from Cælius to Mount Augustus . After this Tiberius retires to Caprea , an island of very difficult access, and lived there 10 years, and then died, during which time he gave himself up to all manner of lewdness and debauchery.	IV	195
4334	3027	28	The Frisians shake off the Roman yoke, and defeat L. Apronius , who was sent against them. This year dies Julia , the grand-daughter of Augustus , in the island of Trimetus , 20 years after her banishment.	V	434
4335	3028	29	Livia , the mother of Tiberius , dies, in the 86th year of her age, commonly stiled Julia Augusta , because adopted by Augustus in his last will into the Julian family, a woman of very extraordinary parts, wisdom and ambition.	V	435
4336	3029	30	Sejanus , Tiberius 's chief minister and favourite, had now so fixed himself in power, that the senate enacts that his birth-day should be annually celebrated, that his statues that were set up in every quarter of the city should be adored, that vows and sacrifices should be offered for his safety, &c.	V	438
4336	3029	30	This being the 30th and last Jewish Jubilee since its first celebration in the land of Canaan , Christ enters upon his mission of preaching the gospel of peace and salvation, is baptized by John , turns water into wine at a marriage in Cana , drives the traders out of the temple, confers privately with Nicodemus , &c.	IV	202
4337	3030	31	The disciples of Christ baptize their proselytes by the command of Christ , and have a dispute about it with the disciples of John , while Christ goes into other parts of Judea , preaching the gospel and working miracles, &c.	IV	203

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1918)	Vol.	Page
4337	3030	31	John the Baptist beheaded, by order of Herod Antipas tetrarch of Galilee , to gratify the revenge of Herodias his wife, who had been the wife of his brother Philip , and was grand-daughter to Herod the Great .	IV	203
4337	3030	31	Tiberius makes himself and his favourite Sejanus consuls this year; this occasions the senate to heap new honours upon Sejanus ; they join his name with Tiberius's in all inscriptions, erect new statues to him, and slay victims before them, and pass a decree to confirm to him and Tiberius the consulate for five years. Tiberius forbids Sejanus to come to him, though he had resigned the consulate, and began to take publick notice of Caius (surnamed Caligula) the only surviving son of Germanicus and Agrippina ; which stung Sejanus , who found his power much decreased and his honours lessened. Tiberius takes the command of the prætorian guard from him, and in a letter to the senate desires them to imprison him, which is done, and he is condemned and executed in the same day, which was followed by a general slaughter of his children, relations, friends and adherents.	V	441
4338	3031	32	Tiberius grows insatiable for blood, suspicious of every body, and puts vast numbers to the most exquisite torments and cruel deaths.	V	445
4339	3032	33	Tiberius causes his grandson Drusus to be sentenced to be starved to death, which was executed, and many others dispatched themselves the same way.	V	448
4339	3032	33	This being the fourth year of Christ's mission, the Jews crucify him.	IV	227
4340	3033	34	Several of the great men and ladies at Rome destroy themselves to avoid the cruelty of Tiberius and his favourite Macro , who make dreadful havock upon every slight pretence. The two consuls having solemnized the 19th of August , on which the 20th year of Tiberius reign ended, with publick vows and sacrifices, he ordered them to be tried for taking upon them to confirm his authority for ten years more, for which he has them condemned and executed.	V	449
4341	3034	35	Orodes , son of Artabanus , is first, and the father afterwards, overthrown by Pharasmanes , and forced to fly to the Carmanians ; upon which Lucius Vitellius , governor of Syria , comes with his legions, and drives away Pharasmanes , and sets Tiridates on the throne of Parthia , who soon after was driven out again by Artabanus .	IV	316
4342	3035	36	Tiberius's cruelty still continuing, Tigranes (grandson of Herod king of Judea , and of Archelaus king of Cappadocia , who himself had been king of Armenia) was like a private person, without any regard to his publick character, condemned and executed among other pretended criminals. This year Rome suffered greatly by the overflowing of the Tiber , and by fire, which burnt down that part of the circus contiguous to Mount Aventine : Upon this occasion Tiberius paid above 100,000 great sesterces, to make up the loss to the owners of the houses.	V	452
4343	3036	37	Tiberius dies in his retirement, on the 16th day of March , having reigned 22 years, six months, and 26 days, aged 77 years, 4 months, and 9 days: Caius Caligula , his adopted grandson, (son of Germanicus) succeeds him, by virtue of Tiberius's declaration in his favour while living; he enters his government with releasing and pardoning all state prisoners, remitting fines, reducing taxes, &c. and to the universal joy of all, in his first speech to the senate, promised to govern with justice and moderation, to do nothing without their advice, and to follow their directions in all things.	V	461
4343	3036	37	In the month of July Caius Caesar Caligula enters upon the consulship with his uncle Claudius ; the same day he told the senate he greatly disapproved of the disorders of the late administration, promised to avoid them, and solemnly protested that making his people happy was his whole desire and care. During this year he restored the kingdom of Comagene , reduced to a Roman province 18 years ago by Tiberius , to Antiochus , son of that Antiochus then driven out, and paid him 100,000,000 sesterces, or about 1,000,000 £ sterling for the neat revenue during that time.	V	461
4343	3036	37	Pontius Pilate having great complaints exhibited against him by the Jews ; he is sent for to Rome to answer them, and the emperor Caius Caligula sends Marcellus in his stead: Caligula also gave Agrippa , (son of Asiobolus and grandson of Herod the Great , whom Tiberius had imprisoned) his liberty, and the tetrarchy of his late uncle Philip , and added to it Great Abylene in Syria , with the title of king: Agrippa staid a year after this at Rome , and then returned in great splendor to his kingdom.	IV	258
4343	3036	37	The governor of Alexandria having used the Egyptian Jews in a very cruel manner, for refusing to worship Caligula as a god, Agrippa informs the emperor of the true state of the case; Caligula sends Bessus to seize that bloody governor and bring him to Rome , where he was stripped of all his riches, then banished into an island of the Archipelago , where some time after he was put to death.	IV	258
4343	3036	37	Herod Antipas , before whom Christ appeared, envying Agrippa's good fortune and honour, of being a king, goes to Rome to beg the same favour; but Agrippa sending Caligula word that he had laid up arms for 70,000 men to have assisted Sejanus , he was stripped of his tetrarchy, after he had enjoyed it 43 years, and Caligula bestowed it and his treasure upon Agrippa , and sends Herod prisoner to Lyons in France .	IV	259
4343	3036	37	Caligula orders Petronius governor of Syria to set up his statue in the temple of Jerusalem ; the Jews in the most humble manner supplicate the forbearance; Agrippa goes to Rome , and with great difficulty gets Caligula to countermand his order.	IV	260
4343	3036	37	Caligula is taken so ill that his life was much despaired of; and having done many enjoining things for the people, the greatest demonstrations of sorrow are shewn; he recovers, and then joy takes its turn; but it is supposed his sickness had affected his brain, for ever after he acted like a wild tyrant and furious madman, committing the most monstrous, absurd and cruel ravages.	V	463

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
4343	3036	37	Caligula adopts Tiberius the son of Drusus , now 18 years old, and commands him to kill himself, and sends messengers to see it performed; this being done, he gives a full loose to his furious and mad passions, and commences an open enemy to mankind, a complete tyrant, and outrageous monster, committing the most horrid butcheries, cruelties, and inhumanities, causing his nearest relations, greatest friends, best subjects, and most innocent persons to be put to death in his presence, to gratify his savage madness; marries and divorces several ladies, and claims divine honours, institutes priests to his own deity, builds temples, and has sacrifices offered to him.	V 465
4344	3037	38	Caligula assumes the second consulship, and has Lucius Apronius Cestianus for his colleague; after 30 days he lays down the fasces, and when he entered upon and laid down his consulship, like a private person took the usual oaths; the people, fearful of his cruelties, not appearing at the publick shews which he daily exhibited with so much assiduity as he required, he ordered the publick granaries to be shut up with an intent to starve them all, and wished that they had all but one neck, that he might butcher all at one stroke: His horse Incitatus he frequently invited to his table, and fed him with gilt oats, and presented him with the richest wines in gold cups; his stable was marble, his manger ivory, his collar pearls, and his coverings purple; he gave him many attendants with rich liveries, and made him one of the college of his priests, and colleague to the chief nobility, and purposed to have made him consul; he revived the law of majesty, and did every thing that might make him feared and hated.	V 46
4345	3038	39	Caius causes all his ships he had ready built, and orders great numbers to be built, and all to be link'd together in a crescent, from the point of the bay of Baiæ to Puteoli in Campania ; upon these were laid planks, and upon them earth; then houses were built, streets and roads made, &c. which rendered shipping so scarce, that a dearth followed, which carried off great numbers of the poorer people. The work being finished with all expedition, Caligula , attended with the heads of the city and army, first offers sacrifices to Envy at Puteoli , then magnificently arrayed, armed with the breast plate of Alexander the Great , and a civic crown on his head, rode to Puteoli , and stayed there a night and a day, illuminated the bridge, streets, &c. with an infinite number of lights, boasting he had turned the sea into land, and the day into night: The next day at his return back, in the midway mounted a magnificent throne, and made an oration in praise of this mad action, and then ordered a vast number of people of all ages and conditions to be thrown promiscuously into the sea, many of which perished; then returned to Rome in triumph, and the bridge was broke down, and the ship he had borrowed restored, &c. and thus in two years he squandered away 18 millions, besides his ordinary income: To raise money he obliged the greatest part of the inhabitants to repurchase their freedoms, made void wills, confiscated the goods of those he thought fit, and obliged the nobility to purchase them at his own price, &c.	V 470
4345	3038	39	Caius Caesar Caligula deposes both the consuls, for which one killed himself; then raises an army of 200,000 men, and pretends to go against the Germans , does nothing, and returns into Gaul , and ruins all the people by extortions, &c. Lentulus and Getulius are charged with and executed for treason, and Caius's two sisters banished for adultery. The Germans are defeated by Galba , and Caius takes the honour to himself.	V 471
4346	3039	40	Caius takes upon himself the consulship a third time alone, for 12 days, being at Lyons , where he had magnificent shews, &c. At the end of twelve days he laid down the consulship, and two new consuls were nominated. Caligula having invited Ptolemy king of Mauritania , cousin-germain to his father Germanicus , to his court, and for a time treated him with great magnificence and civility; but imagining that he was in the people's favour, first arrested and condemned him to banishment, and then ordered him to be privately massacred as he was carrying along; and also ordered Mithridates king of Armenia to be arrested and banished, which was performed, with abundance of other extravagancies and unjust extortions, &c.	V 378
4347	3040	41	The Mauritanians soon after the death of their king revolt, but after the loss of several battles they are subjected to the Romans , and ruled by their governors like other provinces, and not by their own princes.	VII 159
4347	3040	41	Caius holds the consulship for the fourth time only seven days. Cassius Cherea , tribune of a prætorian cohort, a brave and gallant officer, being frequently made the executioner of Caius's cruelties, is so moved with pity for his country, and detestation of his villainy, that he and several others conspire to destroy the monster, which they did in his palace, and are said to have cut off and eat part of his flesh, the 24th of January , after he had reigned three years, nine months, and 28 days; the next night Julius Lupus dispatched his wife Cæsonia , by stabbing her, and his infant daughter, by dashing out her brains against the walls. Some of the senators were for seizing the government and reducing it to a commonwealth again, but Caius is succeeded by his uncle Claudius , son of Drusus , (who died in Germany) and grandson of Mark Anthony and Octavia the sister of Augustus , whom the soldiers and people proclaimed emperor.	V 491
4347	3040	41	Claudius is advised to punish Cherea , Lupus , and a few others with death; but all the other conspirators were pardoned. He abolished the law of majesty, called home the exiles, eased the tributes, restored the estates illegally forfeited, refused the honours he was complimented with, &c. gains the love of the people, but being naturally timorous, was insulted by some bravos.	V 492

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
(1020)
4347	3040	41	Agrippa king of the Jews having greatly contributed to the promotion of Claudius to the empire, is rewarded, with the addition of Judea , Samaria , and the southern parts of Idumea to his kingdom, and a confirmation of all Caligula's favours with great additions, making a solemn alliance with him, and passing several edicts in favour of the Jews . Claudius bestows the kingdom of Chalcis upon his brother Herod . Agrippa has the honour of consulship, and Herod the prætorship, bestowed upon them; all which grants were engraven on copper, and set up in the capitol.	IV	261
4347	3040	41	Claudius restores Mithridates the Iberian to his kingdom, Antiochus to the kingdom of Comagene , and Mithridates the Sicilian to the kingdom of Bosphorus , of which they had unjustly been deprived by Caligula .	V	493
4348	3041	42	A great famine being in Rome , Claudius forms a large and commodious harbour at the mouth of the Tiber , and completed it; but soon after his death 'twas through neglect choaked up with sand: At the same time also he set about draining the lake Fucinus in the county of the Marf , and conveying its waters by deep canals into the Tiber , employing 30,000 men continually for 11 years, but without success.	V	494
4348	3041	42	Messalina , wife of Claudius the emperor, soliciting Silenus to lewdness, he refusing, she falsely accuses him of designing to murder the emperor; upon which he is executed: This occasions a conspiracy of the nobility and gentry against Claudius , the head of which was Annius Vinicianus , who had a great share in the murder of Caius . Camillus , governor of Dalmatia , writes him a letter full of reproaches, and threatens him with a cruel death if he did not resign; but the superstition of those times getting into the soldiers heads, they imagined ill omens, and fell upon their officers and killed them. Camillus making his escape, was afterwards stabbed in the arms of his wife, after he had bore the title of emperor five days. This gave Messalina a handle to execute many innocent persons, for the sake of their estates, and pass by the guilty for large sums of money, &c. but some of them were executed. Otho succeeded Camillus in Dalmatia , and cut off the heads of those soldiers who had murdered their officers.	V	496
4349	3042	43	Claudius deprives the Lycians of their liberty, for murdering some Roman citizens in a tumult; and to quiet the differences that had arisen among them, and added their country to the province of Pamphilia . Messalina out of spite persuades Claudius to put his niece Julia , the daughter of Germanicus , and his niece Julia , the daughter of Drusus and grand daughter of Tiberius , to death.	V	496
4349	3042	43	Claudius by the instigation of one Bericus , a fugitive Briton , sends Plautius the Roman governor in Gaul to invade Britain ; which he did, and vanquished them in several battles, and garrisons several towns, and writes to the emperor, who comes himself with a large army engages and defeats the Britains with great slaughter, takes their strong holds, and garrisons them, and makes Plautius governor of Britain , &c.	VII	429
4349	3042	43	Agrippa upon his return to Jerusalem shews a much greater zeal for the Jewish religion than his predecessor; deposed Theophilus from the high-priesthood, and gave it to Simon Cantharus ; but soon after deposed him, and offered it to Jonathan the son of Annas , who had been deposed, but he refused it.	IV	261
4350	3043	44	Claudius at his return to Rome is honoured with a triumph and the surname of Britannicus ; his two sons Vespasian and Titus behaved so gallantly under Plautius , as to fight 30 battles, and subdue two powerful nations of the Britains , and reduced 20 towns, with the Isle of Wight . Plautius increased his conquests, and at his return to Rome has an ovation, &c.	VII	429
4350	3043	44	Claudius after his triumph restored to the senate the provinces of Achaia and Macedon , which thenceforth were governed by proconsuls: He gave the title of king to Cottius , prince of the Alps ; and took away the liberty of the Rhodians , for their crucifying some Roman citizens.	V	497
4351	3044	45	The dreadful famine, foretold by Agabus , rages in Judea , against which the new Christian churches planted at Antioch sends the believers at Jerusalem a liberal relief, by the hands of Paul and Barnabas .	IV	263
4351	3044	45	Rome being now very full of statues, Claudius enacts that no more should be set up without the special appointment of the senate, and orders several to be taken down, he likewise punished very severely some governors of provinces that had misbehaved, &c.	V	498
4352	3045	46	M. Vicinius , brother-in-law to Claudius , dies of poison given him by the empress Messalina , for refusing her unchast desires. Assinus Gallus , son of Agrippina , Tiberius's first wife, conspired against Claudius to make himself emperor; is detected, and only banished, which gained Claudius great applause.	V	498
4353	3046	47	Many of the greatest men in Rome are put to death by Claudius , to gratify the revenge and covetousness of Messalina his wife.	V	499
4353	3046	47	The Cherusci , or inhabitants of Brunswick , desire Claudius to give them a king; he sends them Italicus , nephew of the famous Arminius ; but though they at first received him with great joy, yet they drove him from the throne some time after for living after the Italian manner; but he being again restored by the Longobards , cruelly oppressed the Cherusians .	V	501
4353	3046	47	One Cneius Novius , a Roman knight, comes armed with a dagger into the audience-room, with an intent to kill Claudius , but being seized and tormented on the rack, confesses his intention, but will not discover any accomplice or abettor.	V	501
4354	3047	48	Claudius as censor creates several new patrician families in the room of those that were extinct, supplies the vacancies in the senate, promotes some of the Gaulish nobility to the senatorial dignity, and by a census finds 6,900,000 citizens in Rome .	V	502

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4354	3047	48	Messalina the Roman empress grew so monstrous in her lust, that to have one Caius Silius (a very beautiful young man) to herself, she forced him to divorce his wife Silana , and kept him company openly: Silius proposes to kill Claudius and to marry her, and to adopt Germanicus : She approves all; first divorces herself from the emperor, and then marries Silius openly. Culturnia and Cleopatra (two of Claudius 's courtezans) tell him of it; he is at first frighted, but by the management of Narcissus , Silius , Messalina , and several others are executed, and all things settled quietly.	V	506
4355	3048	49	Agrippa (king of the Jews) spends great sums in rebuilding, beautifying, and strengthening a new quarter of the north side of Jerusalem , intending to wall it in, but is forbid by Claudius the Roman emperor: He grows so considerable, that as he was making a progress to Tiberias he is met and complimented by the kings of Comagene , Emesa , Leffer Armenia , Pontus and Chalcis ; But Vivius Marfus , governor of Syria , jealous of what they might consult about, came thither himself, and commanded them to return each to his own kingdom. Upon his return to Jerusalem he deposed Matthias the high-priest, and put Elionæus in his stead; and begins to persecute the Christians by beheading James the less, surnamed Boanerges , and imprisoning Peter . Going to Cæsarea with a vast train of nobility, to exhibit publick games in honour of Claudius , where declaring he received the governors of Tyre and Sydon again into favour, the people cried out, 'twas the voice of god, and not of man; which puffing him up with pride, he fell sick and died in five days, and Claudius turned his kingdom again into a Roman province, and made Cuspius Fadus the governor thereof; but Herod king of Chalcis got the superintendancy of the temple, and power of nominating the high-priest, and accordingly deposed Cantharus , and substituted Joseph the son of Cami in his room.	IV	262
4355	3048	49	Claudius marries Agrippina , his brother's daughter; a law is passed the day before to make such marriages lawful: She governed the emperor and the state with an uncontrollable power, went with Claudius into the senate, and set herself with him on the same tribunal in all publick ceremonies, and in the courts of justice: She got L. Annæus Seneca recalled from banishment, and made him tutor to her son Domitius , &c. and betrothed her son (now 12 years old) to Claudius 's daughter Octavia ; and caused Lollia Paulina to be beheaded, for attempting to get Claudius for a husband.	V	507
4355	3048	49	Claudius widens the circumference of Rome by enclosing Mount Aventine .	V	507
4356	3049	50	Claudius is persuaded by Pallas the freed-man, who had conducted the affair of Agrippina 's marriage, and was now criminally correspondent with her, to adopt Domitius her son, and give him the preference to his own son Germanicus , because Domitius was three years older, who from this time was called Nero-Claudius-Cæsar-Drusus-Germanicus ; the senate confirmed the adoption and called Agrippina Augusta .	V	508
4356	3049	50	Agrippina gets a colony of veterans to be sent to Cologne , the capital of the Ubii , where she was born, and called it Colonia Agrippinensis . The Catti making incursions into the Roman territories, are repulled with great slaughter by Pomponius Secundus , commander of the legions in Upper Germany .	V	508
4356	3049	50	Vannius , king of the Suevians , being for his haughty and insolent behaviour, after 30 years reign, driven out of his kingdom by the Hermundrians and Ligians , Claudius gives him lands and leave to live in Pannonia . Vangio and Sido , his nephews, part his kingdom between them.	VII	541
4357	3050	51	Nero , though but 14 years old, is presented with the manly robe, which qualified him for honours and employments: The senate decree, that in his 20th year he should be consul of Rome , and be now stiled prince of the Roman youth; but the friends and trusty servants of Britannicus are some put to death, and the others removed, &c. A great famine makes the people at Rome outrageous, and affront Claudius as the cause of it; but in 15 days time he gets a sufficient supply of corn and other necessities, which makes them easy.	V	509
4357	3050	51	P. Ostorius Scapula being sent into Britain , fell unexpectedly upon the Britains , who had broke into the Roman conquests, put great numbers to the sword, and dispersed the rest; built forts on the Severn , Avon , and Nen , and made that part south of these rivers a Roman province, and Camaladunum a Roman colony. The Iceni engage Ostorius , and after an obstinate battle are put to flight with great slaughter; but after many engagements, losing some part of his honour, he died of grief, and was succeeded by Aulus Didius .	VII	430
4358	3051	52	This year Claudius finished, at an immense charge, the aqueduct at Rome begun by Caligula 14 years before: 4060 persons with large salaries were appointed to keep it in repair: Likewise the great canal was finished, designed for draining the lake Fucinus , which had constantly employed 30,000 men for 11 years; before the waters were let out, Claudius exhibited a naval fight, in which 19,000 condemned criminals engaged on board 100 large galleys, representing the Sicilian and Rhodian fleets, and after an obstinate contest, many wounds, and much bloodshed, such of them as remained alive the emperor pardoned: When the water was let off 'twas found the canal was not deep enough; and when it was deepened, bridges were built and gladiators fought upon it; but the water breaking out with incredible violence, bore all down before it.	V	514
4358	3051	52	Ventidius Cumanus succeeded Alexander in the government of Judea : It being Passover time, he put guards before the gates of the temple, one of which shewing his nudity publickly, occasioned an uproar; he first tried by fair means to appease it, but not succeeding, he ordered all his troops to come to the place; this frighted the Jews so excessively, that flying in confusion more than 10,000 are stifled and crushed to death by running over one another.	IV	64

			(1022)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4358	3051	52	Some Galilean Jews going to a feast were insulted, and one killed; a skirmish ensues, in which many of them are killed by the Samaritans : They go to complain of the Samaritans to Cumanus , who refuses to do them justice: The matter being brought before Quadratus , governor of Syria , he sends the Samaritans and Cumanus to Rome , where the Samaritans were condemned to die, Cumanus banished, and Celer (one of his tribunes) dragged through the streets of Jerusalem , and then put to death.	IV	264
4359	3052	53	Nero , now about 16 years old, marries Octavia , whom he had betrothed three years before. He pleads for the Illyans , and obtains for them an immunity from all taxes and tributes, and prevails with Claudius to restore the Boeotians to their antient liberty, gets many favours bestowed on several others, &c. Claudius confers universal jurisdiction on the equestrian order.	V	515
4359	3052	53	Claudius Felix is made governor of Judea , in the room of Ventidius Cumanus ; without, the land swarmed with robbers and banditti, and within, with false prophets, &c. which occasioned Felix to use all manner of severities and unjust seizures upon the innocent as well as the seditious; for which being reproved by Jonathan the high-priest, he hired one Dorcas (a confidant of Jonathan's) to murder him, which was done accordingly.	IV	266
4360	3053	54	The empress Agrippina poisons the Roman emperor Caius Tiberius Claudius Nero , in the 64th year of his age, of which he dies the 13th of October , after he had reigned 13 years, 8 months, and 21 days, and his wife Agrippina's son Nero is declared emperor in his stead. Agrippina forces Narcissus the great favourite of Claudius to kill himself, who was the most profuse and rapacious creature living, surpassing Cræsus in wealth, his friendship being courted with large presents by foreign kings, cities and provinces. She also got Junius Silanus proconsul of Asia murdered, (a wealthy great-grandson of Augustus) to prevent his being emperor. Nero pronounces Claudius's funeral oration.	V	517
4361	3054	55	Nero , though but 18 years old, assumes the consulship, and restores Plautius Lateranus to his antient rank, who had been degraded for adultery with Messalina ; Nero falls in love with Acte , a beautiful slave, and slights his mother; she grows outrageous at Pallas her confidant's being turned out of the treasury, utters dreadful complaints and curses against Nero , publishes Germanicus's virtues, and title, &c. Nero causes Germanicus to be poisoned, and bestowed his estate in presents among his favourites, and banishes Agrippina his mother from the court, and confined her to her grandmother Antonia's house; she is unjustly accused, tried, acquitted, and received into favour again.	V	524
4362	3055	56	Nero , by the prompting and advice of his two companions, Otho and Senecio , falls into all manner of debauchery and excess, going disguised like a slave in the night-time, and committing great riots and disorders.	V	525
4364	3057	58	Silius , a noted informer and accuser of great men in the reign of Claudius , is prosecuted and banished. Nero falls in love with Poppæa Sabina , whose mother was put to death by Messalina ; she was the wife of Rufinus Crispinus , extremely beautiful, witty, and lewd: She forsook her husband, and lived publicly with Otho , the emperor's favourite: Nero takes her, and forbids Otho the court, and sent him governor to Lusitania , where he staid ten years with reputation. Cornelius Sylla , husband of Antonia daughter of Claudius , is falsely accused of treason, and banished to Marzeilles , &c.	V	527
4364	3057	58	The Armenians tired with the continual invasions of the Iberians on the one hand, and the Thracians on the other, send a solemn deputation to Nero at Rome , praying him to appoint them a king; Nero sends Domitius Corbulo into Armenia , who drives away Tiridates , and sets up Tigranes , the grandson of Herod the Great , upon the throne of Armenia ; but Vologeses king of Parthia drove him out, and again set his brother Tiridates upon the throne, but sent him to Rome to receive the crown from Nero , who put it on his head with his own hands, and so all differences were made up.	III	717
4365	3058	59	The Sicarii (or robbers) commit horrid murders and disorders in several parts of Judea , even in the temple itself: Festus being made governor in the room of Felix , takes great pains to suppress them; but Agrippa having the year before deposed Ananias from, and advanced Ishmael to the high-priesthood, several of these deposed priests claiming an equal quantity of tythes, occasioned great disturbances by their partizans. Upon the arrival of Festus , St. Paul was brought before him; but he appealing to Cæsar , was continued a prisoner.	V	552
4365	3058	59	Poppæa having got the ascendancy over Nero , endeavours all she can to get rid of Agrippina his mother, who is murdered in her bed by Nero's order, after having escaped an attempt to destroy her at sea. After this he gave himself up to all manner of lewdness, and introduced debauchery every where, so that it became universally fashionable.	V	553
4366	3059	60	Agrippa having advanced Ananias , a proud Sadducee , to the high-priesthood, and Festus being dead, he called a council before Abinus the now prætor came, and condemned and stoned to death St. James , and many other Christians .	III	717
4366	3059	60	Nero institutes contests of eloquence and poetry, and other games, to be exhibited every fifth year. A comet appears, and the people talk of Rubellius Plautus to succeed Nero .	V	535
4366	3059	60	Agrippa deposes Ananus from, and advances Jesus the son of Damneus to the high-priesthood at Jerusalem . The Sicarii or robbers and banditti were grown so bold as to come into Jerusalem , and carry off Eleazar son of the late high-priest, who was secretary of the temple; they send Eleazar word, that for his son's ransom he must get ten of their companions released; which for a large sum he does, &c.	IV	267
4366	3059	60	Agrippa taking the high-priesthood from Jesus , the son of Damneus , gives it to Jesus the son of Gamaliel ; each raise armed men, and commit the vilest

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Pag.
			outrages. The Levites obtain leave of Agrippa to wear white robes, like the priests.
4367	3060	61	The Britons having been extremely abused by the covetousness of the Roman governors, revolt under Boudicea their queen, and kill abundance of the Romans : Petilius Cerealis going to the Romans assistance with the ninth legion, the Britons fall upon him, rout him, and cut every man of the infantry to pieces; afterwards the Britons went to London , then inhabited chiefly by Romans , took it, and massacred all the Romans they found; the like they did elsewhere, killing 70,000 of the Romans , and their confederates. Suetonius the Roman governor collects his army together, and gives the Britons battle, overthrows them, and kills 80,000 of them, with the loss of only 400 Romans .	IV	267
4367	3060	61	Pedanius Secundus , governor of Rome , being murdered by some of his slaves, it was insisted upon that all dwelling under his roof, guilty or innocent, should be executed, which was done, to the number of 400.	V	539
4368	3061	62	Burrhus , one of Nero's teachers, who had been greatly instrumental in preventing much mischief, is said to die of poison.	V	541
4368	3061	62	Tigellinus gets to be Nero's intimate (a person of great viciousness) and advises him to murder Sylla , who was accordingly assassinated at his own table: Then Plautius is likewise dispatched, and Nero marries Poppæa publicly; she accuses Othavia of incontinency, who is banished into Campania , but is soon after recalled, but again accused, banished and murdered.	V	541
4368	3061	62	Nero recalls Albinus from, and sends Gessius Florus into Judea , who behaved so cruelly as occasioned the total destruction of the Jewish state and people, who upon a computation now made, are found to be 2,556,000.	V	543
4369	3062	63	The city of Pompeii in Campania was in a great measure overturned by an earthquake, and many others damaged. This year Poppæa brings forth a daughter, which is called Augusta , but dies when four months old.	IV	267
4369	3062	63	The Sarmatians begin to threaten the Roman empire; but Plautius Silvanus Ælianus getting assistance from the kings of the Bastarnians and Roxolaniens , prevents their invasion.	V	544
4370	3063	64	Nero grows so monstrously wicked, that he approved of those who made profession of obscenity, and condemned as hypocrites those who behaved with any degree of modesty. This year Rome is burnt, some say by Nero's express order, but he charges it upon the Christians : Upon part of the ruins he built a most magnificent palace, called the golden palace; upon the rest the city was rebuilt in a very commodious and grand manner, much superior to what it was before for beauty and convenience.	VII	603
4370	3063	64	Nero having accused the Christians (who were very numerous at Rome) with burning it, they were persecuted with all manner of cruelties and torments possible to be invented; and to supply his exchequer he robbed all the temples of his vast dominions, and melted down the images to make money.	V	648
4370	3063	64	Cæsarea being now adjudged to belong to Syria , the Jews revolt, and kill their governor Florus with stones, and nothing was to be seen but robberies, murders, and all manner of cruelties: The Cæsarians murder 20,000 Jews in their city, 2000 are murdered at Ptolemais , and 50,000 at Alexandria , Florus murdering all he met with at Jerusalem , so that fire and sword reduced all the country to the utmost desolation.	V	554
4371	3064	65	Nero's abominable behaviour occasioned a conspiracy against him, at the head of which was Caius Piso ; but being discovered before the execution, Nero puts many of the chiefs to death, among whom was Seneca his tutor, the consul Vestinus , Lucan the poet, &c.	IV	269
4371	3064	65	Poppæa being again with child, and finding fault with Nero , for some excesses, he kicks her on the belly and kills her; he would then have married Antonia , the daughter of Claudius , but she refusing, he orders her to be put to death, and married Statilia Messalina , widow of the late consul Atticus Vestinus .	V	558
4371	3064	65	This year Campania was damaged with dreadful tempests, violent whirlwinds, and earthquakes, by which whole villages were overturned, &c. At Rome a plague swept off 30,000 persons in a small time.	V	559
4372	3065	66	Nero goes into Greece , with a vast retinue of fidlers, songsters, &c. and has the prize allowed to him, for which he rewarded the judges with rich presents and the citizenship of Rome ; he also restored the Acheans to their former liberty.	V	560
4372	3065	66	Cestius governor of Syria besieges Jerusalem , but they corrupting some of his generals, the siege was raised, and the Jews pursued him, surrounded and cut off 4000 of his foot, and 400 horse, &c. Upon this Nero sends Vespasian into Judea with a great army to revenge the affront.	V	565
4373	3066	67	Vespasian enters Judea with upwards of 60,000 disciplined men, besides servants, relieves Sephoris , burns Gadara , and besieges Jotapa , which Josephus gallantly defended 47 days, when Vespasian took it by assault, and destroyed it with fire and sword, not one Jew escaping, 40,000 being killed, and only 12,000 made prisoners: Josephus surrendered himself, and was well received, and then prophesied to Vespasian his succession to the empire. Japtha was also taken, and all the men put to the sword, and the women and children carried away captive. Gamala was also taken, and 4000 put to the sword, but more destroyed themselves. Giscala also lost 6000 men, and 3000 taken prisoners; and so all Galilee was subdued.	IV	270
4373	3066	67	Nero plunders the province of Achaia , putting all the wealthy Greeks to death under various pretences, and seizing their effects: The like he does by Italy and Rome . Having loaded his fleet with all the riches of Greece , he returns towards Italy ; but a storm robbed him of his ships and his plunder, few of them escaping: He enters Naples , Antium , Albanus , and Rome , through a breach in the wall, as a victor in the Olympick games, &c.	IV	273
				V	568

			(1024)		Vol. Page
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
4374	3067	68	The zealots at Jerusalem divide themselves into two different parties, and destroy one another by thousands, committing the most horrid cruelties, &c.		IV	276
4374	3067	68	Nero having tired all his people with his cruel butcheries and injustice, Julius Vindex , governor of Celtic Gaul , revolts, as does Galba , governor of Hispania Tarraconensis , but refuses the name of emperor, &c. Augustus Nero deposes the two consuls, and takes that office upon himself; then prepares to go against the revolters, with an army of fidlers, players, &c. and arms his concubines like Amazons , and appoints them for his guard. Virginus governor of Upper Germany comes against Vindex ; an engagement happens, contrary to the two generals orders, 20,000 Gauls are killed, and Vindex murders himself: Virginus is declared emperor, but he will not accept it.		V	573
4374	3067	68	A famine being in Rome , and ships coming in from Egypt , with sand for the gladiators instead of corn, so exasperated the common people that they threw down Nero's statues, tore his images, plundered the houses of his friends and favourites, &c. At the same time news was brought that the German legions had revolted; being in a great fright, Nero flies from Rome ; the senate assembles, and declares Galba emperor; and Nero causes himself to be stabbed and dies.		V	576
4374	3067	68	Galba being far advanced in years, and at a great distance from Rome , Nymphidius Sabinus aspires at the empire, and by gifts, treats, &c. gets the prætorian bands, &c. on his side, and takes upon him the supreme command: The senate fearing his power, conferred extraordinary honours upon him, and called him their protector, and went to him to have their decrees confirmed; but the soldiers reject him, and declare Galba anew, kill Nymphidius , and drag his body through the camp: Galba orders several great men to be put to death unheard, which frightened the people very much: Being now at the Milvian bridge, 25 furlongs from the city, a body of marines met him to address him for a confirmation of their legion; but he putting them off, they grew mutinous; he orders his horse to ride in among them, and do military execution, and decimates those that were left alive, and was in all things governed by his three favourites, who behaved very scandalously. He called the ministers of Nero to account, and punishes some of them with death, and pardons others, &c.		V	586
4374	3067	68	The Jews being divided among themselves; one party was for submitting to the Romans immediately, to prevent their total destruction; but the other would hear of no accomodation, and murdered and plundered all who opposed them, whether Jews or others: This occasioned many terrible massacres and devastations. The zealots are headed by Zachariah and Eleazar , who entered Jerusalem and were as strongly opposed by Ananus , the late deposed high-priest; the zealots garrisoned in the temple, from whence they continually sallied, and committed the most horrid butcheries: Ananus besieges them; the zealots send for and let into the city 20,000 Idumeans , who torture and murder vast numbers with unspeakable cruelties, of which 12,000 were persons of distinction, among whom was Ananus himself, and Jesus the son of Gamaliel , &c. In the mean time Placidus the Roman general killed about 15,000 factious Jews , and takes Gadara , &c.		IV	275
4375	3068	69	An express arrives from Belgic Gaul , informing Galba that the legions in Upper Germany demanded another emperor, to be chose by the free election of the senate and people of Rome ; upon which Galba adopts Piso Licinianus for his successor: This drives Otho to attempt the sovereignty, being encouraged thereto by an astrologer. He chooses two soldiers to bribe and debauch the rest, and furnishes them with money for that purpose, and makes them large promises: The 15th of January Otho is saluted emperor by a small party of the guards, which soon increase, and presently he is proclaimed by the whole camp, and Galba and Piso are murdered. The senate, knights, and people of Rome acknowledge Otho , and honour him with the title of Cæsar and Augustus with the usual pomp and formalities.		V	597
4375	3068	69	The armies in Germany declare Vitellius (commander of the legions of Lower Germany) emperor; he exercises the sovereign power, and puts several persons to death at the request of the soldiers. Vitellius is joined by two Gaulish governors and their forces, by an Italian legion and a body of horse at Lyons , the forces of Rhætia and Britain . Vitellius adds himself to gluttony and drunkenness. Cæcina , one of Vitellius's generals, ravages the fields, sacks the cities, and makes dreadful havock of the inhabitants of Helvetia , many thousands are cut off, and many sold for slaves. In Italy a squadron of horse and many cities go over to Vitellius . Otho sends messengers and letters to Vitellius , offers him immense sums, and any place of retirement he should choose, and at last to make him a partner with him in the empire, and to marry his daughter; and Vitellius does the like to Otho . Most of the foreign provinces declare for Otho , and he studies to gain their affections. Otho fits out fleets and armies to oppose Vitellius , and orders the chief of the nobility to follow him into the field, takes his leave of the senate, and leaves Rome . Otho's fleet gains advantages in Narbonne Gaul , but all the country between the Alps and the Po submit to Vitellius . Cæcina attacks Placentia , but after losing a great many men, is forced to retire. At last the two contending parties engage, and Otho's army is routed with great slaughter near Bedriacum : Next day Otho's generals deliver up their camp, upon receiving the news whereof Otho kills himself, though intreated to the contrary by his soldiers, and armies from all the eastern provinces were in full march to his assistance: Otho being dead, all his troops submit to Vitellius , and the senate acknowledge him for their emperor.		V	615
4375	3068	69	Simon heading one part of the Jewish zealots, gains advantages over the other, and invades Idumea with 20,000 men: The Idumeans oppose him vigorously; but Simon

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			bringing their general, has Idumea and the troops delivered up to him, and put all to fire and sword: The other zealots in one of their ambushes takes Simon's wife prisoner; but he going to Jerusalem obliges them by his excessive cruelties to return her: Thus John within, and Simon without, destroy all that comes in their way: The people let Simon in the night into the city, who reigns over them in the most tyrannical manner, and besieges John in the temple.	IV	276
4375	3068	69	The Roxolani enter Mæsia, defeat the two Roman cohorts, and return unmolested; but returning again with nine thousand horse, Marcus Aponius Saturninus falls upon them, and cuts them off almost to man.	IV	276
4375	3068	69	Italy suffers greater calamities than ever; the soldiers being very numerous, and scattered up and down, plunder, ravage, and murder whoever they please without restraint. Vitellius sends an edict to Rome, forbidding them at present to confer either the name of Augustus or Cæsar upon him. All the centurions that had behaved gallantly for Orbo were put to death: Dolabella he ordered to be massacred privately: Being naturally addicted to gluttony and drunkenness, he indulged the same in the soldiers, which occasioned great calamities and disturbances to others, and among themselves. Arriving at Rome, he put off his general's, and put on the senator's dress, and marches in great pomp to the capitol to offer sacrifice to Jupiter, where being met by his mother Sextilia, he embraces and honours her with the name of Augusta; next day he met the senate, and made a speech to them, containing great promises of what he would do for them, but gave himself up entirely to gluttony and profuseness, and remits all business to his favourites, Valens and Cæcina.	V	619
4375	3068	69	The legions in Judea, Egypt, and Syria declare Vespasian emperor: Tiberius Alexander brought the legions at Alexandria to swear to him on the first of July, those in Judea swore to him in person on the third, and Mucianus governor of Syria and his soldiers about the 15th; Sobemus king of Edessa, Antiochus king of Comagena, and Agrippa king of Ituræa acceded, and all the inland provinces extending to Asia and Achaia, and the inland countries bordering upon Pontus, and the two Armenia's, took the oath of allegiance. Vespasian establishes a council for the dispatch of business at Berytus. Troops were every where raised, and gold and silver in great quantities coined at Antioch, and ambassadors sent to Vologeses king of Parthia, and Tiridates king of Armenia; Titus was to carry on the war in Judea, Vespasian to seize the Straits leading to Egypt, and Mucianus to go against Vitellius. The Illyrian and Pannonian legions declare for Vespasian; the fleet at Ravenna revolts, and comes over to Vespasian. The partizans of each side have several engagements with various success, but at last the fatal battle at Cremona determined Vitellius's fate; the city was large, and very rich, and 40,000 soldiers, &c. entered it, killed, ravished, plundered and burnt it for four days successively, till it was all reduced to ashes; this happened 286 years after its foundation. Vitellius for all this gives himself up to voluptuousness; his favourite Valens is taken prisoner, and Gaul, Spain, and Britain, declare for Vespasian: With difficulty Vitellius is prevailed on to leave Rome, and go to the camp at Mevania, but gives himself up to drunkenness, and publicly betrays his ignorance and fear. The Samnites, Pelignians, and Maricans, declare for Vespasian; Valens being taken prisoner, the whole army goes over to Vespasian. Vitellius is offered safety for his person, and a competency to live on, if he would resign the sovereignty; he comes into the senate clad in mourning, and offers to resign; but the soldiers will not permit him, and besiege Sabinus, &c. brother to Vespasian, in the capitol, which was now reduced to ashes; many great men were slain, and Sabinus and Atticus the consul taken prisoners; Vitellius strove all he could to save them, but the fury of the soldiers was so great, that cutting off Sabinus's head, they dragged his trunk through the streets. Soon after Primus, &c. for Vespasian comes to Rome, where several bloody engagements gave Vespasian the city, and Vitellius being taken prisoner, is first insulted, then killed, and his head carried upon a pole through the chief cities, having reigned 8 months and a few days; and Domitian (a son of Vespasian) saluted Cæsar. Lucius, the brother of Vitellius, coming with his troops to Rome, submits, and is put to death; the conquerors filled the streets with carnage and mangled carcases; all the private houses and places of public resort are broke open and plundered.	V	635
4376	3069	70	The senate confirms Vespasian in the sovereignty, makes him consul, and his son Titus his colleague; Domitian is made prætor, and has consular authority, &c.	V	635
4376	3069	70	The Jazygians, a Sarmatic nation, broke into Mæsia, killed Fonteius Agrippa, governor of that province, and laid waste the country far and near. Rabrius Gallus goes against them, cuts great numbers of them to pieces, and forces the rest to repass the Danube, the bank of which river he carefully fortified.	VII	605
4376	3069	70	Vespasian orders his son Titus to go from Cæsarea to besiege Jerusalem, and to utterly destroy it; this he goes about with the greatest expedition: When he came and invested the place, he found three different factions within it, furiously destroying one another; they pretended to make a peace among themselves, and it being the feast of the Passover, Eleazar, who was possessed of the temple, opened the avenues of his court to the great concourse that came to sacrifice, among whom some of John's men went in privately armed, and cut off most of Eleazar's party, and took possession of the place; Titus makes them offers of peace, which they reject a first and second time; by their intestine divisions all the provisions were either burnt or eat, so that a terrible famine and continual butcheries were within, and no possible escape without. The besiegers having taken the city, set fire on the temple the 10th of August, in the 2d year of Vespasian and 21st of Agrippa, being the same fatal day and month 'twas formerly burnt by Nebuchadnezzar; this was followed by a terrible slaughter of

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			the people, and the burning and destruction of the city : In this war 1,854,490 are said to be killed, and 108,000 carried from Jerusalem captive, and all the buildings were levelled with the ground.
4376	3069	70	Anicetus , formerly commander of king Polemon 's navy, raised a party in Pontus , under pretence of favouring Vitellius , seized the city of Trebizond , burnt the fleet which guarded the coasts, makes an alliance with the Barbarians , and commits dreadful ravages on the coasts of Asia ; but Virdius Geminus being sent against him by Vespasian , he is defeated, and Anicetus and all his followers are delivered up by Sedochus king of the Lacians , to whom he flew for protection.	IV	289
4376	3069	70	The Germans and Gauls revolt from the Romans during the civil war, and various success attends both sides, and vast numbers are slain ; but at last they universally declare for Vespasian , and peace is restored. Vespasian arriving at Brundisium , is met by the senate and all the great men of Rome , and by them conducted thither, where he was met by the whole people, and honoured with all expressions of joy and satisfaction, where he revived the ancient discipline of the army, allowed the senate to debate and speak freely their sentiments, rectified the law, and purged the courts of judicature, ordered the city and capitol to be rebuilt, and behaved in all things as a father of his country ought towards the people he loved and governed.	V	636
4376	3069	70	Vologeses sends ambassadors to Vespasian , and offers him 40,000 Parthian horse, but being already settled in the empire, has no occasion to accept them ; so both parties renew their alliances, and Vespasian sends back the ambassadors with thanks, loaded with rich presents. Being at peace, Vologeses sets about building a city, calling it Vologesocerta , but died before it was completed.	V	638
4377	3070	71	Vespasian and his son Titus have a triumph at Rome , for the reduction of Jerusalem , and Titus has a triumphal arch erected, which still remains almost entire ; as soon as the triumph was over, the gate of the temple of Janus was shut, the empire enjoying a perfect peace every where, and the temple of peace was begun to be built, to put the rich spoils in that were brought from Jerusalem .	IV	319
4378	3071	72	Cesennius Pætus , governor of Syria accused Antiochus king of Comagene with an intent to revolt ; Vespasian gives him a commission at large, upon which Pætus both takes his kingdom and himself, and reduced Comagene to a Roman province ; but the king and his two sons lived at Rome at the publick expence, in a manner suitable to their character, and were familiarly entertained by Vespasian .	V	649
4378	3071	72	The Alani , a people beyond the Tanais , and Paulus Mæotis , make a sudden irruption into the territories of the Medes and Armenians ; Tiridates narrowly escaping, and Pacorus king of the Medes was forced to fly, the Barbarians carrying off an immense booty, and a great number of captives, and among them Pacorus 's wife.	V	650
4379	3072	73	Vespasian reduces Greece , which Nero had declared free, and Licia , Rhodes , Byzantium , Samos , Thrace , and Cilicia , to Roman provinces. Helvidius Priscus for exciting the people against Vespasian , is first banished by the emperor, and by an order of the senate executed.	V	650
4381	3074	75	Vespasian consecrates the temple of peace, and raises a Colossus of brass 110 feet high, which had been designed for Nero , but he put the head of his son Titus on it, though some say it was the figure of the sun.	V	551
4384	3077	78	The celebrated Cneius Julius Agrippa succeeds the successful Julius Frontinus in the government of Britain , which in seven successful campaigns he entirely reduced, and parted Caledonia by forts and garrisons upon the Isthmus between the friths of Glata and Bodotria , and made Britain a Roman province, cultivated the people, and introduced arts and sciences, which soon civilized the natives.	V	651
4385	3078	79	Julius Sabinus having stirred up the Gauls , and proclaimed himself Cæsar , after being defeated set his country-house on fire, and gave out that he voluntarily perished there in the flames, but conveyed himself and his vast wealth into a cave, where he lived 9 years, and had two children by his wife Epponia ; but being discovered, he was seized and sent to Rome , loaded with chains, with his wife and two children ; he and she were condemned and executed, but the children were very carefully brought up at the publick expence.	VII	431
4385	3078	79	Alienus Cæcina , formerly Vitellius 's favourite, and Epirus Marcellus , a noted informer in Nero 's time, conspire against Vespasian , but are discovered : Titus causes Cæcina to be murdered at a banquet he had invited him to, and Marcellus is condemned by the senate, but cuts his own throat. Vespasian is taken ill with a pain in his bowels, and goes to Campania to drink some very cold waters, but grows worse, and dies the 24th of June , aged 69 years, 7 months, and 7 days, having reigned 10 years wanting 6 days, and was succeeded by his son Titus , whose character stood in a very bad light with the people ; but when he came to reign alone, he acquired the greatest reputation of any of the Roman emperors.	V	654
4385	3078	79	A most dreadful eruption of mount Vesuvius laid waste Campania to a great distance, consuming many cities and their inhabitants, and is said to turn day into night suddenly at Rome .	V	658
4386	3079	80	Vologeses king of Parthia dies, and is succeeded by Artabanus III. who espoused the cause of the counterfeit Nero .	V	659
4386	3079	80	Titus sends two consulars into Campania with large sums to rebuild the cities and relieve the distresses that the late eruption of Vesuvius had occasioned, and went himself also to comfort and relieve the unhappy sufferers ; while he was thus doing, a terrible fire broke out in Rome , and burnt with great fury for three	VI	16

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			days and three nights, during which time a vast number of private houses, palaces, and publick edifices were reduced to ashes; the library of Augustus with all the books, great part of the capitol, the theatre of Pompey , &c. all which Titus rebuilt and restored at his own expence: The most dreadful plague ever known in Rome followed this conflagration, during all which he behaved in the most tender and compassionate manner to the afflicted. The famous amphitheatre being finished this year that was begun by Vespasian ; Titus dedicated it with magnificent shows for 100 days together, to raise the spirits of the people ready to sink under the calamities they had suffered.	V	620
4387	3080	81	Titus is taken ill of a burning fever, and is carried to Curtile , his paternal estate, and dies on the 13th of September , in the same room where his father died, in the 41st year of his age, having reigned two years, two months, and twenty days: Some say he was poisoned by his brother Domitian , who succeeded him, and who placed him among the gods, and was himself the first that paid divine honours to him: his loss was exceedingly lamented by all the people, to whose which Domitian begins his reign with popular acts, and great dissimulation.	V	662
4388	3081	82	Domitian puts Flavius Sabinus to death, husband of Julia Sabina his niece, and daughter of the late emperor Titus , because the publick crier through mistake had proclaimed him emperor instead of consul.	V	665
4389	3082	83	Domitian forbids castration under severe penalties, and regulates the price of eunuchs already made: This year he likewise punished four vestals for incest, causing three of them to be whipt to death in the Comitium , and Cornelia , who had been once pardoned before, was buried alive.	V	668
4389	3082	83	A colony of Sueves are settled in Frisia by the Romans .	VII	541
4390	3083	84	Agricola engages the Caledonians , or Scots , defeats and routs them, and with the loss only of 340 Romans , kills 10,000 of the enemy, and takes many prisoners, and this intirely reduced Britain .	V	672
4391	3084	85	The Sueves revolt from and defeat the Romans in Pannonia .	VII	542
4391	3084	85	Domitian orders the nativity of all the illustrious persons in Rome to be cast, and all such as the astrologers said were born for empire, he destroyed: He encouraged the informers, who enriched themselves and the emperor with the lives and properties of many thousands of innocent persons. This year multitudes of senators and knights were accused of treason, and sentenced to death by the senate, or ordered to murder themselves by Domitian . All the professors of philosophy, and every useful science were banished the city: and all manner of cruelty and injustice committed.	V	675
4391	3084	85	The cruelty used, and heavy taxes demanded, cause the Nasamonians (a people of Africa) to revolt; they defeat Flaccus , governor of Numidia , stormed his camp, and put great numbers of his men to the sword; but giving themselves up to revelling, Flaccus rallies, and falls upon the enemy drunk and asleep, and cuts them off to a man: Upon this Domitian brags to the senate that he had cut off a whole nation, and is so presumptuously wicked as to begin one of his ordinances thus; Our Lord and our God orders and commands , &c. and would be called the son of Minerva .	V	676
4392	3085	86	The Capitoline sports instituted and exhibited in honour of Jupiter Capitolinus , the emperor presiding in person, attended by the priests of Jupiter and the college of Flaminian priests, the beginning of every fifth year. The Dacians break their alliance and invade Mesia , defeat, rout, and kill, with great slaughter Appian Sabinus the governor, commit great devastations, and seize the castles and forts built by the Romans on their borders. Domitian goes against them himself; Decebalus their chief sends to treat of peace, but Domitian won't hearken to them, but sends Tuscius with the flower of his army against them; they engage, Tuscius is killed, and his army routed intirely; the Dacians took one eagle, a great quantity of arms, all the engines of war, and a vast number of captives: Domitian made the same havock of the senate and people at Rome as the Dacians had done of his soldiers. Domitian sends fresh armies against them; many bloody battles are fought, with various success, but at last Julianus gave the Dacians a compleat overthrow. Decebalus sues again for peace, which Domitian again refuses.	V	678
4392	3085	86	The emperor Domitian making war upon the Marcomans and Quadians , both nations earnestly sue for peace; but instead of granting it to them, he put their ambassadors to death; which so exasperated the Marcomans , that flying to arms, and raising a considerable body of troops, they engage the emperor, and put his army to the rout.	VII	601
4394	3087	88	The secular games are this year celebrated, so called because they were solemnized but once in an age, or 100 years. Domitian murders all of birth or virtue that gave him the least umbrage. L. Antonius , governor of Upper Germany , revolts; but being engaged by Appian Maximus , Antonius is slain, his head cut off and sent to Rome , and his whole army cut to pieces. Domitian executes and banishes great numbers of persons, under pretence of having been privy or assistant in Antonius's rebellion.	V	680
4394	3087	88	A counterfeit Nero appears in Asia , and with a multitude of followers retires to the Parthian king, who seemed to espouse his cause; but Domitian found means to prevail with him to deliver up the impostor to his governor of Syria .	V	686
4396	3089	90	Domitian being defeated by the Marcomans , &c. makes peace with Decebalus king of Dacia , and allows him a yearly pension.	VII	512
4397	3090	91	Ulpian Trajanus and M. Acilius Glabrio were this year's consuls; Glabrio was esteemed a man of prodigious strength, and therefore notwithstanding his dignity the emperor obliged him to fight a huge lion in the Arena , which he did, and killed

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
			killed him; the people applauded this victory with such loud and repeated shouts, that the emperor jealously banished, and ordered him to be murdered in his exile. This year Domitian exhibited extraordinary shews of sea and land fights, &c. but the feast he invited the senators and knights to is most remarkable; at the entrance of the palace the guests were received with great ceremony, and conducted into a large gloomy hall, hung with black and filled with coffins, each of which had the name of a senator or knight upon it; immediately the doors are burst open, and a great number of naked men daubed all over with black, with a torch in one hand and a naked sword in the other, rushed in upon them, and danced round them for some time, and then proclamation was made all were at liberty to retire home.	V 681
43, 8	3091	92	This year wine being very plentiful, and corn very scarce, Domitian orders half the vines to be rooted up, and no more to be planted: The Asians send deputies to beg their being excused obedience to this law; Scopelianus being admitted, pleaded their cause so well that Domitian repealed the law absolutely. This year the kingdom of Chalcis was united to the empire.	V 681
4399	3092	93	Agricola , the famous governor of Britain , dies, greatly lamented by all, suspected of being poisoned by order of Domitian .	V 682
4399	3092	93	The Sarmatians cut a Roman legion with its tribune to pieces.	VII 605
4400	3093	94	Domitian's fury and cruelty ran now so high, that 'twas treason to be noble, capital to be rich, and criminal either to have born or declined honours; the most infamous informers are highly caressed and greatly rewarded. Helvidius , Senecio , and Rusticus are put to death unjustly, and great numbers of lower people butchered and banished, and the philosophers and professors of all virtuous and commendable sciences banished Rome by an order of the senate.	V 685
4401	3094	95	Juvenius Celsus heads a conspiracy against Domitian , is discovered and pardoned. Domitian puts vast numbers of Christians to death, and banished many more, upon account of their religion, both in Rome and in all the provinces: Among the slain were the emperor's cousin and colleague in the consulship, Flavius Clemens , and his wife and niece, both named Flavia Domitilla , among the banished.	V 687
4402	3095	96	Many prodigies are said to happen this year at Rome and in the provinces; the city was alarmed for eight months successively with dreadful claps of thunder and flashes of lightning; the capitol, temple of the Flavian family, and emperor's own chamber, were thunder-struck: The oracle at Præneste presages slaughter and calamities; Domitian dreams that Minerva had forsaken him; the astrologers declare publickly that the 18th of September Domitian would die. Domitian having wrote the names of several great personages upon a paper, his wife Domitia reading it, finds herself at the head of them; upon which she communicates it to the rest; they conspire and kill him, after he had reigned 15 years and 5 days, and was the last of the 12 Cæsars .	V 690
4402	3095	96	As soon as the death of Domitian was known, the senate assembles and proclaims M. Cocceius Nerva emperor, which the soldiers and people confirm: He was a native of Narina in Umbria , a prince of a most sweet and humane temper, &c. under whom the Romans lived as happy as in the former reigns they had been miserable: He pardons all imprisoned for treason, calls home the banished, restores the sequestered estates, punishes informers, abolishes the law of majesty, redresses all grievances, and acts with universal beneficence towards all sorts of people.	VI 3
4403	3096	97	Nerva and L. Nigrius Rufus are consuls: Rufus rising at the receipt of the fasces to pronounce an oration in praise of the emperor, lets fall a book out of his bosom, and stooping to take it up, fell down himself and broke his leg; being then in the 83d year of his age, the agony whereof occasioned his death; the emperor orders his obsequies to be made with the utmost pomp and magnificence; Cornelius Tacitus the famous historian pronounces his funeral oration, and succeeded him in the consulate. L. Calpurnius Cassius is discovered in conspiring against Nerva , by whom he and his wife are only banished to Tarentum : Then the pretorian guards, headed by Ælianus Casperius their commander, under pretence of revenging the death of Domitian , besieges Nerva in the palace; he offers himself to be slain, but they insist upon the conspirators being delivered up; they cut some of them to pieces, and Nerva is forced to deliver up the rest: He adopts Ulpian Trajan for his successor, then commander of a powerful army in Lower Germany , to whom he wrote a letter with his own hand, and presented him with a very large diamond, associated him in the empire, and loaded him with all the honours of power and majesty.	VI 5
4404	3097	98	January 21st Nerva dies, in the Salustian gardens, after having reigned 16 months and 8 days, is ranked among the gods, and succeeded by Trajan , by birth and extraction a Spaniard , lately adopted by Nerva , about 41 years old, well skilled both in martial and cabinet affairs, courteous, affable, humane, and just: The Germans and Barbarians compliment him upon his advancement, and remain quiet as to the Romans ; but the Bructerians are expelled by the Chamavians and Angriuvarians by a decisive battle, in which 60,000 persons were cut off.	VI 9
4405	3098	99	Trajan comes to Rome , and is received with all the demonstrations of joy possible, attended by his wife Pompeia Platina , a lady of extraordinary virtue, wisdom, and goodness: He accepts the title of Optimus , and bestows plentiful largesses upon the soldiers and common people, and discourages informers.	VI 10
4406	3099	100	Trajan being a third time chose consul, binds himself by solemn oath to observe the law; banishes Marius Priscus , proconsul of Africa for extortion, and his accomplices also, the accomplices of Clasius , proconsul of Betia , Clasius having killed himself to avoid being punished.	VI 11

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page.
			(1029)
4406	3099	100	Julia Sabina , granddaughter to Marciana the emperor's sister, marries Adrian , son of Aelius Adrian Afer , cousin to Trajan .	VI	11
4407	3100	101	Trajan refuses to pay the Dacians their annual sum, therefore king Decebalus crossed the Danube , and committed hostilities: Trajan goes into Dacia , and lays it waste far and near, and after much bloodshed on both sides, obliged Decebalus to accept of such terms of peace as he thought fit to give him. At his return to Rome he was honoured with a triumph.	VII	613
4408	3101	102	Trajan and the senate make a law, prohibiting all pleaders taking any fee, present, or reward, of their clients, under severe penalties.	VI	13
4409	3102	103	Trajan builds a noble harbour at Centumcellæ (now Civita Vecchia) and called it by his own name. The governors of Pontus and Bybinia having committed great disorders, he takes the provinces from the senate, and gives them Pamphylia in the room of them, and sends Pliny as his lieutenant to reform the civil affairs of Pontus and Bybinia .	VI	13
4410	3103	104	Sauromates , king of Bosphorus sends a solemn embassy to Trajan , and concludes an alliance with him; and Decebalus king of the Dacians breaks the peace; Trajan goes against him, and overcomes him, and builds a bridge over the Danube .	VII	613
4411	3104	105	A dreadful earthquake in Asia overturns the cities of Elea , Myrine , Pitame , and Cumæ ; and in Greece the cities of Opus and Oritæ . Adrian attending upon Trajan in his Dacian war, performs wonders, for which Trajan presents him with the diamond Nerva had given him at the time of his adoption. Trajan takes Zermizegthusa , the capital of Dacia , and entirely defeats Decebalus , who thereupon put an end to his own life, and Trajan reduces the whole country, and its allies, into a Roman province, governed by a propretor, and plants Roman colonies in it to keep the people in awe. At his return he had a triumph a second time, and exhibited publick shews, &c. for 123 days. Ambassadors from India come to congratulate Trajan upon his extraordinary success, make him presents, and conclude an alliance with him.	VI	16
4411	3104	105	Aulus Cornelius Palma , governor of Syria , intirely reduces Arabia Petraea to the Roman yoke, which till now was governed by kings of its own.	VI	16
4412	3105	106	The Capitoline sports established by Domitian are exhibited, when a lad but 13 years old, named L. Valerius Pudens , won the prize of poetry. Trajan at a vast expence makes a road through the Palus Pontina , called Via Trajana , the remains whereof are still to be seen. A conspiracy against Trajan is discovered, and the senate banish the conspirators.	VI	16
4413	3106	107	Cosroes king of Parthia having driven out Exadares from the kingdom of Armenia , to whom Trajan emperor of Rome had given it, and set his eldest son Parthamasiris upon that throne, Trajan goes to Antioch , where he receives the ambassadors and submissions of many of the neighbouring princes, and then goes unexpectedly into Armenia , recovers the whole country, and takes Parthamasiris prisoner. He then goes into Mesopotamia , and reduces it into a Roman province, and is honoured by the senate with the surnames of Armenicus and Parthicus . Having taken Babylon by storm, and made himself master of all Chaldea and Assyria , he marched to Ctesiphon , the metropolis of the Parthian empire, and took it, and then assembling the chief men of the nation, made Parthaspales , one of the blood royal, king of Parthia , but tributary to Rome .	IV	320
4414	3107	108	During this space of time the famous highway from Beneventum to Brundisium was made by Trajan . The Pantheon at Rome was burnt by lightning, and several cities in Galatia were overturned by an earthquake, and the great square at Rome was dedicated.	VI	20
4420	3113	114		VI	20
4418	3111	112	Adrian is made archon or chief magistrate of Athens .	VI	20
4421	3114	115	A most terrible earthquake, attended with dreadful storms of thunder and lightning, destroys the greatest part of Antioch , where the emperor Trajan with his great army, and a vast number of ambassadors and their retinue were; the buildings are generally thrown down, or swallowed up, and great numbers of people killed and wounded; among the wounded was Trajan himself.	VI	21
4422	3115	116	The senate and people of Rome return the emperor Trajan solemn thanks for his making the port of Ancona . Trajan reduces Arabia Felix to a Roman province. The Jews revolt in Alexandria , and all Egypt , Syria , and the other provinces, committing most horrid ravages and monitrous barbarities; Marcus Turbo is sent against them, and defeats them, but does not quiet them.	VI	23
4422	3115	116	In Cyprus the Jews are all cut off to a man, and Lusius Quietus defeats them in a pitched battle in Mesopotamia , cuts great numbers of them to pieces, and drives the rest out of the country. Most of the conquered nations in the east revolt, and cut the Roman garrisons to pieces, but after much bloodshed are again reduced.	VI	24
4423	3116	117	Trajan besieges Atra , the metropolis of the Hagareni in Arabia , who had revolted, but is so vigorously opposed, that he is forced to raise the siege; and upon his return to Selinus , (afterwards called Trajanopolis) in Cilicia , was taken violently ill with a dropy, palsy, and a flux, so that he died there, after he had reigned 19 years, 6 months, and 15 days: Upon news of his death Adrian caused himself to be proclaimed emperor at Antioch , where he then was. Trajan 's body was burnt at Selinus , and his ashes carried to Rome by his wife Plotina and his niece Matidia , in a golden urn, where they were received with the highest honour, and deposited under the stately column himself had erected, though within the walls, where no one before had been buried.	VI	25
4423	3116	117	Adrian writes to the senate, desires them to confirm to him the title of emperor, promises to rule with justice, &c. abandons Armenia , Mesopotamia , and Assyria ,

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Pg.
			making the Euphrates the bound of the Roman empire : He allowed the Armenians liberty to choose them a king, permitted the Parthians to recal Cosroes , sent him his daughter, whom Trajan had taken prisoner, and all his prisoners without ransom ; and Partamaspates he made king of another place ; he would have abandoned Dacia , but was over-ruled, but broke down the famous bridge Trajan had built over the Danube ; then appointed Catilius Severus governor of Syria , and set forwards towards Rome .	VI	33
4424	3117	118	Adrian comes to Rome , is received with great respect by all degrees of people, refuses the triumph decreed him, remits all debts whatsoever, and burns all bonds, &c. to the amount of upwards of 7,000,000 l. sterl.	VI	34
4425	3118	119	The European Sarmatians break into Illyricum with great fury ; but upon Adrian's arriving at Mæsia , they retire and pass the Danube , and the Roman horse swimming after them, so terrifies them, that they sue for peace, which is granted them.	VII	606
4425	3118	119	Adrian writes to the senate from Illyricum , complaining of Cornelius Palma , Celjus Nigrinus , and Quietus , as if they had formed a conspiracy against him, and tho' they were all consular men, the senate put them to death, without so much as acquainting them they were accused. The emperor coming into Campania , relieves with great generosity the poor in all the cities he passed through.	VI	34
4426	3119	120	Adrian begins a progress, in order to visit all the provinces of the empire, and enquire into the state and condition of all his people ; and first he visits Gaul , then Germany , then Britain , where being informed what troublesome neighbours the Caledonians , or Scots , were, ordered a mighty wall to be built from the river Eden in Cumberland to the Tine in Northumberland , 80 miles in length ; then returns to Gaul , and goes into Spain , and from thence returns to Rome .	VI	35
4429	3122	123	Adrian goes to Athens , and builds a bridge over the Cephissus , that had overflowed and greatly damaged the city of Eleusina , and from Athens he goes into the east.	VI	35
4430	3123	124	Adrian returning from the east, comes through Cilicia , Lycia , Pamphylia , Cappadocia , Bythinia , and Pbrygia , ordering temples, squares, and other publick buildings to be erected at his expence in most of the great cities through which he passed.	VI	36
4431	3124	125	Adrian having visited the islands in the Archipelago , from thence goes to Achaia , and winters at Athens , where he is initiated in the rites of Ceres and Proserpine , called the Eleusinian mysteries.	VI	36
4432	3125	126	Adrian after presiding at the publick games at Athens , sailed to Sicily , and goes to the top of Mount Ætna to view the rising sun, said to exhibit the various colours of the rainbow, and then returns to Rome .	VI	36
4435	3128	129	The cities of Nicomedia , Cæsarea , and Nicæa in Bythinia , were overturned by an earthquake, but rebuilt at the emperor's expence, for which he was called the restorer of Bythinia .	VI	36
4435	3128	129	Adrian leaves Rome and goes into Africa , where upon his arrival, it rained plentifully, after a five years droughth ; here and in all places he comes to he gains the affections of the people by his humanity and good-nature : Upon his return to Rome , Plotina dying, the emperor honours her with the greatest funeral solemnity, bewails her, composes verses in honour of her, and ranks her among the gods.	VI	36
4436	3129	130	Adrian builds a most sumptuous temple at Rome in honour of the city and Venus , called the temple of Rome , and he changed the name of the annual feast kept for the foundation of Rome on the 21st of April from Palilia to Romana : When the temple of Rome was finished, Adrian sends the model of it to the famous architect Appollodorus to examine, who finding some fault but great fault in it, spoke his mind freely, and was first banished and soon after put to death, for the liberty he took, though ordered so to do.	VI	37
4436	3129	130	Adrian goes again through Greece into Asia , where he invited all the neighbouring kings to a conference, several of which come personally, and are treated with great magnificence. In Syria he went to the top of Mount Casius near Antioch to view the rising sun, and to sacrifice to Jupiter : From thence he goes into Palestine , Arabia , and Egypt .	VI	37
4437	3130	131	Salvius Julianus , a very learned civilian, composed the several Roman edicts and laws then in force into one, called the Edictum perpetuum , which was to be a standing rule for the whole empire. Adrian orders Alexandria , the capital of Egypt , to be in part repaired, and in part rebuilt, and the privileges of the inhabitants to be restored, and increased the antient Museum in the palace, with the addition of a new one, endowed with large revenues, &c.	VI	38
4438	3131	132	Adrian in his passage through Lybia Cyrenaica hunts and kills a mighty lion that had destroyed great numbers of the people. Antoninus , a most beautiful youth that was pathic to Adrian , is drowned in the Nile ; Adrian bewails his loss with great grief, gets him placed among the gods by the Greeks , and at Mantineia in Arbadia Adrian erected a magnificent temple to him, instituted solemn sports, and appointed priests to offer victims to him.	VI	38
4441	3134	135	The Jazygians send ambassadors to Rome to renew their alliance with Adrian , who receives them very graciously, and complies with their request.	VII	706
4441	3134	135	Adrian having formerly been made archon of Athens , being now there assumes the habit peculiar to that office, celebrates the great festival of Bacchus , and distributes large quantities of corn and money among the populace, and embellishes the city with several stately buildings, particularly a library of wonderful structure, and consecrated by himself and finished the magnificent temple of Jupiter Olympus , begun 560 years before. One quarter of the city from him was called Adrianopolis : These matters ended, he returned towards the close of the year to Rome .	VI	41

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
441	3134	135	Pharasmanes king of Iberia being complained of by Vologeses king of Armenia to Adrian , he comes to Rome , with his wife, son, and a great retinue, to answer the complaints, making great presents to Adrian ; Adrian returns them with more magnificent ones, and after entertaining him very splendidly, sends him home with great honour.	VI	43
442	3135	136	Adrian having changed the name of Jerusalem into Ælia Capitolina , after the name of his own family, and erected a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus upon the spot where the Jewish temple formerly stood, and also planted a Roman colony in the city, so provoked the Jews , that they broke out into a rebellion under one Barcoquebas , or Cozeb , who pretended to be the Messiah , whom they chose for their king, and over-run all Judea and Syria , committing dreadful outrages, but particularly exerted their utmost cruelties against the Christians . Tinnius Rufus , commander in Judea , being reinforced, falls upon the rebellious Jews , and puts all to the sword, men, women, and children, that fell into his hands; but the Jews growing formidable by the accession of other people to their party, Adrian sends Julius Severus governor of Britain against them. The Jews took Jerusalem , and massacred all the Romans settled there: Severus retakes it, and reduces it to ashes, and ploughs up the ground whereon the temple had stood. In the month of August in this year vast numbers of the Jews retired to Betther , a strong city a small distance from Jerusalem , where Severus besieged them so straitly that vast numbers were starved to death, and the rest taken a small time after. In a general battle Barcoquebas was taken prisoner, and his army utterly routed. In this war the Romans demolished 50 strong castles, 985 towns, and killed 580,000 men, besides an innumerable quantity that perished by famine, fire, and sickness: The Romans lost likewise abundance of their best troops: Those Jews that remained were sold for slaves; and the emperor and senate publish an edict, forbidding them for ever upon pain of death to set foot in Jerusalem , or any place from whence it might be seen; even those Jews that embraced Christianity were also prohibited, which quite delivered the church from the servitude of the law, for till that time the bishops of Jerusalem had often been chose from among the circumcised Christians , who joined the observance of the law to that of the gospel.	VI	41
442	3135	136	Adrian now in the 90th year of his age, and in a very infirm state of health, names L. Aurelius Annius Ceionius Commodus Verus to be his successor, upon which largesses were given to the soldiers and people, and publick shows exhibited. Verus is made prætor, and sent governor into Pannonia , which he discharged with great applause.	VI	43
442	3135	136	Adrian retires to Tibur (now called Tivoli) and builds a magnificent Villa , the ruins whereof are still to be seen. Here he falls into a flux, and lets loose his natural cruelty, which till now he had restrained, and ordered several illustrious persons to be arraigned and executed, and others to be privately murdered: Among the former was his brother-in-law Servianus , aged 19 years, and his great nephew Tusculus , aged 18 years.	VI	44
442	3135	136	Julius Severus after his reduction of the rebellious Jews was made governor of Bythynia , which office he discharged so well, that his name was honoured by the people for 100 years after his death.	VI	44
443	3136	137	Adrian orders Jerusalem to be again rebuilt by the name of Ælia Capitolina , and peoples it partly by a Roman colony he sent thither, and partly by such of the neighbouring people as were not Jews .	VI	41
443	3136	137	Verus returns from Pannonia to Rome , and being greatly indisposed, takes a medicine, which proving too strong for him, kills him: He was buried with great pomp, and placed among the gods. This done, Adrian adopts Titus Antoninus . The empress Sabina dies, and Adrian places her among the gods. Adrian's illness increases with such acute pains, that he begs to be stabbed, poisoned, or any way dispatched; but can neither get done it by others, nor means to do it himself: He orders several persons to be put to death, whom Antoninus saves. Removing to Baie in Campania , he died, 10th of July 138, after he had reigned 20 years and 11 months wanting one day, being 62 years, 5 months, and 17 days old: His body was burnt at Puteoli , and his ashes carried to Rome , and deposited in the magnificent Mausoleum he had built for himself near the Tiber , and ranked among the gods, and divine honours decreed him.	VI	46
444	3137	138	The church at Jerusalem being now composed only of converted Gentiles , or native Christians , St. Mark was appointed bishop there, in which office he continued 18 years.	VI	41
444	3137	138	The Dacians revolt, but are immediately reduced to their duty by the Romans .	VII	613
444	3137	138	Lollius Urbicus , the Roman governor of Britain , having driven back the Barbarians that had broke into the Roman territories, built a new wall from Brampton in Cumberland to the river Esk .	VII	432
444	3137	138	Antoninus succeeds Adrian in the empire, whom the senate honour with various names of distinction, and his wife Fauslina with that of Augusta . He enters and continues his reign with paying great respect to the senatorial and equestrian orders, lessens the tributes, promotes men of merit, favours men of learning, and builds many magnificent structures, &c.	VI	56
445	3138	139	Antoninus marries his daughter Annia Fauslina to Marcus Aurelius , whom he created Cæsar , and though but quæstor, by request of the senate, named him for the next year's consul with himself.	VI	57
446	3139	140	Antoninus finishes the famous aqueduct begun three years before by Adrian in New Athens in the island of Delos .	VI	57
447	3140	141	Fauslina the empress dies; and though she had lived but a lewd life, Antoninus honours her with divine worship, priests, temples, gold and silver statues, publick games, &c.	VI	57

Antoninus

			(1032)		Vol. Pag.
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
4448	3141	142	Antoninus institutes solemn sports at Putoli in honour of Adrian , called Pia and Pialia , which were to be celebrated the 21 year in each Olympiad .	VI	57
4451	3244	145	Antoninus consecrates the temple he had built to the honour of Adrian , and upon this occasion distributes large sums of money among the populace.	VI	57
4452	3145	146	Disturbances being raised in German ; and Dacia , are composed by the care of the governors of those parts; and the Alani attempting to invade the Roman dominions, are drove back with great loss.	VI	58
4453	3146	147	This being the 900th year of Rome , Antoninus celebrates the secular games, with great pomp and magnificence.	VI	58
4454	3147	148	The Moors take up arms against the Romans , but are driven quite out of their own country, and forced to shelter themselves in the most distant parts of Lybia , beyond Mount Atlas .	VI	58
4458	3151	152	Justin Martyr published his first Apology in behalf of the Christians , and presented it to the emperor, his adopted sons, and the senate; which had so good an effect, that the emperor Antoninus wrote to the governor of Asia in favour of them throughout that whole province.	VI	58
4459	3152	153	The Tiber overflowing its banks, laid the lower parts of Rome under water; a great fire destroyed a large part of the city, and a famine starved a great number of its inhabitants: The same year the cities of Narbonne in Gaul , Antioch in Syria , and the great square at Carthage were in great part consumed by accidental fire, but soon restored to their former splendor by the care and at the expence of Antoninus .	VI	59
4459	3152	153	L. Verus , one of Antoninus's adopted sons, being quaestor, exhibited publick shews on that occasion, presiding at the same, sitting between the emperor and M. Aurelius .	VI	59
4462	3155	156	The cities of Cos and Rhodes , with several others in Lycia and Caria , were overturned by a violent earthquake; but by the munificence of Antoninus soon restored to their former splendor.	VI	59
4467	3160	161	M. Aurelius Caesar the 3d time, and L. Verus the 2d, are this year's consuls at Rome , during whose consulates the emperor is taken ill of a violent fever at Lorium , one of his country seats, and dies 7th of March , aged 73 years, 5 months, and 16 days, having reigned 22 years, 7 months, and 26 days, having first confirmed the adoption of M. Aurelius , and ordered the golden image of fortune to be removed out of his own chamber into that of Aurelius's , in the presence of the two captains of the praetorian guards: He left his paternal estate to his daughter, and legacies to all his friends and domesticks: He died universally lamented, and was honoured with the utmost funeral pomp, and buried with Adrian in his magnificent Mausoleum ; both Aurelius and Verus pronounced a funeral oration for him; the senate deified him, built him a temple, and appointed him priests, sacrifices, and annual sports.	VI	59
4467	3160	161	Upon the death of Antoninus , M. Aurelius takes Lucius Verus partner with him in the sovereignty; so that now Rome was governed by two emperors: Lucius acts subordinately to Aurelius , and both with great unanimity and gentleness.	VI	63
4468	3161	162	A dreadful inundation of the Tiber overthrows many private and some publick buildings, carries away a great number of cattle and people, and lays the country for a great distance under water; this was followed by earthquakes, conflagrations in several provinces, and a general infection in the air, and a famine in Rome , which the two emperors took great care to supply with corn, &c. from distant places, at their own expence, &c.	VI	63
4468	3161	162	Commotions and revolts being in Britain , the emperor Aurelius sends Calpurnius Agricola thither, who soon quieted and brought them to subjection.	VII	432
4468	3161	162	The Alani breaking into Media , at that time subject to the Parthians , committed great devastations; but being bribed by Vologeses II. with large sums of money to return home, Vologeses fell unexpectedly upon Armenia , and drove out Sobemus , the king the Romans had set up, and cut the Roman legions all off to a man, under the command of Soverinus , a Gaul , governor of Cappadocia , who came to the assistance of Sobemus , and then invaded Syria , and defeated with great slaughter Attilius Cornelianus , governor of that province, and advanced to Antioch , putting all the Romans and their favourers to the sword, upon account that Antoninus had not returned the golden throne formerly taken from the Parthians , and promised to be restored by Adrian : Upon this the emperor Verus comes into Syria , drives out the Parthians , and sends Statius Priscus into Armenia , and Cassius and Martius Verus into Parthia . Priscus drove the Parthians out of Armenia in one campaign, though with great loss of his own men. Cassius in several encounters with Vologeses , though he had an army of 400,000 men, in four years time reduced all the provinces that had submitted to Trajan , having in the last decisive battle at Europa in Syria , on the Euphrates , killed him 370,000 men, with the loss only of two Romans ; he took Seleucia , and burnt and plundered Babylon and Ctesiphon , with the stately palaces of the Parthian monarchs, and struck terror into the most distant provinces. Having thus put an end to the war, in his return he lost above half of his men by sickness and famine, the emperor Verus remaining all the while at Antioch , or Daphne , wallowing in pleasures and debaucheries, and in his return to Italy carried the plague with him, that destroyed a vast number of his own men, and many more of the Italians , &c.	IV	321
4469	3162	163	Sobemus king of Armenia is restored to his kingdom by the wife and prudent management of Martius Verus the Roman general, under the protection of the Romans , to whom he paid tribute.	VI	65
4470	3163	164	The Roman emperor Aurelius sends his daughter Lucilla into Syria , to be married to his colleague in the empire, Lucius Verus , then at Antioch , attended by many noble personages.	VI	65

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4471	3164	165	Cassius the Roman general having universally subdued Vologeses , comes to Selucia , where the city immediately submits, and opens its gates, but Cassius orders the inhabitants to the number of 400,000 to be put to the sword, and the city to be utterly demolished.	VI	65
4471	3164	165	The Marcomans and Romans having been at war many years, now terminate all differences, and conclude a peace.	VII	601
4472	3165	166	The two emperors, M. Aurelius and Lucius Verus , triumph at Rome upon account of the great conquests obtained over Vologeses , &c. and by the senate are surnamed Parthicus . L. Verus begs that the title of Cæsar might be conferred on the two sons of Aurelius , viz. Commodus and Annius Verus , which was accordingly done the 12th of October .	VI	65
4473	3166	167	Many German nations having revolted from the Romans , both the emperors go with great armies against them, upon whose approach the Germans are so terrified, that they repassed the Danube , and put the ringleaders of the revolt to death, and beg for peace.	VI	66
4475	3168	169	The Germans having again renewed the war, and committed great ravages, laid waste provinces, and defeated Vindex the Roman general, and cut both him and most of his troops to pieces, both emperors leave Rome , and repair in the depth of winter to Aquileia , but are forced to retire upon account of the plagues raging there vehemently; in their return L. Verus was taken with an apoplectic fit, and died; he is carried to Rome , and interred with great funeral pomp in the Mausoleum of Adrian .	VI	67
4476	3169	170	The Romans and Germans engage with incredible fury, but at last the Romans are put to flight with the loss of 20,000 men; upon which the Marcomans enter Italy , and make dreadful devastations. The plague having much weakened the Romans , they are forced to admit the slaves, gladiators, and banditti into the army; and to raise money Aurelius sells the furniture of his palace, melts his gold and silver images, &c. The emperor marries his daughter Lucilla , widow of Verus , to Claudius Pompeianus , a knight of great fame for his wisdom, and integrity. This year the emperor's son Annius Verus Cæsar dies at Palestrina , in the 7th year of his age.	VI	69
4476	3169	170	M. Aurelius drives the Vandals (who were a part of the Goths originally, but thus called from the word Vandelen , a wanderer, they roving from place to place in great numbers to find a better country than their own.) out of Pannonia , where they had settled, pursues them to the Danube , and cuts many of them to pieces as they attempted to cross that river.	VII	528
4476	3169	170	The emperor again going against the Germans (over whom he obtained several victories) leaves his son Commodus under the care of Pitbolus , his chief chamberlain at Rome , ordering him to employ no other physician (if he should want one) than Galen , who now resided there.	VI	69
4476	3169	170	The Egyptians revolt, and kill many Romans and their friends, but by the address and management of Cassius are reduced. The Moors invade Spain , and commit horrid devastations, but are at last subdued by the several lieutenants of the provinces.	VI	70
4477	3170	171	The emperor Aurelius having gained several victories over the Germans , is surnamed Germanicus , and so is his son Commodus .	VI	70
4480	3173	174	Aurelius and his army being blocked up among impassable mountains by the Germans , are ready to perish for thirst, and are miraculously relieved by a violent storm of thunder, lightning and rain, obtained by the prayers of the Christian soldiers in the Melitine legion; whereby instead of being conquered he became conqueror; as a reward for which the emperor soon after enacted a law, that those who accused a Christian upon account of religion should be severely punished.	VI	72
4481	3174	175	The emperor leaves 20,000 men in the country of the Marcomans and Quadi , which so harasses them, that they resolve to quit their native country and settle some where else; but being prevented by the emperor, and reduced by famine, the Quadi send ambassadors to sue for peace, and with them 13,000 prisoners they had taken, which was granted them; but they soon broke it, and deposed their king Furtius for opposing them, and set up one Ariogestes in his room; which Aurelius so resented, that though they offered to set 50,000 prisoners they had taken at liberty, if he would conclude a peace and confirm Ariogestes , both which he refused, and set a price upon the head of Ariogestes ; they being joined by several other nations, a general battle is fought, wherein the Germans are entirely overthrown, and Ariogestes taken prisoner, upon which they offer to accept of peace upon such terms as the emperor thought fit to grant them, which put an end to this destructive war.	VI	73
4481	3174	175	Cassius the famous Roman general that had reduced the Parthians , &c. revolts, and sets up for emperor in the east, and is joined by a great number of soldiers and neighbouring princes: M. Aurelius sets out to go against him, but receives word that he was killed and soon after has his head brought to him, and so for this time ended the war in the east.	VI	77
4481	3174	175	Aurelius goes into the east, and takes his wife Fausina and his son Commodus with him, and made his son-in-law Pompeianus consul: Fausina dies at Halala , a village at the foot of Mount Taurus , said to be a very vicious woman, yet he honoured her by placing her among the gods, &c. and built a city, and put a colony in the place where she died, calling it Fausinopolis , and erected a temple in it to her honour.	VI	79
4482	3175	176	Aurelius arriving in the east, pardons all that had joined Cassius except the inhabitants of Antioch , who had been more than ordinarily zealous for Cassius ; he deprived them of their privileges, suppressed their publick assemblies, and took their shews from them, but soon after forgave them, and restored to them all he had

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			taken from them ; and then going into Egypt , he not only forgave, but added several privileges to Alexandria ; from hence he went to Smyrna , and then to Athens , where his beneficence was greatly displayed by establishing publick professors, with large sallaries, in all sciences, and then returned to Italy , and on the 23d of December he and his son Commodus entered Rome in triumph.	VI	79
4483	3176	177	Aurelius Commodus Cæsar (the emperor's son) and Quintillus being consuls, the emperor forgave all debts due to himself and the treasury, and gave a large sum to the Smyrnians to rebuild their city, which had lately been destroyed by an earthquake.	VI	79
4484	3177	178	Aurelius marries his son Commodus to Crispina , the daughter of Bruttius Præseus , and then marches with his son Commodus against the Marcomanni the 5th of August .	VI	80
4485	3178	179	The Romans under the command of Paternus engage several revolted nations of the Germans , and intirely defeat them.	VI	80
4486	3179	180	The emperor M. Aurelius dies at Sirmium , now Sirmich , in Sclavonia , of the plague, that had been in Italy for several years past, the 17th of March , aged 58 years, 10 months, and 22 days, having reigned nineteen years and ten days, universally lamented, and his ashes were deposited in Adrian's Mausoleum ; he was immediately ranked among the gods, a temple erected, and priests appointed, and whoever had not some statue or image of Aurelius was esteemed a sacrilegious person.	VI	80
4486	3179	180	Commodus succeeds his father in the Roman empire, being the first emperor born in his father's reign, and the second that succeeded his father in the empire ; he is commonly called L. Ælius Aurelius Commodus , and sometimes Commodus Antoninus , and though educated with great care by his father, yet proved a molt lewd, cruel, and wicked tyrant ; he grants the Quadi and Marcomanni peace, and of other nations he purchased peace, &c. to return to Rome , where he is met by the senate with the highest marks of honour ; he was, after visiting the capitol and other temples, the 22d of October conducted to the palace.	VI	87
4490	3183	184	Ulpius Marcellus , governor in Britain , drives the Caledonians , or Scots , out of the Roman province in Britain , were they had committed horrid ravages, and cut off a Roman army, and so settles all things quiet again.	VII	438
4490	3183	184	Commodus discards all his father's friends and counsellors, and employs only his debauched companions, or their friends, whereby he gains the hatred of all his subjects by means of the cruelties and hardships put upon them by his debauched officers : His sister Lucilla , with several great men, conspire to kill him ; but not succeeding, they are put to death. The empress Crispina , for imitating her husband's debaucheries, is first banished, and afterwards murdered in the island Caprea . Four consuls of great note are fallly accused and put to death this year, and the ruling consuls banished.	VI	89
4492	3185	186	While Commodus was assisting at the Capitoline sports, a person dressed like a cynic philosopher told the emperor, that Perennis (his great favourite and prime minister) and his children were plotting his death : Perennis seized him as a madman, but burnt him alive : Soon after the matter was plainly discovered, and Perennis , his wife, sister, and two sons were put to death ; but the emperor being in great fear changed the captain of his guards almost daily.	VI	89
4493	3186	187	Maternus , a common soldier among the Romans , having deserted, is joined by many more and the banditti : at last, being very numerous, he over-run and plundered a great part of Gaul and Spain : Pescennius Niger with a proper force is sent against him, and brought him into great straits ; upon which Maternus divides his army into many small parties, and sends them privately into different parts of Italy with a view to kill the emperor at the annual feast of the mother of the gods, and to seize the empire : They all arrive at Rome undiscovered, and mix with the emperor's guards ; but being betrayed by some of their own party, Maternus was seized and executed, which put an end to the whole affair. A dreadful plague broke out that lasted three years, and which, in Rome only, frequently carried off 2000 in a day.	VI	90
4494	3187	188	Commodus gave out that he was going to Africa , and therefore extorted large sums to defray his expences, and suffered the people to offer up solemn vows for his safe return, but staid in Rome or its neighbourhood, squandering all the money away in debauchery.	VI	90
4494	3187	188	Great part of the capitol, a famous library, and several contiguous buildings in Rome were destroyed this year by lightning ; some say it destroyed whole quarters of the city, and therein several libraries. At the same time a dreadful famine was in Rome , occasioned by Cleander the emperor's favourite's buying up all the corn, &c. to ingratiate himself with the soldiers and people by distributing it among them gratis, and so get to be chose emperor ; but being universally hated for his cruelty and tyranny, the people rose against him, and could not be appeased till the emperor cut off his head, and sent it to them, which they treated with all the insults possible, and murdered his wife, children, and friends, with the utmost fury.	VI	91
4495	3188	189	Pertinax is recalled from being governor of Britain , at his own request, and charged with the care of providing the city with corn, &c. instead of Dionisius Papirius , who was put to death, and all his accomplices, for concurring in the monopolizing thereof to the publick detriment.	VI	91
4496	3189	190	Commodus being now a sixth time in the consulate, and being jealous of every body upon account of the several plots that had been discovered against him, he abandoned himself to bloodshed and cruelty without controul, putting to death Petronius Mamertinus , his brother-in-law Antoninus , his son Annia Faustina , (cousin german to M. Aurelius) Sulpicius Crassus , proconsul of Asia , and

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			(1035)
4497	3190	191	fix consulars, besides many more of lesser rank, in one day, and all who were related to Avidius Crassus to be burnt alive.	VI	91
4498	3191	192	The magnificent temple of peace built at Rome by Vespasian , wherein he put all the riches he brought from the temple of Jerusalem , is burnt by lightning; it was used as a common repository for the rich to lodge their jewels, &c. in, and for the merchants to house their spices and rich drugs brought from Egypt , Africa , &c. the fire spreading, consumed many other stately and common buildings, with the temple of Vesta , and good part of the palace.	VI	92
4498	3191	192	The Romans are defeated by the Saraceni , for the first time mentioned in history.	VI	92
		192	Severus , who commanded in Illyricum , and Nonius Marcus , another general, aspiring at the sovereignty, Commodus appointed Clodius Albinus governor of Britain , and in a letter wrote to him with his own hand, allowed him to take the name of Cæsar , and the ornaments peculiar to that dignity, in case any disturbance arose, but he refused them. Commodus gives himself up to all manner of folly, acting among the players, changing the names of the months, all which the senate indulge him in, and comply with; but having communicated to his beloved Marcia and the two captains of his guards, that he would have the two consuls elect for the ensuing year murdered, and that he would be consul himself, and would march the next morning from the school of the gladiators, in their dress, attended only by that set of men, and not from the palace, like a magistrate, &c. Marcia gave him poison, but that not working effectually quick enough, his favourite Narcissus strangled him the last night of the year, being the 31st of December 192, aged 31 years and 4 months, having reigned 12 years, 9 months, and 14 days: In a palace that stood on Mount Cælius 'twas given out, that he died of an apoplexy; the senate immediately assembled, declared him a publick enemy, loaded him with curses, ordered his statues to be thrown down, his name to be razed out of all publick inscriptions, and demanded his body that it might be dragged through the streets and thrown into the Tiber .	VI	94
4499	3192	193	Pertinax is prevailed with to accept the empire, but the prætorian guards murmur, and on the 28th of March following 300 of them went to the palace armed, and murdered him, after he had reigned only 87 days; Septimius Severus succeeded him in the empire, and took the name also of Pertinax , and punished with great severity all those who were concerned in the murder of the late Pertinax , and disbanded the prætorian guards, gave the deceased prince great funeral honours, ranked him among the gods, and appointed his son to be his chief priest; the day of his accession was annually celebrated with the Circensian games, and his birth-day with other sports for many years after.	VI	99
4499	3192	193	The soldiers cutting off the head of Pertinax , set it up, and proclaimed the empire to the best bidder. Flavius Sulpicianus , father-in-law to Pertinax , and Didius Julianus bid against one another; at last Julianus bid 6250 drachma's a man, to be immediately paid down, and was proclaimed by the whole camp, and at their request appointed Flavius Genialis and Tullius Crispinus commanders of the prætorian guards, and takes himself the title of Commodus ; after the usual ceremonies the prætorian guards accompanied him in battle array to the senate; the people made no opposition, but gave no sign of joy or approbation; the senate acknowledge him, and next morning he receives them very graciously, when he went to the capitol, the people cursed him, and openly threw stones at him: While this was doing at Rome , Pescennius Niger , governor of Syria , revolted, and is declared emperor in the east, Severus was declared emperor in Illyricum , and sends the title of Cæsar to Albinus governor in Britain , and promised to adopt him; Albinus takes the title, clothed with all the badges of his new authority, at the head of his army; the senate declare Severus an enemy to his country, and all his soldiers likewise, if they did not forsake him by a certain time. Julianus prepares to receive Severus , fortifies the palace, ordered Marcia and Lætus (authors of the death of Commodus) to be murdered; and hired abundance of assassins to murder Severus , caused an incredible number of children to be butchered to mingle their blood with magick rites. Severus comes to Ravenna , takes the city and the fleet riding there. Severus is declared partner with Julianus in the empire by the senate; Severus rejects the offer, and cuts Crispinus , captain of the prætorian guards, who brought it, to pieces. Julianus writes to Pompeianus , son-in-law to M. Aurelius , to take him in a partner in the empire, but he refuses. The troops Julianus sent to guard the passes of the Apennine mountains go over to Severus , and the guards also revolt from him who set him up; upon which he retires into the palace, and the senate meet, depose him, and sentence him to death, declaring Severus emperor, and bestow divine honours upon Pertinax . Julianus was beheaded, when he had reigned two months and six days. 100 persons of distinction go to meet and congratulate Severus in the name of the senate, &c. Severus severely punished all who had any hand in the death of Pertinax , and ordered the soldiers of the prætorian guards to meet him unarmed, when he degraded and banished them 100 miles from Rome . Severus entered Rome attended with all his troops under arms, and the prætorian standards reversed. At the gate he dismounted, and put on the senatorial robe, and marched on foot, attended by the senators in their robes, with crowns of laurel on their heads, he wearing the same, being clothed in white, the streets strowed with flowers, and the windows adorned with tapestry; after visiting the capitol, and the usual temples, he retired to the palace; but the soldiers quartering in the temples, porticoes, &c. spread all over the city, and commit great disorders; when Severus went next day to the senate, the soldiers with a dreadful cry demand of the senate the like sum that was paid to the troops of Augustus ; the emperor could not pacify them without promising them 250 drachma's a man in part of 2500. Severus promises the senate to govern with equity, gentleness, &c. the senate confers all the titles belonging to the imperial dignity on him, and invests him with the tribunitial and proconsular power, and make him high pontiff, &c. He begs the senate to confirm the title of Cæsar to Clodius Albinus , gave large sums among the soldiery, and enrolled the late emperor Pertinax among the gods, with extraordinary pomp, &c. put to death, &c. all the friends and adherents of the late deposed and murdered Julianus , and chose four times as many guards as those he had deposed. Severus married his two daughters to Probus and Acilius , and gave them both consular dignity. Having settled all things in Rome , he goes against Niger in the east; Niger having made himself master of all Greece , Macedon , and Thrace , offers to take Severus a partner with him in the empire.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pg.
4500	3193	194	Emilianus , general of Niger's troops, is engaged by the generals of Severus , defeated, and afterwards taken in Cyzicus and killed. Niger and Candidus , one of the generals of Severus , engage with great fury, but at last Niger is forced to fly beyond the Straits of Mount Taurus . Severus offers Niger his life and safety if he would lay down his arms; but being diverted by Aurélianus , whose daughters were betrothed to his sons, retired to Antioch . Laodicea and Tyre declaring for Severus , Niger sends a body of Moor s, who pillaged these cities, put the inhabitants to the sword, and set fire to the houses. Severus and Niger engage again, on the very spot where Alexander the Great beat Darius , near the city of Iffus , called Pyle Ciliciæ , where Niger is entirely routed with the loss of 20,000 men: Niger retires to Antioch , and from thence was flying to Parthia , but was overtaken and beheaded; Severus caused his head to be first shewn to the Byzantines , and then sent to Rome . Severus punishes with extremest rigour all those who had sided with Niger , so that a prodigious number of all ranks were put to death, and many banished, and their estates confiscated.	VI 103
4501	3194	195	Severus , at the entreaty of his eldest son, restores the city of Antioch to all the privileges he had taken from it upon account of espousing the cause of Niger , and obliged all the cities that had furnished Niger with money, to give him four times as much as they had given Niger .	VI 110
4502	3195	196	Severus takes Byzantium , after a siege of three years, the Byzantines being forced to surrender after having in part devoured one another: The magistrates and soldiers were all put to death; the city, the most wealthy, large, strong and magnificent, reduced to ashes; the inhabitants stripped of all their effects, and sold for slaves, and the walls razed.	VI 110
4502	3195	196	Severus writes to Albinus governor of Britain a very complementary letter, professing great friendship, &c. but orders the messengers to stab or poison him; but he discovering the plot, declares himself emperor, and comes into Gaul , where Albinus is joined by many great men, both Gauls and Spaniards . Severus hastens into Gaul , and at Viminaciam declares Bassianus his eldest son Cæsar , and calls him M. Aurelius Antoninus . Albinus defeats the troops of Severus : The senate declares Albinus a public enemy. One Numerianus , who kept a grammar school in Rome , goes into Gaul , pretends to be a senator endowed with power to raise troops for Severus , does so, and gains some advantages over Albinus : Severus sends him a commission at large; he forms an army, and defeats Albinus , and takes a great sum of money, which he delivers to Severus , who offers him great honours, which he refuses, and only accepts a small pension, and lives retired on it the remaining part of his life.	VI 111
4503	3196	197	Severus going to Lions , where Albinus was, Albinus defeats one of his parties; then they both engage with their whole strength, amounting to 150,000 men; they both fought with incredible fury, but at last Albinus's men were routed with great slaughter, and were followed into Lions by the conqueror, who plundered and reduced it to ashes, and Albinus killed himself; Severus triumphed over the dead carcass, &c. sent his head to Rome , where it was set up on the Forum at the end of a long pole: At first Severus pardoned his wife and children, but soon after massacred them and all his family, friends, and relations of both sexes, and most of the great men of Gaul and Spain underwent the same fate, so that Severus amassed immense riches by their estates which he confiscated: He soon conquered all the cities that had held out, and divided Britain into four provinces. Upon his return to Rome he massacred 42 senators of the highest rank, and a vast number of the common people, pretending they were friends to Albinus .	VI 112
4504	3197	198	Vologeses III. king of Parthia , having sided with Niger against Severus , as soon as Severus had gratified his revenge at Rome he goes against Parthia , and besieges Vologeses in Ctesiphon , his metropolis, where, after a gallant resistance, the city was at last taken by assault; the king's treasures, wives and children, were taken by the emperor, but Vologeses escaped; the city was plundered, the men all put to the sword, but the women and children to the number of 100,000 sold for slaves. Severus sends an account to the senate of his success; but as soon as Severus was gone, Vologeses returns with a great army, and recovered all that had been taken from him but Mesopotamia .	VI 113
4504	3197	198	The Caledonians make dreadful havoc in the Roman territories in Britain , so that Lupus the governor was obliged to purchase peace of them for a large sum of money.	IV 321
4504	3197	198	Caracalla , the emperor Severus's eldest son, is declared partner with him in the empire; and Geta , his second son, is intitled Cæsar .	VI 114 VI 114

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1037)	Vol.	Pag.
4505	3198	199	Severus the Roman emperor in his return from Parthia attacks the city Atra , because Barfemus the king thereof had assisted Niger , but is forced to quit the enterprize, after losing a great many men, and most of his warlike engines: After recruiting and refreshing his army he returns to the siege of Atra again, but is again forced to raise the siege after 18 days, losing an incredible number of men, and most of his engines.	VI	115
4506	3199	200	All such persons as gave Severus any umbrage for their birth or wealth he put to death, and confiscated their estates, under various pretences.	VI	115
4507	3200	201	Severus gives the manly robe to his eldest son, then 14 years old, and names him consul for the year ensuing.	VI	115
4508	3201	202	Severus and his son enter upon the consulship in Syria ; he goes into Arabia , and thence into Palestine , and remits the taxes he had imposed for the people's adhering to Niger , and publishes an edict forbidding under the severest penalties any of the people's embracing Judaism , or Christianity , which occasioned the fifth general persecution. At his arrival at Alexandria he granted the city a publick council or senate.	VI	115
4509	3202	203	Septimius Geta , brother of Severus , and Fulvius Plautianus his great favourite, were consuls this year. Plautianus exercised more authority, had more suitors, greater wealth, and lived with more magnificence than the emperor himself; this power he abused shamefully, putting to death and banishing many illustrious persons, without the knowledge of Septimius ; but this being secreted from Severus , he married his son Caracalla to Plautianus's daughter Fulvia Plautilla , and gave the manly robe to his second son Geta , now entered his 14th year.	VI	116
4510	3203	204	Severus thinking the number of Plautianus's statues too great, ordered some of them to be taken down; this occasioned a report that the minister was fallen into disgrace, and the example was followed by the governors of several provinces, who paid dear for their over-hasty zeal, some being deprived of their governments, and others condemned to banishment, Severus declaring no one should affront him without punishment; but being informed he designed to murder both himself and his son Caracalla , and make himself emperor, Caracalla seized his sword, and ordered him to be murdered in the palace, and his body to be cast into the street, and all his friends and creatures were put to death; his daughter Plautilla and his brother Plautius were banished to the island of Liparis , where they were afterwards murdered by order of Caracalla ; after whose succession to the empire this year the secular games were celebrated with extraordinary pomp at Rome .	VI	117
4511	3204	205	The empire of Rome enjoying universal peace, the emperor's two sons Caracalla and Geta were consuls this year, during which Severus continued at or near Rome , administering justice with great impartiality, and reformed many abuses, enacted excellent laws, and repaired the publick edifices, and built many new ones in Rome , Antioch , Alexandria , and Byzantium , and most other great cities of the empire.	VI	117
4512	3205	206	This year is remarkable for the inhuman massacre of a great number of the Roman senators, by the emperor's orders, and some of the greatest and wealthiest of them without any trial.	VI	117
4513	3206	207	The northern Britons revolt, and invade the Roman territories, committing dreadful ravages, driving the Roman legions before them where ever they came; upon which the governor Virius Lupus sends to the emperor, who prepares to go thither in person.	VI	118
4514	3207	208	The emperor's two sons, Caracalla and Geta , are again consuls; Severus invests the younger with the tribunitial power, and conferred the title of Augustus upon him, so that there were now what had never been before, three Augustus's , and then takes both his sons with him into Britain , where after having drove the Caledonians into their own districts, he ordered a new wall to be built from sea to sea.	VII	433
4516	3209	210	Caracalla attempts to murder his father publicly at the head of his army, while he was taking the submissions of the Britons and granting them peace, but is prevented.	VI	119
4517	3210	211	Severus growing old and infirm, the Mæatae and Caledonians revolt, upon which he sends Caracalla with the whole army against them, who puts to the sword all he meets with, and then strives to debauch both officers and soldiers with a design to depose his father, who soon after died naturally at York , on the 4th of February , aged 65 years, 9 months, and 25 days, having reigned 17 years, 8 months, and 3 days; his body was burnt at York , and his ashes carried in a golden urn to Rome , and deposited in Adrian's Mausoleum ; soon after he was ranked among the gods with the usual ceremonies.	VI	120
4517	3210	211	Caracalla and Geta , by the will of Severus , succeeded him jointly in the empire; but Caracalla would fain have set his brother aside; he went against the Caledonians and Mæatians , and concluded a treaty with them, withdrew his men from the forts erected in their country, and restored the lands his father had taken from them, discharged Papinian the captain of the guards, causes Caster , his father's chamberlain and chief favourite, to be put to death, and sent assassins into Italy to murder his wife Plautilla , and her uncle Plautius , whither they had been banished 7 years before; likewise his father's physicians for refusing to poison him, and all those who strove to reconcile him to his brother; as the brothers came from Britain to Rome , Caracalla endeavoured to murder Geta , which occasioned them for the future to march with their separate guards, lodge in separate houses, &c. They were received with great pomp at Rome , but their private animosities rose so high, that a separation of the empire was proposed, but frustrated by their

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4518	3211	212	mother Julia. Caracalla at the feast of Saturn in the clofe of the year again attempted to murder Geta, which occasioned much bloodshed. Caracalla finding Geta fo well taken care of, that he could not get him difpatched either by poifon or by force, pretends to be reconciled to him, and invites him to an interview in his mother's chamber; Geta goes unarmed, but as foon as he was in the room he was flatted and murdered in his mother's arms, who was alfo wounded: Caracalla runs as if frighted to his army, returns thanks to the gods for having efaped from the confpiracy, beflows 2500 drachma's a man, and doubles their pay, by which means he fecured all the foldiers to him, who faluted him fole emperor. Next day he goes to the fenate, attended by his guards, and accuses his murdered brother with a defign to kill him, buries his brother with great pomp, and gets the fenate to rank him among the gods, with the ufual folemnities; notwithstanding which he mafacred all Geta's friends and domefticks, to the number of 20,000, and punifhed with death the bare mention of his name, and ordered the money coined with his name to be melted, and the publick infcriptions to be erased. He likewife put to death Papinian, the greateft lawyer Rome ever bred, and his fon the quaefitor; and a daughter of the emperor M. Aurelius, for weeping for Geta; Septimius Severus Afer, his firft coufin; Pompeianus, grandfon of M. Aurelius; Helvicus Pertinax, fon of the emperor Pertinax; and fome of the veftal virgins were alfo put to death: He univerfally loaded the people with exorbitant taxes, and at Rome caufed vaft numbers of them to be put to death, fometimes for diverfion, and fometimes for revenge; he fhewed the utmoft contempt for the fenate, and intirely neglected the adminiftration of juftice, raifed the meanefft perfons to the higheft ftations, and was himfelf ruled and the empire controuled by two of his favourite flaves, feting all things to fale, offices, provinces, publick revenues, publick juftice, and the lives both of the innocent and guilty.	VI	122
4519	3212	213	Caracalla finding himfelf generally hated in Rome , goes into Gaul , orders the proconful of Narbonne to be put to death, and made dreadful havock of the people, ordering the very phyficians who had recovered him from a dangerous malady to be put to death as foon as he was well.	VI	125
4520	3213	214	Caracalla ordered Gaiobomar , king of the Quadians , to be treacheroufly murdered, and all the young men that were with him, which he often boafed of as a work of great merit, but for what is not mentioned.	VI	125
4520	3213	214	Caracalla having taken fome German women prifoners, asked them, whether he fhould put them to death or fell them for flaves? they chofe death; but he felling them, they deftroyed themfelves and children. He was forced to buy peace at a dear rate of thefe people, which reduced him fo low as to force him to coin falfe money.	VII	603
4520	3213	214	The Alemans made their firft appearance being a collection of people of various nations, whofe chief feat or country was in the prefent country of Wirttemberg . Caracalla made war upon them, and defeated them, and then made peace with them.	VI	126
4521	3214	215	Caracalla the Roman emperor quarrels with the Goths .	VII	538
4521	3214	215	Caracalla leaves Rome , and goes into Asia , and offers up prayers and facrifices to Æfculapius at Pergamus , to be cured of his difeafes, but went away unanswered to Illium , and vifits the tomb of Achilles , and pays great honours to his memory, and then goes into Macedon , appearing in the garb and ufing the cuftoms of each place he came to.	VI	493
4522	3215	216	Caracalla (now at Nicomedia) goes to Antioch , whither inviting the kings of Ofrhoene and Armenia , caufes them unjuftly to be imprifoned; the Armenians refented the affront, and overthrew Theocritus the Roman general with great flauhter, and preferved their freedom. After which Caracalla went to Alexandria , and made dreadful havock of the people for lampooning him, ordering his troops to enter into the houfes in the night-time, and kill all they met without diftinction, and continued the flauhter all the following day, ftripped the city of all its privileges, fuppreffed the body of learned men, and ordered all ftrangers to depart, and ftopt the communication of the ftreets by building high walls guarded by foldiers.	VI	127
4522	3215	216	Caracalla demands the daughter of Artabanus king of Partbia in marriage, which being agreed to, Caracalla goes under the pretence of celebrating the nuptials, and is very fplendidly received where-ever he came; Artabanus and his nobility going out unarmed to meet him, Caracalla orders his troops to fall upon them, which they do, and make a moft terrible flauhter, few efaping. Artabanus raifes a very large army, invades Syria , and puts all to fire and fword: Macrinus , the captain of the guard, meets him; they engage, and fight two days, killing 40,000 between them, when Macrinus informs Artabanus Caracalla was dead; they make a peace, and the prifoners Caracalla had taken are returned.	IV	322
4523	3216	217	Caracalla the Roman emperor is flatted by one Martialis , an exempt in the army, by the infigation of Macrinus , the captain of his guards, on the 8th of April , as he was going from Edeffa to Carrhae to vifit a temple of the moon, aged 29 years and four months, having reigned fix years, two months, and four days, and Opilius Macrinus is declared emperor, who gives the foldiers large fums, and makes them larger promifes: After proclaiming a free pardon for all accused of treason, he took the names of Severus and Aurelius , orders the body of Caracalla to be burnt with the ufual folemnity, and fent his afhes in an urn to his mother Julia at Antioch , who flarved herfelf to death. The fenate orders all the gold and fiver ftatues of Caracalla to be melted down, and his infcriptions to be erased, annulled his acts, and de-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			clared his memory infamous: They declare Macrinus emperor, rank his family among the patricians, proclaim his son Cæsar , and his wife Nonia Celia Augusta .	VI	321
4524	3217	218	Macrinus having by his extream severity exasperated the soldiers near Emesa against him, they declared Heliogabalus , cousin to Caracalla , emperor, a youth of 13 years old, by the name of M. Aurelius Antoninus . Macrinus sends Julianus from Antioch against them, who is betrayed and beheaded, and many of his soldiers go over to the revolvers. Macrinus promises the soldiers 5000 drachma's a piece, and pays 1000 down, and writes to the senate, who declares Heliogabalus a publick enemy. Heliogabalus being greatly strengthened by an accession of more troops, goes to attack Macrinus at Antioch , where after a very obstinate battle, Macrinus left his men and fled, when what was left also joined Heliogabalus , and Macrinus and his son were taken and put to death. Heliogabalus enters Antioch , and writes to the senate, acquainting them with the death of Macrinus , &c. promises to conform to the institutions of Augustus and M. Aurelius , and do nothing without their consent; they agree, and confirm his titles, &c. who though so very young, proved the greatest monster of cruelty and profligateness that ever lived; and though he reigned but four years, he married and divorced six wives.	VI	135
4525	3218	219	Artabanus king of Parthia having lost the flower of his army in the war with the Romans, &c. Artaxerxes (a person of a mean birth, but a good soldier) spirits up his countrymen, who were tributaries to Artabanus , to take this opportunity to free themselves: They revolt, and Artaxerxes becomes their leader, who engages Artabanus for three days together, and at last the Parthians were routed, and most of Artabanus 's troops were cut off in their flight, and himself taken prisoner, and soon after put to death: Thus the Parthians , who had commanded the Persians 475 years, became tributaries to the Persians , and Artaxerxes became king of Persia and Parthia , &c.	IV	323
4525	3218	219	Heliogabalus is consul for the first time, and leaves the east, and enters Rome with great pomp, and is received with universal joy by the senate and people: Next day he went to the senate, and set his grandmother Messa next the consuls, and ordered her name to be registered among the senators, and appointed her to vote with the rest, &c. and institutes a senate of women, and lets his mother Sœmus at the head of it, whose business was to regulate the dress of the Roman matrons, their ranks, dignities, visits, ceremonies, &c. belonging to the ladies.	VI	136
4527	3220	221	Heliogabalus adopts his cousin Alexianus , and declares him Cæsar , who took the names of Alexander and Severus , and striving to debase his manners, Alexianus refused to comply, which he resents so much as to order him to be privately murdered; but being disappointed, he orders the senate to degrade him, and annul the adoption, and ordered assassins to murder him, but the guards espoused the young prince's cause, so that Heliogabalus had much ado to pacify them, and promises amendment, &c.	VI	137
4528	3221	222	Heliogabalus pretends to be reconciled to Alexander ; takes the consulship the third time, and chuses Alexander for his colleague. He orders all the senators to depart the city, then shut up Alexander in the palace, and gave out he was suddenly taken ill, and past recovery; the soldiers fly to arms, and demand a sight of Alexander ; who being brought forth, was received with universal joy by all, which so vex'd the emperor, that he ordered them all to be punished as traitors. Upon which an engagement happens between the partisans of the two princes, in which many were slain, and the Emperor himself, with his mother, had their heads cut off, and their bodies dragged about the city, and then thrown into the Tyber the 11th of March , aged about 18, having reigned 3 years, 9 months and 4 days. The senate order the name of Antoninus , which he had assumed, to be erased out of the public registers, &c. the soldiers proclaimed Alexander emperor, which was confirmed to him by the senate, who was born at Arca in Phœnicia ; his mother Mamea is supposed to be a christian, or at least a favourer of them, and brought him up with great care, and when advanced to the empire, he would not suffer the Christians to be persecuted; and caused the famous rule, Do as you would be done by , to be set over the gates of his palace, and on many other public edifices, and squar'd all his actions thereby; made strict enquiry into the conduct of the governors of the provinces, and banished those who had misbehaved, and supply'd their places with the most virtuous and fit persons, &c. the like he did in all the public offices of the empire.	VI	139
4528	3221	222	The Romans pay the Goths an annual sum to keep them quiet.	VII	493
4529	3222	223	The emperor married Sulpicia Memmia , daughter of Sulpicius , and grand-daughter of Catullus ; the nuptials were celebrated with extraordinary pomp and magnificence.	VI	139
4532	3225	226	Artaxares having settled himself upon the Persian Throne, and taken the name of King of Kings , and conceiving himself to have an undeniable title, as successor to Cyrus , to all the lesser Asia , commanded all the Roman Generals immediately to quit those provinces; raises a great army, and invades them; Alexander raises a great army to oppose him; and while he was at or near Mesopotamia , Artaxares sends 400 chosen men, richly dress'd, of great stature and strength, and commissions them to say to the emperor, That the great king Artaxares commands the Romans and their prince to depart out of all Syria and Asia Minor , &c. the emperor orders the equipage of these embassadors to be taken from them, and sends them into Phrygia to cultivate farms there for their subsistence, and then advanced and recovered Mesopotamia without opposition. Artaxares meets Alexander with 120000 horse, 10000 heavy-arm'd soldiers, 1800

chariot:

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ			Vol. Pg.
			chariots arm'd with scythes, 700 elephants, and an innumerable number of foot; but is defeated by the Romans , and forced to retire into the heart of Persia . The Roman army was divided into three parts, one of which going into Armenia , grew so licentious, that they slew their general Flavius , and then became an easy prey to Artaxares .
4534	3227	228	The emperor Alexander having advanced Domitius Ulpianus , a famous civilian, to be captain of the Prætorian Guards , who endeavouring to restore the ancient discipline, so exasperated them, that they murdered him in the presence of the emperor; the principals were punished with death, and the most noted of the factious soldiers ignominiously discharged. The troops quartered in Mesopotamia mutinied, murdered their general, and revolted to the Persians . The troops in Syria proclaimed one Taurinus emperor, who refused the offer, and flying from among them, being pursued, threw himself into the Euphrates , and was drown'd. At Rome the prætorian guards would have set up one Antoninus to be emperor, but he modestly withdrew, and never appeared in the city again; but one Ovinus Camillus , striving to ingratiate himself with the soldiers, &c. Alexander sends for him, and allows him to be his partner in the empire; who soon after resign'd.	IV	326
4535	3228	229	The emperor Alexander and Dion Cassius are consuls at Rome this year, and punish his favourite Vetronius Turinus with death, for abusing his power, and for extortion, &c.	VI	140
4539	3232	233	Artaxerxes the Persian having made himself master of Mesopotamia , &c. Alexander goes against him, and defeats his mighty army, and returns to Rome , and triumphs with great magnificence.	VI	141
4540	3233	234	The Alemans , &c. having passed the Rhine , and seized the forts built on the banks of that river, entered Gaul , and committed most horrid ravages.	VI	144
4541	3234	235	The emperor Alexander going to suppress the mutinous Germans , one Maximus , by nation a Goth , whom Alexander had raised to the command of a body of Pomeranians , conspires against him, murders his mother Mamaa , and what few soldiers the emperor had with him, and then they killed him in his tent, being twenty-six years, five months, and nineteen days old, highly lamented of all, in the 14th year of his reign.	VII	589
4541	3234	235	Maximus , upon the death of Alexander , was proclaim'd emperor by his Pannonian troops; and the rest of the soldiers, seeing no other candidate, join'd them, and took the usual oaths to him; upon which he declar'd his son Maximus , Cæsar and prince of the Roman youth, and invested him with the tribunitial and proconsular power, and his colleague in the empire, which the senate confirm'd. He was of very mean extract, but being eight foot six inches tall, and every way proportionable, his natural strength was so great as to tear up trees by the roots, crumble pebbles between his fingers, &c. could eat 60 lb. of flesh, and drink six gallons of wine at a meal, without being guilty of any excess. He displaced all the officers of Alexander , and put in all his own creatures, and murdered all those who knew him in, and had been instrumental in raising him from his low condition. One Magnus , a consular, conspired with some of Alexander's soldiers, to expose him to the enemy, for which he massacred 4000 of them, without trial or examination: This exasperated the Osboenians so much, that they revolted, and proclaimed T. Quartinus emperor; but one Macedo murdered him in his tent, and carried his head to Maximus , who caused the messenger to be executed, and all things were again quiet.	VI	152
4541	3234	235	Maximinus enters Germany , at the head of a mighty army, and ravaged the country far and wide, burnt their habitations, carried off their cattle, and took an incredible number of prisoners, and killed abundance of people in several battles.	VII	589
4541	3234	235	The emperor Constantine consecrates the famous church of the resurrection at Jerusalem , which he built upon his mother's finding the sepulchre and cross of our saviour.	VI	262
4543	3236	237	Maximinus goes against the Dacians and Sarmatians , and gains several victories over them, and obliged them to submit to his own terms. At Rome being monstrously cruel, and insatiably avaricious, he encouraged informers, made plots, and condemned without distinction of age, or sex, or quality, all the accused, and seized the confiscated estates, &c.	VI	153
4543	3236	237	The people revolt in Africa from Maximinus , and proclaim Gordianus , at that time their proconsul, emperor. Gordianus was descended of an illustrious family, was immensely rich, and extremely beloved both in Rome and in the provinces, many of which he had governed; but being upwards of 80 years of age, begs to be excused; but the people will take no denial, whereupon he associated his son (whose name was also Gordianus) with him in the empire. He goes to Carthage , and writes to the senate; they confirm him and his son, and publish a great reward for any one to murder Maximinus . The people pull down all his statues, uttering dreadful execrations against him and his son: The senate pass sentence upon all his friends, and the ministers of his cruelty, and many of them were massacred by the enraged populace at Rome , and in all the other provinces. It being reported the two Maximinus's were killed, the soldiers submit to the two Gordians . Maximinus hearing of these commotions, marches with his army out of Thrace into Italy : In the mean time Capelianus , governor of Mauritania , comes with a great army to Carthage , engages the young Gordianus , kills him, and cuts off all his army, and the old one upon the news thereof strangled himself, after having reigned one month and six days. Upon this the senate at Rome proclaims M. Clodius Pupienus Maximus and Decimus Cælius Balbinus joint emperors. Maximus marches against Maximinus , who threatened destruction to all opposers. Through rashness a quarrel was kindled between the soldiers and people at Rome , that occasioned the loss of abundance of lives, and the destruction of great part of the city by fire, plunder, &c.	VI	158

Maximinus's

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1041)	Vol. Pag.
4544	3237	238	Maximinus's soldiers begin to mutiny, and he punishes the ringleaders with great severity, which exasperates the rest. He besieges Aquileia , which baffles all his attempts; he uies the officers ill, and at last the Albanian soldiers go resolutely at noon day, and kill both the Maximins in their tents, and cutting off their heads sent them to Rome , and threw their bodies into the river: They likewise killed Anolinus , his captain of the guards, and most of his friends, having reigned three years and some days, and the whole army submitted to Maximus and Balbinus , who reigned with great humanity, justice, gentleness, and impartiality.	VI 159
4544	3237	238	The prætorian guards pretending they had lost their privilege of nominating the emperors, come to the palace, seize and murder both the emperors, who had reigned only one year and two months, and proclaim young Gordian emperor, who was called the son of the senate, the child of the soldiery, and the darling of the people.	VI 161
4544	3237	238	The Carpi break into Mæsia , and having ravaged the province, utterly destroy the city of Istria , and return unmolested.	VII 607
4544	3237	238	The Goths break into Mæsia , and lay the whole province waste, to revenge the death of the emperor Maximinus , who was of Gotbick extraction, and had been murdered by his own soldiers.	VII 493
4545	3238	239	Young Gordianus , now but 14 years old, is consul, and exhibits magnificent sports, to please the people.	VI 161
4546	3239	240	Sabinianus revolts in Africa , and proclaims himself emperor of Rome , &c. but by the diligence of the governor of Mauritania , Sabinus is delivered up, and the uproar is quieted.	VI 161
4547	3240	241	The emperor is a second time consul, and marries Furia Sabina Tranquillina , daughter of Misitheus , a man of great learning, virtue, and integrity, by whose advice the emperor discharged and banished from the court Maurus and other great officers, who had abused their trust.	VI 611
4547	3240	241	A dreadful earthquake overturns a great many cities, and destroyed an infinite number of people.	VI 162
4548	3241	242	Artaxerxes king of Persia having now settled his empire, dies, and is succeeded by his son Sapores , or Sapor , who makes war upon the Romans , by the advice of one Cyriades , son of a Roman general of that name, who having many followers, takes the cities of Antioch and Cæsarea Philippi ; upon which Cyriades takes the name of Cæsar , and afterwards of emperor.	IV 326
4548	3241	242	The emperor sets out from Rome to quell the revolt in the east, and passing through Mæsia , the Goths and Sarmatians oppose him, and he defeats them, and forces them to abandon their conquests, and to return home, was overcome in a tumultuary engagement with the Alani , but was no great loser: Afterwards he overcame the Persians in several battles, recovered Nisibis and Carrhæ , and obliged Sapor to abandon the Roman dominions.	VI 163
4548	3241	242	The emperor Gordian obliges the Sarmatians and Goths to quit Mæsia , and retire beyond the Danube .	VII 607
4549	3242	243	Misitheus , the emperor's father-in-law, dies, and is succeeded as captain of the guards, and commander in chief of all the army under the emperor, by one Philip who stirs up the soldiers to mutiny, and to depose Gordian , whom Philip ordered to be murdered in the furthest borders of Persia on the 14th of March , when he had reigned five years and eight months, in the 19th year of his age, and Philip reigned in his stead, who was an Arabian by birth, of very mean extract, but is said to be the first Christian emperor: He wrote to the senate, who immediately confirmed his title: he took his son for his colleague, though but seven years old. Philip concludes a peace with the Persians , goes to Rome , and is received with all possible tokens of joy by the senate and people.	VI 166
4550	3243	244	Philip is consul at Rome for the first time, and goes against the Carpi , who had invaded Mæsia , and laid waste great part of that province, overthrew them in two battles, and obliged them to repass the Danube , and sue for peace, which he granted them, and then returned to Rome .	VI 166
4551	3244	245	Ostrogotha king of the Goths besieges Marcianopolis , the capitol of Mæsia ; but for a large sum of money paid him by the inhabitants, he raises the siege and goes home.	VII 494
4551	3244	245	The Gepidæ (a Gotbick nation) under the conduct of their king Fastidas , gain a complete victory over the Burgundians , and almost extirpate them.	VII 595
5552	3245	246	An accidental fire happens at Rome , whereby Pompey's theatre, and another building called Centum Columnæ , or the hundred pillars, were burnt.	VI 166
4552	3245	246	Philip and his son were consuls this and the following year, whom he honoured with the title of Augustus , and invested him with the tribunitial power, to celebrate with the greater pomp the 1000th year of Rome , which begun the following year the 21st of April , 247: Extraordinary rejoicings were made at Rome , and publick shews exhibited for ten days together, &c. Philip published an edict, forbidding unnatural lust, under the severest penalties.	VI 166
4554	3247	248	The eastern provinces being grievously oppressed by Priscus their governor, revolt from Rome , and set up one Papianus for emperor; but he being killed, all was soon quiet again. Mæsia and Pannonia revolt, and set up one P. Corvillus Marinus ; but being an unfit person, his own creatures murdered him soon after. Philip recalls his father-in-law, who was governor of Pannonia , and sends one Decius , a noble senator, against his will in his stead, and immediately the soldiers proclaimed Decius emperor.	VI 167
4554	3247	248	Fastida enters the territories of the Goths , and begins to lay them waste; upon which king Ostrogotha returns out of Mæsia , meets Fastida , and gives him a complete overthrow.	VII 596

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		(1042)	Vol. Pag.
4555	3248	249	Philip goes against Decius ; they engage; Philip is defeated, and flies to Verona , where he is killed, the 18:h June , having reigned 5 year, 3 months, and some days; upon hearing whereof the praetorian guards at Rome kill his son. The Christian religion was publickly preached during his reign. Decius is again proclaimed by the soldiery emperor, and soon after by the senate and people, by birth a Pannonian , of a good family, and an excellent prince; he declares his son Decius Caesar , and raised the most cruel persecution against christianity the church ever underwent.		VI 153
4556	3249	250	The Goths under their king Cniva invested with 70000 men the city of Exsterrum ; but being gallantly repulsed by Gallus , they went to Nicopolis , another city of Lower Mesia . Young Decius fell upon them, and cut 30000 of them to pieces, and obliged the rest to retire beyond mount Hemus . Soon after being recruited, they came before Philippolis , against whom Decius marches again, but Cniva falling upon him at unawares, the Romans were all cut to pieces, and Decius saved himself by flight, upon which Cniva took Philippolis , and put 100000 souls to the sword, ravaged Thrace and great part of Macedon . Priscus , who was governor in Macedon , joined the enemy, and proclaimed himself emperor.		VII 494
4557	3250	251	The emperor Decius and his son Decius are consuls this year, and gain several battles against the Goths ; the senate declare Priscus a public enemy, who was slain; the emperor gives the senate leave to chuse a censor, who nominate Valerian to that office; the emperor again obtained great advantages over the Goths , who offered to resign all their booty, if he would let them return home; but he, bent upon utterly destroying them, goes against them with his whole army, and after a long and bloody battle, himself and son are both killed, and a great part of his army cut to pieces: upon which the remaining soldiers proclaimed Gallus emperor, which the senate confirm'd. Gallus concludes a peace with the Goths , and agrees to pay them a yearly sum.		VI 171
4558	3251	252	Gallus and his son Volusianus are consuls, and revive the edicts of the late emperor against the Christians , which are put in execution with the utmost rigour; a terrible plague breaks out first in Ethiopia , and spread all over the Roman provinces, sweeping off prodigious numbers of people, as well at Rome as elsewhere. A great famine, general drought, and universal wars raged every where.		VI 171
4558	3251	352	The Goths , &c. break into Mesia and Pannonia ; the Scythians over-run Asia and the Persians lay waste Syria , and take Antioch ; Emilianus , governor in Mesia , drove out the Barbarians with great loss, and forced them to quit the Roman dominions; upon which he proclaimed himself emperor, and marched directly into Italy . Gallus and his son meet him at Interamna , now Termini , about thirty-two miles from Rome , with a gallant army; but their own soldiers murder them both, after a reign of one year and six months, and go over to Emilianus , whom the senate confirm; he was by birth a Moor , of very mean descent.		VI 171
4559	3252	253	The Goths enter the Roman territories; but being engaged by Emilianus , they are defeated, and drove quite out of the empire.		VII 494
4559	3252	253	Valerian's army, upon hearing of the death of Gallus , proclaim their own general emperor; upon which Valerian comes into Italy , where Emilianus's army first killed him at Spoletum , after reigning four months, and then declared for Valerian , whom the senate confirmed with great joy, and gave the title of Caesar to his son Gallienus . Valerian was nobly descended, and highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all degrees, for his many great virtues and excellent qualifications. He enacted many excellent laws, and greatly reform'd the disorders of those times, and advanced only men of merit.		VI 173
4560	3253	254	Valerian and his son Gallienus are consuls this year, and he also takes Gallienus a partner with him in the empire.		VI 173
4560	3253	254	The Franks or Sicambri , (for the first time) inhabitants of Westphalia , &c. make an irruption into Gaul , with a small army, and commit dreadful havock and ravages; but being opposed by Aurelian the tribune, he kills 700, takes 300, and sells them for slaves, and obliges the rest to quit their booty and retire.		VII 551
4561	3254	255	Valerian and his son Gallienus are again consuls; Gallienus obtains a great victory over the revolted Germans , and thereupon takes the title of Germanicus Maximus .		VI 173
4562	3255	256	The Franks , &c. break into Gaul , but are entirely defeated by Gallienus , who for this victory was surnamed Germanicus .		VII 552
4562	3255	256	The Alemans suddenly break into Gaul and Italy ; in Gaul they were defeated, and forced to repass the Rhine . In Italy they advanced as far as Milan , destroying all with fire and sword.		VII 588
4562	3255	256	The Heruli first began to invade the empire, but are driven back by Gallienus .		VII 599
4562	3255	256	The Goths , &c. again enter the empire, and lay it waste, &c.		VII 495
4563	3256	257	Aurelian , who was afterwards emperor, drove the Goths out of Illyricum with great slaughter, and took abundance of prisoners.		VII 495
4563	3256	257	The eighth terrible persecution broke out against the Christians , that lasted three years, during which they suffered the most extravagant tortures and shameful deaths the malice of their enemies could invent.		VI 173
4563	3256	257	Aurelian drove the Goths out of Illyricum and Thrace , took an incredible number of them prisoners, and pursued them beyond the Danube ; laid their country waste, and returned to Mesia loaded with spoil; and Probus was as successful against the Sarmatians and Quadi .		VI 173
4563	3256	257	The Quadians join the Sarmatians , and break into Illyricum , and ravage part of it, but are defeated by Probus .		VII 603
4566	3259	260	The Franks , &c. break into Gaul , and having ravaged the most wealthy provinces there, made an irruption into Italy .		VII 552

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
(1043)
4566	3259	260	The Quadians make a sudden irruption into Pannonia , but Regillianus , the Roman commander in that country, attacking them, gained several victories in one day.	VII	603
4566	3259	260	Aurelianus having recovered great part of Syria , engages Sapores , is treacherously taken prisoner, and used in the most ignominious manner possible by Sapores , king of Persia ; who, upon his death, flea'd him, dy'd his skin red, and exposed it in one of his temples.	IV	327
4566	3259	260	Ingenuus proclaims himself emperor in Pannonia ; Gallienus goes against him, overcomes him, and puts all the males in Mesia to death for joining him. Upon which the troops of Ingenuus , and the inhabitants that escaped, declared Q. Numerius Regillianus emperor, by birth, a Dacian , and descended from king Decabalus ; he gained considerable advantages over the Sarmatians , but his own men fearing Gallienus , revolted from and murdered him, and submitted to Gallienus . M. Cassius Labienus Posthumus , governor of Gaul , revolted; he was but of mean extract, but had excellent qualifications; for which the soldiers under his command proclaimed him emperor; he besieged Cologne , and took Sylvanus , governor of Salonius , son of Gallienus , and his ward, and put them both to death. Gaul , Spain and Britain acknowledge him; he reigned seven years with so much gentleness and equity, that he was even adored; he drove the Germans out of Gaul , and freed it from all the calamities of war.	VI	175
4567	3260	261	Odenatus assisted by Balkha engages the Perfians , frequently defeats them, and among other spoils takes Sapores wives prisoners. This greatly mortified him; so that entering Syria , he took Antioch , and levelled all the publick buildings of that stately city; then went into Cilicia , and plundered Tarus the capital; goes into Cappadocia , and took Cesarea , and cut the inhabitants, to the number of 400,000 to pieces, but Odenatus and Balkha falling upon his rear, made a dreadful havock of them, and obliged Sapores to pay the Roman garison all the Syrian money he had amassed for leave to return home.	VI	178
4567	3260	261	One Macrianus , by birth an Egyptian , by the assistance of Balkha , is declared emperor. Egypt and other eastern countries submit to him at Alexandria . The contentions rose so high, that commerce and converse was stopped, and this introduced a general famine and terrible plague, so that the numerous inhabitants were soon reduced to a small number. Valens being sent as proconsul into Greece , took the title of emperor likewise. Macrianus sends Piso against him to suppress him; but Piso sets up for himself, and would be emperor likewise, but was soon killed by some of Valens 's soldiers. Valens had the same fate a few days afterwards. The Illyrican soldiers set up Manius Acilius Aureolus to be emperor. From Illyricum he goes into Italy , and made himself master of Milan . Gallienus goes against him, but is at length obliged to make a truce with him.	VI	180
4567	3260	261	The Scythians break into Bithynia , lay the country waste, level several cities with the ground, and carry off vast booty and a great number of captives. In Sicily great bands of robbers or banditti commit terrible ravages and devastations, which cost a great deal of blood to suppress.	VI	180
4568	3261	262	Odenatus takes the name of king of Palmyra , and Gallienus made him commander of all the Roman troops in the east. Odenatus desirous to deliver Valerian from his shameful slavery, engages Sapores , defeats him, and forces him to take shelter in Ctesiphon , his metropolis, where he besieged him, and defeated the Perfians several times who came to his relief, and took several of the great men prisoners, which he sent to Gallienus .	VI	171
4568	3261	262	Many parts of the empire of Rome are overcast with thick clouds, and a great darkness for several days together, attended with a dreadful earthquake, and terrifying claps of thunder, the earth opening in many places, and swallowing up the people and their habitations, the sea swelling uncommonly, broke in upon the continent, and drowned whole cities, and the plague raged with great violence in Egypt , Greece and Rome , at which last place it swept off 5000 persons a day for some time.	VI	180
4568	3261	262	Macrianus comes from Syria towards Italy with 45000 Men. Meets and engages Aureolus in Illyricum , and himself and son being killed, what soldiers were left left under Aureolus ; and Odenatus has his son Quietus 's head cut off; upon which Balkha assumes the title of emperor, and puts the inhabitants of Emesa almost all to the sword for refusing it to him. At the same time Emilianus sets up for emperor in Egypt ; seizes all the granaries in Alexandria , and causes a famine in several provinces.	VI	181
4568	3261	262	Gallienus and Aureolus goes against Posthumus , who had now reigned undisturbed three years in Gaul , one while one party, and anon the other get the advantage, which spins out the war.	VI	181
4568	3261	262	The Goths ravage Asia , &c. and plunder the temple of Diana at Ephesus .	VII	495
4569	3262	263	Gallienus goes into the east, and being admitted within the walls of Byzantium , contrary to his express oath and agreement, put the garison and inhabitants to the sword; he returned to Rome , and triumph'd tho' he had fought no battle. This year P. Sempronius Saturninus was proclaimed emperor, and did great feats against the Barbarians ; but upon account of the strictness of his discipline, was murdered by his own soldiers that had raised him.	VI	181
4569	3262	263	Gallienus sends Theodotus , a Native of Egypt , against Emilianus , who now reigned in Egypt . Theodotus overcomes him, and sent him prisoner to Rome , where he was strangled by the emperor's orders.	VI	181
4570	3263	264	Gallienus rewards Odenatus for his exploits against the Perfians with the titles of Cæsar , Augustus , and Emperor, and took him in partner with him in the empire. Balkha , who held some provinces in the east, was killed by a soldier sent by Odenatus for that purpose.	VI	182

Th:

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		(1044)	Vol.	Page
4571	3264	265	The Ipsaurians revolting in Asia minor , chose C. Annus Trebellianus for their leader, who took the title of Augustus , coin'd money, and reigned sometime in Ipsauria and Cilicia , but was soon after defeated and killed in battle. But the Ipsaurians maintained their freedom and independency many years after.		VI	182
4571	3264	265	The Goths conquer Dacia , which had been made a Roman province by Trojan .		VII	514
4571	3264	265	The Franks having ravaged Gaul , pass into Spain , where they take by storm and plunder Tamaco , the principal city of many provinces.		VII	552
4572	3265	266	Odenatus enters the Persian territories, and puts all to fire and sword, overcame Sapor in several battles, &c.		VI	183
4572	3265	266	The Goths over-run Asia-Minor , Lydia , Pontus , &c. ravage the country, destroy the houses, palaces, churches, temples, &c. and use the people cruelly, and carry off an immense booty, and vast numbers of captives.		VII	495
4573	3266	267	The Herculi in 500 ships pass from the Palus Mæotis to the Euxine sea, and landed at Byzantium and Chrysopolis , where they were defeated by Venerianus ; but rallying, they cross the Bosphorus , surprize and plunder Cyzicus , and great part of Asia , with the islands Lemnos and Scyros ; then coming into Greece , they burn Athens , Corinth , Sparta , and Argos : In their retreat the Athenians fall upon and cut great numbers of them to pieces; but as the remainder returned homeward, they committed great ravages in Bæotia , Acarnania , Epirus , and Thrace . Gallienus overtakes and engages them in Illyricum , and overthrows them with great slaughter, and pursues them, cuts 30,000 to pieces as they attempted to cross the river, and took Naulobatus their king prisoner.		VII	599
4573	3266	267	Many of the Goths are drowned by the Roman fleet, as they were returning home with their prey out of Asia , &c.		VI	183
4573	3266	267	Odenatus and his eldest son Herod are slain, and his wife Zenobia reigns by the name of queen of the east, guardian of her four sons, whom she arrayed in purple garments and the other ensigns of royalty, acting independantly, and instead of assisting the Roman army sent by Gallienus , opposed, defeated, and obliged it to return home.		VI	183
4573	3266	267	One Ælianus took the title of emperor at Mentz , who was soon overcome by Posthumius , who reduced the rebellious city, but restraining his men from plundering it, they mutiny, and kill him and his son, and Lollianus is proclaimed emperor in his stead, but was soon after murdered by his soldiers for the strictness of his discipline, upon whose death Victorinus (the partner of Posthumius) became master of all Gaul , but was soon after murdered at Cologne , by one whose wife he had debauched, and the Gauls set up M. Aurelius Marius , who was killed the third day, and then the Gauls set up P. Pius Tetricus for emperor, then governor of Aquitain ; he was acknowledged in Spain , Gaul , and Brittain .		VI	184
4574	3267	268	The Juthongians , or Alemans , that dwell on the banks of the Rhine , break into Italy , and rove near Verona : Claudius marches against them, and in a pitched battle defeats them with great slaughter, and forces them to quit their booty, and save themselves by a precipitate flight.		VII	539
4574	3267	268	The first of Claudius's reign the Sueves , &c. broke into Italy , and advanced as far as Verona ; but being there encountered by the emperor, were intirely defeated.		VII	589
4574	3267	268	Aureolus being taken by Gallienus a partner with him in the empire, takes the opportunity of his being in the east to march towards Rome , with an intent to make himself sole emperor and depose Gallienus ; but Gallienus hearing of his march, flies after him, overtakes, engages, and defeats him, follows him to Milan , and besieges him, where Gallienus , the father and son, and Valerian and Egnatius his brothers were killed, upon which Claudius is proclaimed emperor; the senate declared Gallienus a publick enemy, and ordered most of his friends and ministers to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock, and caused his name to be erased out of the publick inscriptions, having been one of the most wicked princes that ever reigned in Rome .		VI	185
4574	3267	268	The senate received Claudius's letter, acquainting them what had happened at Milan the 24th of March ; they assemble immediately, and confirm Claudius emperor, upon which he attacked Aureolus , and took him prisoner, whom the soldiers killed without orders; then went against the Germans , and defeated them with incredible slaughter, and drove the remainder out of Italy , then returns to Rome , and spends the remaining part of the year in reforming the state.		VI	186
4575	3268	269	Zenobia overcomes Probus , a Roman commander in Egypt , and takes and destroys Bruchium , the citadel of Alexandria , upon which Probus kills himself.		VI	187
4575	3268	269	The Goths , Herculi , &c. invade the Roman empire with a great fleet and an army of 320,000 men, which are repulsed, beaten, and almost all destroyed by the emperor Claudius , partly by the sword, and partly by famine.		VII	496
4576	3269	270	The Goths enter and ravage Pannonia , but being engaged by the emperor Aurelianus , pass the Danube in the night, sue for peace, and have it granted.		VII	497
4576	3269	270	Claudius prepares to go against Zenobia , but is prevented by a terrible plague that breaks out in his army, of which great part and himself die, at Sirmium in Pannonia , having reigned two years and one month; the senate paid him divine honours, and hung up a golden shield, with his image on it, in the place of their assembly, to keep the good he had done always in their minds.		VI	187
4576	3269	270	The senate proclaim Quintillus the brother of Claudius emperor, then at Aquileia , who was murdered by his soldiers, after a reign of 17 days, for attempting to introduce too severe a discipline; upon which the senate confirm the election of Aurelianus , a native of Sirmium in Pannonia , of a mean descent, but admired for his great strength and courage.		VI	188

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4576	3269	270	Aurelian comes to Rome , and by his great severity gets the dislike of both senate and people; he began the repairing and extending the walls of the city to 50 miles in compass.	VI	189
4576	3269	270	The Alemans return into Italy , and commit great ravages, going as far as Placentia before Aurelian could come up with them: As the emperor approached they concealed themselves in the neighbouring woods, whence falling out upon him in the night, they obtained a complete victory; but the emperor having got fresh recruits, overthrew them at Fano , and such as escaped this battle were intirely defeated by two others that quickly followed.	VII	590
4577	3270	271	The Vandals passed the Danube , and having laid waste great part of Italy , the emperor Aurelian goes against them, engages and overcomes them, cuts many of them to pieces, and obliges the rest to sue for peace, which he readily grants them.	VII	528
4578	3271	272	Aurelian having settled peace at Rome , Pannonia , and Italy , goes into the east against the famous Zenobia , said to be well versed in all the branches of polite literature and martial discipline, courageous, prudent, and wise, and a Jewess by religion. Aurelian in his way to Syria put several barbarous nations to flight, passed the Danube , engaged Caunabaud , a Gothic prince, and slew him and 5000 of his men; then going to Tyana in Capadocia , they shut their gates against him, which so enraged him, that he swore he would not leave a dog alive in it: After a resolute defence he took it, but ordered all the inhabitants to be saved, and all the dogs to be killed. From hence he went to Antioch , defeated Zenobia's troops in its neighbourhood, and entered the city in triumph. He again defeated Zenobia near Emesa , took the city, and followed her to Palmyra , where after a long siege and resolute defence, &c. the queen is taken prisoner, and all submit to Aurelian .	VI	191
4579	3272	273	Sapores king of Persia having been lately defeated by Aurelian emperor of Rome , upon his return home died, after having reigned 31 years, and was succeeded by Hormisdas , who having reigned one year and ten days, died in peace.	IV	329
4579	3272	273	As soon as Aurelian was gone, Palmyra revolts, sets up one Antiochus , and put the Roman governor and garrison to the sword: Aurelian goes back into Syria , and came suddenly to Palmyra , put all the inhabitants, old and young, rich and poor, male and female to the sword. Soon after Egypt revolted, and set up one Firmus to be emperor, a native of Seleucia in Syria , but who had a vast estate in Egypt : Aurelian goes against and defeated him, stormed a strong hold to which he fled, took it and him, and ordered him to be publicly executed, and so settled peace in the east, and returned to Europe , and fighting with Tetricus near Chalon on the Marne , Tetricus surrendered himself, and his troops being cut to pieces, all Gaul was again united to the Roman empire; and Aurelian returned to Rome , and had the most magnificent triumph ever seen.	VI	192
4579	3272	273	The Franks make an irruption into Gaul , but being attacked by the emperor Aurelian , they are driven back with great slaughter, &c.	VII	553
4580	3273	274	Hormisdas king of Persia dying, is succeeded by Varanus , who reigned over the Persians three years.	IV	329
4580	3273	274	Aurelian's triumph being over, he entertained the people with magnificent shews, &c. for many days, and used his royal and noble captives with humanity and generosity: To Zenobia he gave lands in Tivoli , to maintain her suitable to her rank, and bestowed her daughters in marriage to the greatest men in Rome ; he made Tetricus governor of Lucania , and paid him high honours, and allowed his son young Tetricus to remain among the senators, &c.	VI	193
4580	3273	274	Aurelian staid this year at Rome , and spent it in regulating the state, and reforming abuses, and doing every thing that might endear him to the people, by forgiving debts, bestowing gifts, &c. He built a most magnificent temple to the sun, and embellished it with golden vessels weighing 1500 pounds weight. The moneyers having abused their trust, and coined a great deal of false money, to prevent their punishment bred a sedition, so that the emperor was forced to send his troops against them, who after killing 7000, were overcome, and punished with great severity. The emperor called in all the bad money, and exchanged it for good money.	VI	194
4580	3273	274	Aurelian withdraws his troops out of Dacia , and carries most of the natives with him, settling them in Moesia and Dardania , and called their habitation New Dacia .	VI	614
4580	3273	274	The Roman emperor Aurelian retiring from Dacia , the Goths re-enter and settle there.	VII	498
4580	3273	274	The emperor goes into Gaul , and allays a commotion there, and forced the Barbarians to repass the Danube that were come into Vindelicis , and rebuilt the city of Orleans ; then going into Illyricum , gave the inhabitants of Dacia that were driven out by the Barbarians part of Moesia and Dardania to settle in.	VI	195
4581	3274	275	Mnesibius , one of Aurelian's freedmen and secretaries, being afraid of his master's resentment against his extortions, counterfeits his hand, wrote a roll of the names of the chief officers of the army, and told them he found it in the emperor's closet, and that they were all doomed to destruction; they believing it, fell upon and killed the emperor between Byzantium and Heraclea , at a place called Cænophrurium (or the New Castle) the 25th of January : Soon after his death the matter was discovered; upon which they threw Mnesibius to the wild beasts, built a magnificent tomb and temple to the murdered emperor in the place where he was killed, and the whole army solemnized his obsequies with the utmost pomp; all who were concerned in his death were cut to pieces on the spot, or executed by his successors: The senate ranked him among the gods, and all bewailed his loss.	VI	195

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4581	3274	275	The army refer the choosing a successor to Aurelian to the senate, and they back again to the army, and so backwards and forwards three times, so that eight months was thus spun out when the senate chose Tacitus , on the 25th of September , which the soldiers and people joyfully confirm: Tacitus the historian being his kinsman, the emperor ordered ten copies of his works to be transcribed annually, and laid up in the publick libraries: The publick rejoicings being over, he went into Asia , and defeated several barbarous nations, and compelled them to return home.	VI	199
4581	3274	275	The Goths enter Pontus , Cappadocia , Galatia , and Silefia , in order to settle in those countries; but the emperor Tacitus prevails upon some with money to return home, and those that staid behind were most of them cut to pieces by the emperor's brother Florianus , and the rest drove quite out of the empire.	VII	438
4582	3275	276	Tacitus dies at Tarsus in Cilicia : As he was preparing to return to Italy he was taken ill of a violent distemper, say some; and killed by the soldiers, say others; when he had reigned only six months. Florianus his brother proclaims himself emperor, and is acknowledged by all the provinces of Europe and Africa ; but Syria , Phœnicia , Palestine , and Egypt declared for Probus , who was commander of all the forces in the east. Probus comes against Florianus : Florianus is killed by his own men, after he had reigned two months, and all proclaim Probus at Tarsus .	VI	199
4583	3276	277	Probus being acknowledged by the senate, and universally by all the provinces, he goes against the Franks and other German nations, who had broke into Gaul , and committed terrible ravages; but proving successful in several battles, writes to the senate that nine kings lay prostrate at his feet, that he had cut 400,000 of the Barbarians to pieces, and incorporated 16,000 among his own troops, that he had recovered sixty great cities, and had intirely freed Gaul , and taken an immense spoil, &c.	VI	200
4583	3276	277	Varanes the I. king of Persia dies, and is succeeded by Varanes II. who hearing the Roman emperor Probus was come into the east, sent ambassadors and presents to him, and to treat of peace: Probus received them very haughtily, and refused the presents, but granted them peace. In his return to Rome passing through Thrace , he gave lands to 100,000 Bastarnæ , a Scythian people, who ever afterwards remained faithful to him. When the Gepide , Juthungi , and Vandals revolted, at Rome he triumphed, and entertained the people with all manner of diversions.	IV	329
4583	3276	277	The Franks , &c. crossing the Rhine , entered Gaul , reduced about 70 of the principal cities to their subjection; but Probus sending some of his best generals against them, gave them a fatal overthrow, and obliged them to quit their booty and return home, whither he followed them, crossing the Rhine after them, laid waste their territories far and near, and even built forts in their country, which so terrified them, that nine of their kings submitted to him, and sued for peace, which he granted.	VII	553
4583	3276	277	Probus the Roman emperor having gained a complete victory over the Burgundians and Vandals , they sue for peace, which he grants, upon condition they returned the booty and prisoners they had taken.	VII	582
4584	3277	278	Saturninus being declared emperor by the Egyptians , Probus sends some troops against him, who engage and put him to flight, and pursue, besiege, and take him by storm in Apamea , and put him and the whole garrison to the sword.	VI	202
4584	3277	278	The Goths enter Thrace , ravage the country, and get great booty; but upon their hearing that the emperor Probus was coming against them, they retire precipitately and leave their plunder behind them.	VII	498
4584	3277	278	The Sarmatians upon hearing of the emperor Probus 's marching against them, retire from Thrace , where they had committed great ravages, abandon the booty they had taken, and sue for peace, which he grants.	VII	607
4585	3278	279	The emperor Probus grants the Sarmatians lands in Thrace , upon their promise of living quietly like other subjects of the empire.	VII	596
4586	3279	280	Some of those Franks Probus had allotted lands to on the coasts of the Euxine sea having seized some ships, sailed to Sicily , took and plundered Syracuse , and put most of the inhabitants to the sword, and re embarked with an immense booty for their own country.	VII	533
4586	3279	280	Proculus and Bonofus revolt; Poculus was declared emperor at Cologne , and acknowledged in Narbonne-Gaul , Britain , and Spain : He defeated the Alemanni in several battles, but was overcome by Probus , who pursued him to the Franks , who surrendered him to Probus , who put him to death. Bonofus , by birth a Britain , and the son of a common school-master, having suffered through neglect the Germans to seize and burn the Roman fleet upon the Rhine , fearing to be punished, caused himself to be proclaimed emperor, and fought several battles with Probus , but being at last reduced to great straits, he killed himself.	VI	202
4587	3280	281	Probus being every where at peace, employs the army in planting vineyards on the hills of Gaul , Pannonia , and Mæfia , and cutting a canal to drain the marshes of Sirmium into the sea, and in building and repairing several great cities.	VI	203
4488	3281	382	The army being enraged against Probus for obliging them to work, fall upon and kill him in Illyricum , having reigned five years and four months, greatly lamented by the senate and people for his extraordinary goodness, courage, and success. The army declared Carus , the then captain of the prætorian guards, emperor in his stead, whom the senate with some difficulty confirmed.	VI	203

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
4589	3282	283	The Quadians and Sarmatians break into Illyricum and Thrace , and after ravaging those provinces advanced towards Italy ; but Carus meeting them gave them a total overthrow, killed 16,000, and took 20,000 prisoners.	VII 603
3590	3283	284	The Roman emperor Carus goes against Varanes II. king of the Persians , enters Mesopotamia , and carries all before him, and advanced even beyond Ctesiphon , the capital of Persia ; but Carus dying soon after, having reigned one year and four months, and his son Numerianus being proclaimed emperor, was by his father-in-law privately murdered, having reigned only eight months: The Roman army proclaimed Dioclesian emperor, (at that time commander of the late emperor's body-guards) at Chalcedon , the 17th of September .	IV 330
4591	3284	285	Dioclesian coming to Venitia , overcame and slew there one Julianus , governor of that province, who had caused himself to be declared emperor.	VI 207
4591	3284	285	Dioclesian and Carinus (the son of the late emperor Carus) have several battles in Illyricum for the empire; at last Carinus is killed, and Dioclesian universally acknowledged, after which he gained several advantages over the Germans and Britains .	VI 207
4592	3285	286	Dioclesian takes Maximian for his colleague and partner in the empire; then he goes into the east, to whom Varanes returned all Armenia , &c. and Maximian goes into Gaul , where he was very successful.	VI 208
4593	3286	287	Carausius , a Gaul by nation, goes into Britain , and is proclaimed emperor, and supports himself with great bravery about seven years, when he was murdered by one Allectus , who proclaimed himself emperor.	VII 434
4593	3286	287	The Franks join the Saxon pirates, and plunder the coasts of Gaul , and carry off an immense booty, and an incredible number of captives.	VII 553
4593	3286	287	The Heruli join the Chaibons and Cavions , entered Gaul , and laid waste the provinces bordering on the Rhine ; but Maximian gave them so fatal an overthrow, that there was scarce one left to carry home the news of their defeat.	VII 597
4593	3286	287	The Burgundians , &c. break into Gaul afresh, with prodigious numbers of men; but a famine and plague happening among them, they became an easy prey to Maximian , Dioclesian's partner in the empire.	VII 582
4594	3287	288	Maximian crossing the Rhine , entered Germany , and having laid the enemies country waste all about, returned to Gaul with a prodigious booty, and a great number of captives.	VII 554
4595	3288	289	Maximian allots lands to a great number of Franks and Lates , who submitted to him, in the neighbourhood of Treves and Cambray , which was almost depopled by many battles and ravages.	VII 534
4595	3288	289	The Roman emperor Dioclesian entirely destroys the Sarmatians , or Goths , and reunites Dacia to the empire.	VII 498
4595	3288	289	Maximian sends a large fleet against Carausius , into Britain ; Carausius beats and destroys the whole fleet and army, and is by treaty settled governor and emperor in Britain .	VI 208
4597	3290	291	A war broke out between the Burgundians and Alemans , in which the first got a great part of the latter's country.	VII 582
4598	3291	292	The Persians broke into Mesopotamia , and threatened Syria : Five nations join and over-ran Asia ; and M. Aurelius Julianus revolted in Italy , and proclaimed himself emperor; and Achilleus did the same in Alexandria in Egypt . Upon this Dioclesian chose Maximinus Galerius for his successor in the east; and Maximian Constantius , surnamed Chlorus , for his successor in the west, and endowed each with the title of Cæsar , and the tribunitial and proconsular power: They put away their then wives, and Constantius married Theodora the daughter of Maximian , and Galerius the daughter of Dioclesian .	VI 209
4598	3291	292	In this and some following years, Galerius orders several large forests to be grubbed up in Lower Pannonia , and a lake to be discharged into the sea, which drained a vast tract of land, which he formed into a new province, and named after his wife Valeria . The chief cities were Mursa , Aquincum , and Valeria .	VI 211
4598	3291	292	Maximian completely defeated the Quinquegentiani in Africa , and reduced Julianus in Italy to such straits, that he killed himself. Constantius besieges and takes Gessoriacum , or Boulogne , in Gaul , and incorporates all the garrison into his troops.	VI 211
4599	3291	292	Carausius emperor in Britain is murdered by Allectus , his bosom friend and prime minister, who was proclaimed emperor in his stead, and held it three years.	VII 434
4599	3292	293	Constantius cleared Batavia of the Franks that had settled there, and transplanted them with their wives and children into other parts of the empire that were destitute of inhabitants.	VI 211
4600	3293	294	Constantius repaired and rebuilt, at an immense charge, with its former lustre of temples, baths, &c. the famous city of Augustodunum , now called Autun , in Gaul , that in 269 had been destroyed by Tetricus .	VI 211
4600	3293	294	Varanes II. dying, is succeeded by his son Varanes III. who having conquered a people called the Segani , incorporated them into his monarchy, and was called Segansaa , or Segansabab , but reigned only four months.	IV 330
4600	3293	294	Varanes III. dies, and is succeeded by Narfes , who over-run Mesopotamia , &c. but Galerius defeated him in two battles, upon which Galerius growing secure, Narfes falls unexpectedly upon him, and cut his army all to pieces, and recovers Mesopotamia , &c.	IV 331
4601	3294	295	The Carpi are entirely reduced by Galerius , and by Dioclesian transplanted into Pannonia , and other parts of the empire.	VI 212
4602	3295	296	Constantius sends Aclepiodotus the captain of his guards with a fleet and an army into Britain ; Allectus the then emperor there engages him, but is killed, and his army cut to pieces, so that Constantius again reunited Britain to the empire;

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
			empire; and returning into Gaul , transplanted great numbers of Franks to people Amiens , Beauvois , Troies , and Langres , &c.	VI 213
4602	3295	296	Dioclesian recovers Egypt from Achilleus , puts him and many others to death, and gave up Alexandria to be plundered by his soldiers for siding with him. The cities of Coptos and Busiris in Thebais were utterly ruined for joining Achilleus .	VI 213
4603	3296	297	Maximianus goes into Africa , and cuts the armies of the rebellious Moors to pieces, and forced them to deliver up their strong holds, arms, &c. and transplanted them into other countries.	VI 213
4603	3296	297	Narfes king of Persia takes all Armenia from the Romans , defeats Galerius , and cuts off his army, himself escaping with great difficulty.	VI 214
4607	3300	301	Galerius comes against Narfes again, and defeats him, takes all his baggage, and papers, his queen, sisters, children, and concubines; upon which he resigns up five provinces to have peace and his queen again; but his sisters, children, and concubines, &c. are carried to grace a triumph at Rome ; which vexed him so much, that he broke his heart and died with grief, and was succeeded by Midates , otherwise called Hormisdas the second.	IV 331
4607	3300	301	The Alemans invade Gaul , but Constantius Chlorus going against them, gained a complete victory, and cut off 60,000 of them.	VII 589
4609	3302	303	The 10th and last general persecution of the Christians breaks out the 23d of February this year, which raged ten years with a fury not to be expressed in or by words.	VI 216
4609	3302	303	One Eugenius assumed the title of emperor at Seleucia in Syria , and went to Antioch , where the townsmen rose unanimously and cut him and his companions off to a man; notwithstanding which Dioclesian ordered the magistrates of Seleucia and Antioch to be put to death, as conspirators with Eugenius .	VI 217
4611	3304	305	Dioclesian at Nicomedia , and Maximian at Milan , resign the sovereignty the 1st of May to Galerius and Constantius , who take Severus and Maximin for their Cæsars . Gaul , Italy , Africa , Spain , and Britain , are appointed to be the immediate care of Constantius : Illyricum , Pannonia , Thrace , Macedon , Greece , Asia Minor , Egypt , Judea , Syria , and all the eastern provinces, to the care and government of Galerius . Constantius yielded to Severus Italy and Africa ; and Galerius gave to Maximin Syria and Egypt .	VI 231
4611	3304	305	The whole nation of the Carpi submit to the Romans , whom Dioclesian transplants into the Roman territories.	VII 608
4612	3305	306	The Franks having passed the Rhine , and made an inroad into Gaul , while they were plundering the country Constantine fell upon them, cut great numbers of them to pieces, and took two of their kings prisoners, Ascaric and Gaisus , whom he exposed to the wild beasts at the publick shews, &c.	VII 534
4612	3305	306	The Alemans make inroads into Gaul , which so provoked Constantine , that he exposed their kings that were taken prisoners to be devoured by the wild beasts, at his publick shews.	VII 590
4612	3305	306	Constantius goes into Britain , and overcomes the Picts and Caledonians , that made continual irruptions into Britain , and dies soon after at York , viz. the 25th of July , his son Constantine being with him, who succeeded him in the empire.	VII 435
4612	3305	306	Severus reigning with intolerable cruelty in Rome and Africa , Maxentius , son of Maximian , the late resigned emperor, proclaims himself emperor, and was acknowledged by the Roman people. Maximian goes to Rome , and is a second time declared emperor by the senate, and made colleague with his son Maxentius .	VI 234
4613	3306	307	Severus is ordered to go against Maxentius by Galerius , but upon his arrival his army revolts, and goes over to Maximian their old master; upon which Severus flies towards Milan , but is pursued and besieged in Ravenna , where he surrenders to Maximian , who put him to death, and then married his daughter Fausta to Constantine , who thereupon took the name of Augustus .	VI 235
4613	3306	307	Galerius creates Licinius emperor, the 11th of November , a person of mean birth, but a very good military officer, covetous, tyrannical, cruel and vicious, so that now there were six emperors at one time of the Roman dominions.	VI 236
4614	3307	308	Maxentius the 20th of April declares himself and his son Romulus consuls, and gave himself the title of Cæsar and Emperor , refusing to acknowledge Galerius and his father Maximian who had been named for consuls.	VI 237
4614	3307	308	Sapores , or Sapor , II. is declared king while he is yet in his mother's womb.	IV 336
4615	3308	309	Maxentius having promoted his son Romulus to the consulship, who died soon after, he placed him among the gods, &c.	VI 237
4615	3308	309	Maximian pretends a second time to lay down the purple, and retires to his son-in-law Constantine in Gaul , who entertains him with all imaginable respect; but some Franks revolting, he persuades Constantine to pursue them with a small part of his army, and while he was gone Maximian declares himself emperor a 3d time at Arles , and bribes Constantine's troops to revolt. Constantine returns unexpectedly, and forces Maximian to fly to Marseilles , where he is taken prisoner and forgiven. In Africa , Alexander , lieutenant of that province, is declared emperor with the usual ceremonies at Carthage , which he supported for three years.	VI 238
4616	3309	310	Maximian teazes his daughter Fausta , the wife of Constantine , to betray her husband Constantine , by leaving her chamber door open, &c. She tells her husband, who orders one of his eunuchs to ly in his bed; Maximian comes in the dark and kills the eunuch, crying out, Constantine was dead, and he was emperor; but finding himself mistaken, when his death was put to his choice, he chose to be hanged, which was accordingly performed.	VI 239
4616	3309	310	The Franks endeavour to cross the Rhine , and so to penetrate into Gaul : Constantine attacks them, drives them back, and crossing the Rhine , destroys all before him ; and taking a vast multitude of captives, exposes them all to be devoured by the wild beasts.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4616	3309	310	The Alemans , &c. having passed the Rhine , laid the neighbouring provinces waste ; but Constantine marches against them, engages and defeats them, recovers the booty, and obliges them to repass the Rhine .	VII	533
4617	3310	311	The emperor Galerius dies in the greatest torments, about the beginning of May , by degrees, and in a measure devoured by lice ; and being persuaded this was a punishment for his cruelties to the Christians , revoked the decree, which revocation was signed by Valerius , Constantine , and Licinius , three of the emperors, and set up the 13th of April in Nicomedia , and his provinces were divided between Licinius and Maximin .	VII	59
4618	3311	312	Constantine coming to Autun , found the people heavily oppressed with taxes, first forgave what they owed, and abated 25 per cent. for the time to come.	VI	240
4618	3311	312	Maxentius sends Rufus and Zenus with an army into Africa , to depose Alexander : They engage, and Alexander's army is routed, and himself taken prisoner, and put to death, and with him all the men of birth and fortune that had sided with him, and laid Carthage in ashes : The same cruelties Maxentius committed at Rome , murdering the senators, debauching the ladies, and ruining the commonalty by the licentiousness of his soldiers, and the cruel extortions of his tax-gatherers.	VI	241
4618	3311	312	Maxentius having a desire to reign alone, quarrels with Constantine , who being inclined to favour Christianity , begs devoutly for a sign, and sees that of the cros in the heavens or sky, with this motto, In this conquer ; he makes some standards accordingly, and becomes himself, wife, and family, professors. He passes the Alps , and takes Segusum , now Susa , by storm, but won't permit it to be plundered, nor the people hurt : Then he meets, engages, and defeats Maxentius's army : All the cities between the Po and the Alps submit to him. Soon after he meets and engages Pompeianus , utterly defeats and kills him. Soon after he took Verona by storm, and made all the soldiers prisoners at discretion. Aquileia and Mutina surrendered : Then marching to Rome , Maxentius marches out against him ; they engage, and Constantine gets the victory : Maxentius flies, and crossing a bridge he had laid cros the Tiber , it broke, and he and many of his officers were drowned, the 29th of October . Constantine at the head of his army, entered Rome , carrying the head of Maxentius stuck upon a pole, where he governed with so much gentleness and justice, that the people wanted words to express their joy.	VI	241
4618	3311	312	An edict is issued in November in the names of Constantine and Licinius , putting a stop to the great persecution that had raged for ten years past against the Christians : They sent it also to Maximin , who in complaisance published it likewise all over the east.	VI	247
4619	3312	313	A Christian council for the regulating matters belonging to the church was held at Rome , in the apartment of the empress Fausta : Constantine builds a great number of Christian churches, and endows them.	VI	248
4619	3312	313	A terrible famine and plague breaks out in the east, which particularly fell in the eyes, and rendered abundance blind.	VI	248
4619	3312	313	Constantine and Licinius are consuls this year : Constantine goes from Rome to Milan , where he is met by Licinius , who marries his sister Constantia : Here they publish an edict in favour of the Christians . The Franks coming with a design to invade the Roman dominions, Constantine falls upon them, kills vast numbers, and follows them over the Rhine , laid waste their lands, burnt their habitations, and having taken a vast number captive, exposed them to be devoured by the wild beasts in the shews then exhibited to please the people. Africa having submitted, he grants great privileges to the Christians among them.	VI	250
4619	3312	313	Constantine assembles a council of Christian bishops this year at Rome , to consider about the doctrine and persons of Donatists .	VI	251
4619	3312	313	Maximin displeased with the good understanding between Licinius and Constantine , comes against Licinius , and takes Byzantium , and then Heraclea by storm. Licinius engages him, being told in a dream he should conquer if he became a Christian : Molt of Maximin's troops were cut to pieces, and the rest came over to Licinius . Maximin made his escape in the habit of a slave. Licinius going to Nicomedia , ordered solemn thanks to be given to the true God, and published the decree made by himself and Constantine in favour of the Christians : Then he pursued Maximin , who poisoned himself, which occasioned him to die a lingering, painful, miserable death, about the middle of August ; and so Licinius became master of all the east. Maximin was declared a public enemy, his statues pulled down, his inscriptions erased, his wife drowned in the Oron-tes , his children and relations publicly executed, and likewise his ministers and favourites put to death : The sons of Galerius and Severus were also both put to death.	VI	252
4620	3313	314	Valeria , the widow of Galerius and daughter of Dioclesian , with her mother Prisca , being discovered at Theffalonica , were seized, executed, and thrown into the sea, by order of Licinius .	VI	253
4620	3313	314	Constantine publishes an edict, declaring all those free that Maxentius had condemned to slavery, ordering those who held them in captivity to set them free, upon the severest penalties.	VI	253
4620	3313	314	Constantine goes to Arles , and holds a Christian council of all the bishops in the west, to suppress the Donatists .	VI	253
4620	3313	314	Licinius and Constantine quarrel, and engage near Cibalæ in Pannonia , where Constantine kills him 20,000 men, and Licinius flies to Sirmium , and from thence goes with his wife, children, and treasures into Dacia , where he raised Valens ,	VI	254

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			one of his officers, to the dignity of Cæsar . Constantine pursues him into Thrace ; they engage upon the plains of Mardia , but neither side gaining the advantage, they conclude a peace, upon the condition that Valens should be deposed, and that Syria , Egypt , Lybia , Asia , Thrace , Mæsia , and the Lesser Scythia should remain in the possession of Licinius ; but Illyricum , Dardania , Macedon , Greece , and Mæsia (now Servia) should be ceded to Constantine .	VI	255
4621	3314	315	Constantine and Licinius are consuls; Constantine abolishes the punishment of crucifixion; likewise he orders the receivers of his revenue to receive and educate all such children whose parents could not by reason of poverty bring them up: This law was engraved in brass, and hung up publicly in all the cities of Italy : He likewise forbids the Jews molesting those among them who should profess Christianity , and strictly forbids any not born so to become Jews .	VI	255
4622	3315	316	The empress Fausa is delivered of a son, the 13th of August , at Arles in Gaul . This year Constantine made a law, that all persons of whatever rank guilty of rapes, extortions, &c. should be tried by the governors of the provinces where they lived, and executed without appealing to Rome .	VI	255
4623	3316	317	The emperors Licinius and Constantine create Crispus and Constantine , the sons of the emperor Constantine , and Licinius , the son of the emperor Licinius by Constantia sister of Constantine , Cæsars .	VI	255
4623	3316	317	August 7 . Constantius , son of the emperor Constantine , by Fausa the sister of Maxentius , was born in the city of Sirmium in Illyricum .	VI	256
4624	3317	318	Constantine revives the old Roman law against parricides, comprehending therein not only the murder of a father or mother, but also of a son.	VI	256
4626	3319	320	Constantine and his son Constantius are consuls, and abrogate the Papian and all other laws against celibacy: He forbids all married men to keep concubines, and orders judges to dispatch the causes of criminals, and jaylors to use their prisoners well, upon pain of death. His son Crispus gains a victory over the Franks , and concluding a peace with them, returns to his father.	VI	256
4627	3320	321	Crispus and Constantine , the emperor's sons, are consuls. The emperor forbids all sorts of work to be done on Sundays , and ordered Friday to be kept holy.	VI	256
4627	3320	321	The Goths again invade the empire, and are overcome by the emperor Constantine .	VII	499
4628	3321	322	Constantine several times defeats the Sarmatians , kills their king Tausmodes , and takes vast numbers captive.	VI	257
4629	3322	323	Constantine being busy at Thessalonica in building a port, the Goths enter Thrace and Mæsia , and commit dreadful ravages: Constantine goes against them, overthrows them with great slaughter, and pursues them into the dominions of Licinius ; which he resents so far, that both parties prepare for war, Constantine with 130,000 men and 2200 vessels; Licinius had 115,000 men and 350 galleys: They came to an engagement on the 3d of July near Adrianople , on the banks of the Hebrus , where Licinius had 33,000 men killed on the spot. Licinius with a small army flies to Byzantium , and the rest submit to Constantine , who pursued Licinius , and besieges him in Byzantium , from whence he withdrew to Chalcedon . Crispus engages Abantus , admiral of Licinius 's fleet, and utterly defeated him, killing him 5000 men, and taking and destroying 130 ships, Abantus narrowly escaping. Constantine leaves Byzantium , and follows Licinius to Chalcedon , where they conclude a peace, which Licinius presently breaks: Constantine goes against him again, engages, and kill him 25,000 men; Licinius flies to Nicomedia ; Byzantium and Chalcedon submit to Constantine , who pursues Licinius , and besieges him in Nicomedia : Constantia , sister of Constantine , begs her husband's life, who yields up the sovereignty, and is soon after strangled by Constantine 's orders.	VI	258
4630	3323	324	Constantine purges the east as fast as possible of idolatry and heathenism, and promoted Christianity with all his might.	VI	260
4631	3324	325	Constantine assembles the famous council at Nice , and assisted in it personally, where Arius , Eusebius of Nicomedia , Theognis of Nice , &c. were condemned to banishment.	VI	260
4631	3324	325	On the 25th of July Constantine celebrated the 20th year of his reign with extraordinary pomp, invited all the bishops that composed the council of Nice to an entertainment in his palace, and gave them large presents, distributed great sums to the poor, &c.	VI	260
4632	3325	326	Constantine being at Rome , is ill-treated for his introducing Christianity , which he so resented, that he could never be prevailed upon to go there again.	VI	261
4632	3325	326	The empress Fausa envying Crispus , Constantine 's eldest son by his former wife, accuses him with soliciting her to his bed, and aspiring at the empire, which so enraged his father, that he caused him to be put to death without being heard. Licinius , the son of the late emperor Licinius , was also put to death. Fausa was soon after discovered of falsely accusing Crispus , and of really prostituting herself with mean persons; for which Constantine ordered her to be suffocated in the steam of a hot bath.	VI	261
4633	3326	327	The emperor Constantine in honour of his mother Helena , called the village of Depraum in Bythinia Helenopolis , and endowed it with all the privileges of a royal city. About this time he is said to discover the sepulchre and cross of our saviour. He also called a city in Palestine by the same name.	VI	262
4635	3328	329	On the 26th of September Constantine began to build the famous city of Constantinople ; and recalled from banishment the two Arian bishops, Eusebius and Theognis .	VI	262
4636	3329	330	Constantine dedicates his new city of Constantinople the 11th of May to the god of martyrs, in which he built an incredible number of churches, erected crosses in all the squares and publick places, a most sumptuous palace, and other publick buildings, appointing a senate, and all other privileges as at Rome , &c.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page.
			The solemnity lasted 40 days, during all which time he ordered an immense quantity of provisions to be daily distributed to the populace, and fixed his residence here, never returning to Rome again, which by degrees brought on the destruction of the empire.	VI	263
4638	3331	332	The Sarmatians notwithstanding the great assistance they had received from Constantine , as soon as he was gone, invade and ravage Mæsia and Thrace ; but Constantine returns suddenly, and cutting great numbers of them to pieces, forces the rest to accept of such terms as he thought fit to give them.	VI	264
4638	3331	332	The Goths again invade the empire, and are again beat by Constantine , who kills 100,000 of their men.	VII	499
4639	3332	333	Constantine creates his youngest son Constans Cæsar . Syria , Cilicia , and Thrace are grievously afflicted with the plague and famine, which sweep off great numbers of the people, a bushel of wheat being sold for 400 pieces of silver. Constantine sent to the bishop of Antioch 30,000 bushels of wheat, and a prodigious quantity of corn, oil, &c. to the other churches, to be divided among the widows, orphans, ecclesiastics, &c.	VI	265
4640	3333	334	The Sarmatians being sore oppressed by their enemies the Goths , arm all their slaves, by whose assistance they obtain a complete victory: But the slaves combining together, fall upon their masters, overcome them, and drive them out of their country, and seize it for themselves; upon which the emperor Constantine receives 300,000 of them, and incorporates some of them among his troops, and gave lands to others in divers distant places.	VII	609
4641	3334	335	Constantine celebrates the thirtieth year of his reign on the 25th of July , with extraordinary magnificence, in Constantinople , and assembles a council at Tyre , and another at Jerusalem , to reconcile the disturbances in the church: That at Tyre condemned and deposed Athanasius , bishop of Alexandria ; and that at Jerusalem admitted Arian and his followers to the communion of the church. Constantine banished Athanasius , and three other bishops, who opposed Arianism , he himself being a great favourer of it.	VI	265
4641	3334	335	Constantine gives Gaul , Spain , and Britain to his eldest son; Asia , Syria , and Egypt to Constantius his second son; Illyricum , Italy , and Africa to Constans his youngest son; Thrace , Macedon , and Achaia , to his nephew Dalmatius ; and to his nephew king Annibalianus , Armenia minor , Pontus and Cappadocia , with the city of Cæsarea for his capital.	VI	266
4641	3334	335	One Calocerius proclaims himself emperor in Cyprus , and makes himself master of the whole island; but Dalmatius , Constantine's general, reduces the island to its duty, takes Calocerius prisoner, and condemns him to be burnt alive at Tarus in Cilicia .	VI	266
4642	3335	336	The famous heresiarch Arrius dies, and soon after Alexander bishop of Constantinople ; to whom Paul succeeds, but was afterwards banished by Constantine into Pontus . This year Constantius , the emperor's second son, marries his cousin, daughter of Julius Constantius , his father's brother.	VI	266
4643	3336	337	Sapor king of Persia sends Constantine a memorial, and demands several provinces. Both sides provide for war; many battles were fought with various success, but at Singara Sapor lost his son, himself was wounded, and forced to retire with all his forces.	IV	333
4643	3336	337	The emperor Constantine falls ill, and is clothed in white, and baptized by Eusebius bishop of Nicomedia , and would not afterward so much as see his purple robes, but spent his time in religious discourses with the bishops, or in pious meditations, &c. by himself before he died. He ordered Athanasius to be recalled from banishment, bequeathed revenues to the cities of Rome and Constantinople , left his will in the hands of Arian , an ecclesiastic, to deliver to his son Constantius , and expired on Whitsunday the 22d of May , in the castle of Achyrona near Helenopolis in Bythnia , aged 63 years, two months, and 25 days, having reigned 32 years, 9 months, and 27 days, universally lamented by all degrees of people: His body, and purple robes, and diadem were put into a gold coffin, and carried to Constantinople .	VI	267
4643	3336	337	Notwithstanding Constantine's division of the empire between his three sons and two cousins, while living, and confirmation of it by his last will, all the soldiers and the senate of Rome unanimously proclaim the three sons only emperors, and leave out the two cousins, Dalmatius Cæsar and Annibalianus king of Pontus . The soldiers fly to arms, (by the instigation of Constantius , as 'tis supposed) and cut in pieces Julius Constantius , brother to the deceased emperor, Dalmatius Cæsar and Annibalianus , his two sons, Optatus , who had married Anastasia sister to the late emperor, five of his nephews, and most of his ministers, and so reduced his numerous family to his three sons and two nephews, Gallus and Julian .	VI	275
4643	3336	337	One Antoninus , a Roman officer of great credit, revolted to Sapor king of Persia , who received him with great honour, and by his advice besieges Amida , which after attacking 73 days, and losing 30,000 men, he took by storm; he hanged the officers, and sent the men into slavery. Then he goes into Mesopotamia , Singara , and demolishes it, &c.	IV	334
4644	3337	338	The three brothers emperors meet in Pannonia , where they agree and divide the provinces allotted to Dalmatius and Annibalianus by the late emperor, among them.	VI	275
4645	3338	339	March 31 a law is published in the name of the three emperors, forbidding upon pain of death marriages between uncles and nieces, which had before been authorized by the senate, in favour of Claudius and Agrippina .	VI	276
4646	3339	340	Constantine desiring all or part of Italy , which his brother Constans refusing, he enters with a great army, and takes several places. Constans comes against him, draws him into an ambuscade, near Aquileia , and cuts both him and his army to

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			pieces. Upon this the other brother Constantius yields all Constantine's dominions to Constans , thereby making him emperor of all the west.	VI	276
4647	3340	341	Many cities in the east were overturned by a violent and dreadful earthquake. This year a law was published in the name of the two emperors, forbidding all idolatrous worship. Constans ordered several temples to be demolished, with the celebrated altar of victory in the senate at Rome . Constantius rebuilt the city of Amida upon the Tigris in Mesopotamia .	VI	277
4647	3340	341	The Franks make an irruption into Gaul , and ravage the country every where, but are forced out by Constans .	VII	555
4649	3342	343	August 27, Constantius declares ecclesiastics and their domestics exempt from all new impositions; and such whose poverty obliged them to work for a livelihood were freed from all customs.	VI	277
4650	3343	344	A violent earthquake intirely overthrew all the buildings, and swallowed up all the people of Neocesarea in Pontus , except the church and bishop's house and family.	VI	277
4651	3344	345	The city of Duras in Greece , with all its inhabitants, was swallowed up by an earthquake, and twelve cities in Campania were overturned.	VI	277
4653	3346	347	The council of Sardica was held, at which Athanasius and Osius assisted. A law was made this year that confirmed great privileges to the bishops and clergy, and to their wives, widows, children, and domestics. Constantius builds a harbour at Seleucia , at an immense charge; and rebuilt the cities of Seleucia in Syria , and Antardus in Poenicia .	VI	277
4654	3347	348	Constans writes to his brother Constantius , to acquaint him, that unless he recalled from banishment those orthodox bishops he had deprived of their sees, he would restore them by force of arms; upon which Constantius recalled them. Constans sends Macarius and Paulus into Africa , with large sums to relieve the poor, and to endeavour to reconcile the Donatists to the church, which they very happily effected, to the great joy of both parties.	VI	278
4654	3347	348	The Persians having posted themselves in the neighbourhood of Singarus , a city of Mesopotamia , and fortified themselves in their camp; the Romans forced it, after great opposition, cut great numbers of the Persians to pieces, and forced the rest to fly, or took them prisoners, among whom was Sapor's son, whom they put to death, having first beat him with rods, and took the enemies camp, baggage and treasures.	VI	278
4655	3348	349	A terrible earthquake overturned a great part of the city of Berytus , which so frightened all those that had not embraced Christianity , that they came and were baptized.	VI	278
4656	3349	350	The Persians besiege Nisibis a third time, with a vast army and a great number of military engines: It was defended with all imaginable bravery by Lucilianus , father-in-law to Jovian , afterwards emperor; but the soldiers and people trusted more to the prayers of their bishop James , than in their own valour. The Persians stopped the river Mygdonus that run through the city, and laid the country round it under water, and at last stopping the river with a great wall, which by a mighty flush suddenly broke it down, and by the violence of the sudden gush of water, broke the city walls down, for the space of 100 cubits; but it was so well defended, that Sapor after losing 20,000 men, many elephants, engines, &c. was forced to raise the siege, and in the transport of his rage put many of his officers and great men to death, for advising him to this war.	VI	279
4656	3349	350	Magnentius son of Magnus , a German , commander of some troops on the Rhine , conspires with Marcellinus , receiver of the revenues in Gaul : They invite all the officers to a feast in the city of Autun , where Magnentius puts on the purple, and is saluted the 18th of January with the title of Augustus . He immediately seized the imperial palace in Autun , and distributed what money he found there among the populace, and sends one Gaijo (a principal commander in the army) to murder Constans , who pursued and overtook him at Helena , a small village at the foot of the Pyrennees , and killed him there with many wounds, in the tenth year of his reign, a prince extremely devoted to promote the catholick faith, and suppress heresies, &c.	VI	281
4656	3349	350	Before the death of Constans was published, Magnentius sent and murdered all such officers as he thought attached to the deceased prince's interest. Magnentius soon made himself master of all the countries beyond the Alps , Italy , Sicily , and Africa . Veterania , general of the foot in Pannonia , caused himself to be saluted Augustus at Sirmium , the first of May ; Constantius is said to confirm the title of emperor to him, and to send him the diadem. A third pretender starts up, one Flavius Popilius Nepotianus , son of Eutropia sister to Constantine the Great , who having assembled a number of gladiators, and persons of desperate fortunes, assumes the purple, and on the 3d of June presents himself before the gates of Rome . Anicetus , who commanded there for Magnentius , goes out against him: Nepotianus defeats him, and soon after takes the city, and filled it with blood and slaughter. Maxentius sends his chief favourite Marcellinus against him: A bloody battle ensues, in which Nepotianus was killed, after a reign of 28 days. Marcellinus carries his head through all the cities of Rome upon a spear, and put all those to death who had declared for him, and commanded a general massacre of all those who were any ways related to Constantine .	VI	281
4656	3349	350	Maxentius and Veterania agree to oppose Constantius , and send deputies to him to treat of peace, which he refuses, but upon his arrival at Sardica makes a separate peace with Veterania , who joins him against Maxentius ; but the soldiers deposed Veterania the 25th of December , who spent the remainder of his life in acts of devotion at Prusia-Bythinia , where Constantius made him an allowance suitable to his dignity.	VI	281

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1053)	Vol.	Pag.
4657	3350	351	Constantius marries his sister Constantina to his cousin Gallus , creates him Cæsar , allots him all the east, and Thrace and Constantinople , and sent him to Antioch to watch the Persians .	VI	282
4657	3350	351	Constantius stirs up the Franks and Saxons to attack Maxentius in Gaul , and sends them large sums of money and great quantities of arms for that purpose. Maxentius gives the title of Cæsar to his brother Decentius , and sends him into Gaul , where he engages the Barbarians , but is overthrown, and the country reduced to a deplorable condition.	VI	283
4657	3350	351	Constantius and Maxentius have divers encounters with various success. Sylvanus , with a large body of troops under his command, revolts to Constantius . Maxentius attacks and takes Scifa by assault, and levelled it, laid the whole country waste along the Save , and then besieged Mursa , whither Constantius went and attacked him, cut off the greatest part of his army, and took and plundered his camp; but Magnentius got off, and retired into Italy .	VI	235
4658	3351	352	Constantius publishes an edict, empowering eunuchs to make wills: Then he goes into Italy , and masters all Aquileia , and goes into Pavia , where Magnentius obtained a victory over him, but soon after was obliged to surrender all the country bordering on the Po to Constantius , being deserted by his men in troops, who delivered up the places they garrisoned. Magnentius goes to Rome , and finding the people generally inclined to favour Constantius , put vast numbers of them to death, and then retired into Gaul , so that Constantius became master of Rome and all Italy by the beginning of November , and sent a powerful fleet to Africa and Carthage , which immediately submitted, as did Sicily and Spain , and Treves , and several other cities in Gaul . Magnentius offers to resign, but is refused an answer.	VI	286
4658	3351	352	Magnentius sends assassins into the east to murder Gallus Cæsar , who are discovered and put to death. The Jews in Palestine rise in the night, and cutting the throats of the soldiers, set up one Patricius for their prince.	VI	286
4659	3352	353	Constantius marries Eusebia , a native of Thessalonica , a lady highly commended for her chastity, and for the great care she took of the education of her children after her husband's decease: The emperor had so great an esteem for her, that in honour of her he made a new diocese, comprehending Bythinia , &c. and called it Pietas , the import of the word Eusebia .	VI	286
4659	3352	353	Constantius engages Maxentius near Mons Seleucus in Gaul , and routs his army, who flies to Lions , where being apprized his soldiers intended to deliver him up, first with his own hand murdered his mother, his brother Desiderius , and many of his friends and relations, and then himself. Decentius Cæsar strangles himself, and Constantius pardons all the rest.	VI	288
4659	3352	353	Paulus Catena , a noted informer, is sent into Britain by Constantius , to make an inquiry after all those who had sided with Maxentius , and commits many cruelties by condemning the bravest and most innocent men, purposely to have a colourable pretence of sequestering their estates and confiscating their effects.	IV	435
4659	3352	353	Constantius summoned a council at Arles , where he shewed himself a great enemy to the orthodox, and particularly Athanasius and Paulinus . Gaul was terribly ravaged by the Barbarians and disbanded soldiers of Maxentius . At Rome the populace rose, and committed great disorders upon the account of the scarcity of provisions. In Asia the Issarian robbers over-ran Lycaonia and Pamphilia , and besieged Seleucia , the capital of Issauria . The Saracens committed dreadful ravages in Mesopotamia ; and Gallus governed the east with intolerable pride and cruelty.	VI	289
4660	3353	354	Constantius sends one Domitian in the quality of præfect of the east, whom Gallus murdered, with Montius , then quæstor, and many others at Antioch , and threw their bodies into the Orontes .	VI	291
4660	3353	354	Gallus Cæsar having been invited into Italy by Constantius , goes, and upon his arrival at Petavium in Noricum , is arrested and carried to Flanona in Dalmatia , where he was put to death.	VI	293
4661	3354	355	The emperor Constantius publishes a law, forbidding the marriage of a brother or sister-in-law, and declaring the children of such marriages illegitimate; and another, ordaining bishops to be judged by bishops, and not by the civil magistrates. He summoned a council at Milan , and banished Liberius , bishop of Rome , into Thrace .	VI	294
4661	3354	355	Constantius gives the title of Cæsar to his cousin Julian , brother to Gallus , and makes him governor of Gaul , and marries him to his sister Helena , but sets spies over him.	VI	296
4661	3354	355	The Alemans attempted to break into Italy ; the emperor Constantius sends Arbetio with the flower of his army against them, who falling into an ambuscade, was defeated with great loss; but some of his officers engaging them a few days after, puts them to flight.	VII	591
4661	3354	355	The Franks joining with the Alemans and Saxons , cross the Rhine , take and pillage above 40 cities on the banks of that river, lay waste the neighbouring provinces, and carry off a prodigious number of captives and immense booty.	VII	556
4661	3354	355	The Quadians break into Pannonia and Mæsia , and having pillaged both provinces, return with immense booty unmolested.	VII	603
4662	3355	356	Constantius gains so many advantages over the Germans that they sue for peace, which he grants them. The empress Eusebia visits Rome , and is received with all imaginable respect. The emperor, to shew his zeal for Arrianism , drives Athanasius from his seat at Alexandria , and puts Gorgius an Arrian in his place. This year he passed a law, condemning those to death who should sacrifice to, or worship idols; and sentenced many persons for being convicted of consulting the magicians, and published a law to have all magicians devoured by wild beasts.	VI	299

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4662	3355	356	Constantius for the first time, with his wife Eusebia and his sister Helena , visit Rome , which he enters in a gilt chariot adorned with precious stones, attended by the senate and whole nobility : During his stay here he is presented by several cities with gold crowns of an extraordinary weight.	VI	299
4663	3356	357	Julian with 13,000 men marches against the Germans , consisting of 35,000, headed by seven kings, ten princes, and many great lords : He engages them near Strasbourg , put them to flight, and pursued them, and killed 8000 with the loss of only 247 men, and many of the Germans were drowned in the Rhine ; by which victory Gaul was freed from the Barbarians .	VI	301
4663	3356	357	Constantius enacted a law dated the 3d of July , confiscating the effects of all those who should renounce the Christian , and embrace the Jewish religion ; and by another, he obliged all senators to reside in or near Rome ; and by a third he exempts all merchandizing ecclesiastics, their wives, children, and domestics, from taxes.	VI	302
4664	3357	358	NarSES , ambassador from Sapor king of Persia , comes with a letter, and presents it to the emperor, demanding those countries the Romans had taken from the Persians , calling himself King of Kings , Brother of the Sun and Moon , &c. The emperor sends ambassadors to Sapor to soften him, but he remains inflexible.	VI	303
4664	3357	358	August 28. a most dreadful earthquake was felt in Asia , Pontus , and Macedon , which greatly damaged 150 cities, and utterly ruined Nicomedia by overturning all the houses at once, and buried all its inhabitants under its ruins.	VI	304
4664	3357	358	Constantius publishes a law, declaring all magicians, astrologers, augurs, aruspices, and pretenders to the art of divination, enemies to mankind : and if any were found in the prince's court, they should be adjudged guilty of high-treason.	VI	304
4664	3357	358	The Quadians , &c. laid waste great part of Pannonia and Mesfia ; but Constantius marching against them, they repass the Danube and return home, and the emperor after them, who besieging them, lays waste their country ; they sue for peace, which is granted upon their setting at liberty their prisoners, and pledging hostages for their good behaviour.	VII	603
4664	3357	358	The emperor Constantius having driven out the Limigantes , or slaves, that had seized upon the Sarmatians country, reinstates the Sarmatians .	VII	610
4665	3358	359	Eusebius and Hypatius , brothers to the empress Eusebia , are consuls. Julian obliges several German nations to quit Gaul , and sue for peace.	VI	305
4665	3358	359	Constantius honours Constantinople with a præfect or governor, and makes Honoratus the first præfect.	VI	306
4665	3358	359	Julian passing the Rhine , unexpectedly advanced to the most distant parts of the country of the Alemans and Burgundians , destroying all with fire and sword ; whereupon Macrianus and Hariobaldus , two of their kings, sue for peace, &c.	VII	592
4666	3359	360	Sapor entering Macedonia , summons the Roman and Busan , two strong forts, and the Romans that garrisoned them surrendered : Then he besieged Amida , which after a long and gallant defence was taken and razed, the chief officers crucified, and the soldiers and inhabitants put to the sword or carried into captivity.	VI	327
4666	3359	360	Constantius determining to have a very great army to go against Sapor king of Persia , sends into Britain and Gaul , to draught off the flower of those troops : When assembled at Paris , they refused to go, and proclaim Julian emperor, which he declining, they threaten him with death if he does not immediately comply : He writes to the emperor an account of what had happened, and desires him to confirm his title, which he refuses. Julian goes against the Athuarii , (inhabitants of Cleves and Munster) laid their country waste, and cut many of them to pieces, and forced them to submit to such laws as he thought fit. His wife Helena , sister of Constantius , dies.	VI	312
4667	3360	361	Julian pretends a great respect for the Christians , though he had privately abjured that religion, and sacrificed to the old Roman gods. He goes against the Alemans , cuts great numbers of them to pieces, and forced the rest to accept his terms. Then he made himself master of all Italy and Sicily , which without striking a blow submitted to him.	VI	314
4667	3360	361	Constantius returns from the east to go against Julian , comes to Mopsucrene on the borders of Cilicia , where he is taken so very ill, that he can go no further, and dies the 3d of November , in the 45th year of his age, suspected to be poisoned by means of Julian : Just before he died he was baptized by Euzoius , an Arian bishop, he being a great favourer of that sect : Upon which Julian enters Constantinople the 11th of December following, where he ordered Constantius to be buried in the church of the apostles, with the utmost solemnity, and is himself proclaimed emperor by the senate, &c.	VI	314
4667	3360	361	Just before the death of Constantius , Julian renounced the Christian religion in Illyricum , opened the temples of the gods, offered sacrifices according to the ancient rites, and exhorted all persons to follow his example.	VI	324
4667	3360	361	Julian erects a court of justice at Chalcedon , to enquire into the conduct of the ministers of the late emperor, where many of them are condemned and executed, some very justly and others very wrongfully. He made a great reformation of officers and offices, and eased the people very much of their taxes. The cities send their congratulations to him, and crowns of gold.	VI	326
4668	3361	362	Julian enriches the metropolis of Constantinople , the place of his nativity, with many privileges ; made a large harbour to shelter the ships from the south wind, built a stately library and porch, and goes into the east, orders large sums for the rebuilding Nicomedia , enriched the temple of Cybele at Pessinus with offerings of great value, and appointed Calixenus priests of the temple. Arriving at the palace in Ancyra , he bestowed large gifts upon the pagan priests, and so went to Antioch , where he administered justice impartially.	VI	327

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4668	3361	362	Dreadful earthquakes were felt in every province ; most of the cities of Palestine , Lybia , Sicily , and Greece , were overturned ; Nice was utterly ruined, and Constantinople greatly damaged. The temples of Apollo at Rome and Daphne , were consumed by fire. The sea broke in, and destroyed whole cities with their inhabitants. At Alexandria the sea laid several towns and villages under water, and drowned the people. A general drought produced a famine, and that was followed by a dreadful plague.	VI	328
4669	3362	363	Julian entering upon his fourth consulship the 1st of January , visited the temple of Jupiter , performing the heathenish sacrifices for the safety of the empire, which had now been long discontinued.	VI	332
4669	3362	363	Sapor king of Persia being defeated, proposes peace to Julian , who rejects it ; but being misled by false guides, is reduced to great straits, but attacked the Persians , defeat them in several encounters, and at last in a general battle routs them with great slaughter ; but being in great distress for want of provisions, decamps, and is continually harraßed by the enemy ; and in one of these sudden onsets, hastening to repulse the enemy without his armour, Julian is wounded, carried to his tent, and dies, the 26th of June , in the 32d year of his age. The Christians received the account of his death with inexpressible joy, and the Pagans with as great grief. The officers of the army chose Jovian to succeed him, who concluded a thirty years peace with the Persians .	VI	341
4669	3362	363	Jovian arriving at Antioch , repeals all Julian's laws made against the Christians , greatly espoused the orthodox cause, and invited Athanasius to court, and received him very graciously, after which he returned to his bishoprick.	VI	344
4670	3363	364	Jovian arriving at Ancyra , the metropolis of Galatia , enters his first consulship, taking his son, then an infant, for his colleague. Going towards Constantinople , he is met at Dadasta by Themistius and others from the senate, to conduct him thither, but was found dead in his bed the 16th or 17th of February , having reigned seven months and 20 days. His body was carried to Constantinople , and buried in the church of the apostles, with the usual solemnity.	VI	345
4670	3363	364	After nine or ten days interregnum, Valentinian (son of Gratianus , count of Africa , a Pannonian ,) was chose and proclaimed emperor by the army, the 26th of February , at Nice , the metropolis of Bythinia : He was a zealous orthodox Christian , and going to Constantinople , he proclaimed his brother Valens colleague with him in the empire the 28th March following, and about 18th of June following parted the empire at Mediana in Dacia , assigning Asia , Egypt , and Thrace to Valens , and retaining Illyricum , Gaul , Spain , Italy , Britain , and Africa to himself ; and then they parted, Valentinian for Milan , and Valens for Constantinople .	VI	258
4670	3363	364	The Goths breaking into Thrace , the emperor Valens sends them a large sum of money, upon which they return home.	VII	500
4671	3364	365	The Goths breaking into the empire under pretence of siding with Procopius , who had caused himself to be proclaimed emperor, are defeated, and obliged to lay down their arms, and yield themselves prisoners.	VII	500
4671	3364	365	A dreadful earthquake happens at Cæsarea in Cappadocia , which overturned several cities in Sicily , Palestine , and Crete . Procopius , a relation of the late emperor Julian , revolts, and being joined by a discarded eunuch of Valens possessed of great wealth, gained over the officers and soldiers, was proclaimed Augustus at Constantinople , and carried to the imperial palace, where he was acknowledged by the people, and soon after gained over a party of Valens's men that were sent against him, and seized Nice and Chalcedon , and took Cyzicus . Elated with this success, Procopius grew proud and tyrannical.	VI	367
4672	3365	366	The empress Albia Dominica , wife of Valens , the 18th of January was delivered of a son called Valentinian , and surnamed Galata , for being born in Galatia .	VI	369
4672	3365	366	Valens and Procopius come to a battle at Nicolia , a city of Phrygia , in which many of Procopius's men deserting him, he fled, but was seized and carried to Valens , and that emperor struck off his head the 27th of June , after he had born the title of emperor eight months, and sent it to his colleague Valentinian in Gaul : The two persons that seized and delivered him up were also put to death.	VI	368
4672	3365	366	Marcellus governor of Nice seizes Chalcedon , and proclaims himself emperor ; but is seized, loaded with chains, and he and his accomplices next day tortured to death.	VI	369
4672	3365	366	The Alemans having passed the Rhine upon the ice, are attacked by the Romans , whom they intirely defeat, and take the standards of the Batauvians and Heruli : But Jovinus going against them, overthrew them three several times with great slaughter, and took their kings and their camp, so that very few escaped ; and the emperor fortified both sides of the banks of the Rhine , to prevent a surprize.	VII	593
4673	3366	367	The emperor Valentinian being very ill at Rheims , great contests arise about who should be his successor ; but he recovering names his son Gratian for his colleague at the city of Amiens , the 24th of August , in the ninth year of his age.	VI	352
4673	3366	367	The emperor Valens , by persuasion of his empress, is baptized by Eudaxius , the Arrian bishop of Constantinople , who obliged him to swear to treat as enemies all those who opposed that doctrine.	VI	370
4673	3366	367	The Picts , Scots , Attacots , Saxons , &c. breaking into the Roman provinces of Britain , committed great devastations, killed Nectaridus , Sewerus , and Jovinus , but are repulsed, and vast numbers of them cut off, and all of them driven out by Theodosius , and peace again restored to the inhabitants, who also took one

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			Valens, or Valentinian, who had proclaimed himself emperor, and delivered him up to the civil magistrate.	VI	371
4673	3366	367	The Alemans unexpectedly pass the Rhine , take and plunder Mentz , and commit dreadful ravages in the neighbouring provinces, under the conduct of Rbando , one of their princes.	VII	593
4673	3366	367	The emperor Valens passing the Danube , ravages the country of the Goths .	VII	501
4674	3367	368	A most dreadful earthquake utterly ruined Nice , and left but two houses standing in Germa , a city in the Hellepont .	VI	371
4674	3367	368	The emperor Valentinian goes against the Allemans into their own country, and after an obstinate battle near Selicinium (now Sultz) on the Neckar , puts them to flight, and kills most of them.	VI	354
4675	3368	369	The emperor Valentinian fortifies the Rhine , from its rise in Rhetia to its mouth, with a vast number of castles on both sides, and particularly one at the confluence of the Rhine and Neckar , where the city of Manheim now stands. The Germans solicit the emperor to forbear, and upon his refusal fall upon the soldiers and workmen, and kill them. This year the emperor caused several senators, governors of provinces, judges, &c. to be put to death, for receiving bribes and oppressing the people.	VI	355
4675	3368	369	Complaint being made to the emperor Valentinian , by a widow whose estate Rbodanus the eunuch had unjustly seized, he was immediately seized, and burnt alive in the circus.	VI	355
4675	3368	369	The Maratacuprians near Afamea in Syria turn robbers, and commit great disorders; Valens sends some soldiers against them, who kill them all, both old and young.	VI	371
4675	3368	369	Valens going into Lesser Scythia , passed the Danube at Novidunum , and after having overcome the Goths in several encounters, they sue for peace, which he readily grants.	VII	502
4676	3369	370	The emperor Valentinian built a bridge over the Tiber , then called the bridge of Gratian , afterwards the bridge Cestius , at present Ponto di S. Bartholomeo .	VI	355
4676	3369	370	A terrible famine forced most of the inhabitants of Phrygia to fly out of the country into other places.	VI	372
4676	3369	370	The Saxons break into the empire, and defeat count Naunienus , and commit dreadful ravages; but Severus reduces them to beg a peace, which he grants them, but as they were returning home fell upon them, and cut them all off.	VI	356
4676	3369	370	Eudoxius the Arrian bishop of Alexandria dies; the Arrians , with Valens approbation, put Demophilis into that see: The orthodox choose Evagrius , but the emperor sends a party of soldiers to drive him out. The Arrians persecute the catholics; they send 80 ecclesiastics to Valens ; but he, instead of redressing them, put them all to death.	VI	572
4676	3369	370	Ermenic , king of the Ostrogoths , falls upon the Heruli , conquers and makes them his tributaries.	VII	499
4677	3370	371	Valentinian passes two laws, greatly encouraging Paganism and its professors.	VI	357
4677	3370	371	Valentinian Galata , the only son of Valens , being sick, he applies to St. Basil for his prayers, who promised to restore the child to health if he would let him be baptized by an orthodox bishop, which Valerius refusing, and being baptized by the Arrians , he died immediately.	VI	372
4678	3371	372	Firmus , a Moorish prince, revolts from the Romans , and is crowned king, ravages Africa and Mauritania , making himself master of Casarea (now Alger) where he seized a large sum of money.	VI	359
4678	3371	372	Sapor king of Persia strives to gain over the grandees of Armenia , and invites Arfaces their king to a banquet, where he seized him and put out his eyes, and sent him in chains to a castle called Agabana , where he was murdered, and his country ruined.	VI	372
4679	3372	373	Theodosius goes against Firmus (king of the Moors ;) Firmus offers to submit; Theodosius requires hostages; Firmus delays the performance, and Theodosius falls upon Mascezel , &c. his allies, and defeated them with great slaughter; Firmus again pretends to submit, but his ally Mascezel ventures a second battle, and is again defeated; and then Firmus sends the hostages, and a peace is concluded: But Firmus breaking out again, is at last so straitened, that he strangled himself to prevent falling into the hands of the Romans .	VI	361
4679	3372	373	Sapor king of Persia invades the Roman dominions in the east, but is overthrown by Trajan , a Roman general, and Vadomarius , formerly king of the Allemans .	VI	374
4680	3373	374	Many are taken up at Antioch , for practising magic in order to know the name of the successor of Valens : Theodorus his second secretary was named and accused and convicted of treasonable and illegal practices to take away the emperor's life, for which he was put to death, and vast numbers of innocent people racked, murdered, and banished, as his aiders and abettors.	VI	474
4680	3373	374	Gabinus king of the Quadi , in the west, and Paras king of Armenia , in the east, are both treacherously murdered by the Romans .	VI	376
4680	3373	374	Macrinus king of the Alemans is killed in an ambuscade by the Franks , with whom he was at war.	VII	594
4680	3373	374	Marcellianus , duke of Valeria , having treacherously murdered Gabinus king of the Quadians , to revenge his death, the Quadians pass the Danube , lay all waste for a great space, murder many of the people, and carry away a prodigious number captive.	VII	603
4681	3374	375	The emperor Valentinian ravages the country of the Quadi , and drives them all before him; and while their ambassadors were suing for peace, and he answering them roughly, suddenly falls down in convulsion fits, and dies in extremest agonies, the 17th of November , in the 55th year of his age, and 12th of his reign.	VI	364

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4681	3374	375	Valentinian , youngest son of the deceased emperor Valentinian , is declared emperor by the officers of the army the 23d of November , which his brother Gratian and uncle Valens confirm'd; giving him Italy , Illyricum and Africa , for his share of the empire; to Gratian , Gaul , Spain and Britain , for his share; and then Gratian restores his mother Severa to her former honours, who had been divorced and banished.	VI	377
4682	3375	376	The body of the emperor Valentinian , after being embalmed, was sent to Constantinople to be interred among the other Christian princes, where it arrived the 28th of December , but was not buried till the 21st of February , 382, following. He is variously characterized by different authors.	VI	365
4682	3375	376	Gratian puts Maximius (prefect of Gaul) to death, for his cruelties exercised both in Italy and Gaul , likewise Simplicius and Doryphorianus for the same fault in Rome .	VI	377
4682	3375	376	The emperor Gratian is so rigid against the Arians , Donatists , &c. that he allowed the Pagans greater liberties than they.	VI	379
4682	3375	376	The Goths being driven out of their country by the Huns and Alans , are allowed by the emperor Valens to settle in vast numbers in Thrace .	VI	380
4682	3375	376	Atbanaric , a chief among the Goths , being driven out of his own country, with his people, by the Huns , retires to Caucalanda , then inhabited by Sarmatians , drives out the inhabitants, and seizes it for themselves, where they settle.	VII	610
4682	3375	376	The Huns pass the Palus Meotis , and disperse themselves into diverse countries, and particularly displace the Goths .	VII	459
4683	3376	377	The Goths lately settled in Thrace , being reduced to great straits for want of provisions, began to mutiny, when Count Lupicinus , governor there, commanded them to march from the banks of the Danube , and ordered his soldiers to drive them on the Greuthongi , crossed the river, and when they came to Marcianopolis to Lupicinus , he invited the two chiefs to a banquet, but would let none of their people in with them; they being hungry, flew on the Roman guards, and cut most of them to pieces, for which the attendants of the two chiefs were put to death. The chiefs coming away, heads their men, and declare war. Next day Lupicinus goes against them, but being but few in number, the Goths cut most of them to pieces, and forced him to fly into the city. Those likewise at Adrianople join them. Gratian sends his uncle assistance, but they are all cut off or desert; but soon after the Goths are overcome, and vast numbers slain.	VI	382
4683	3376	377	Gratian makes a law vastly in favour of the clergy, and all any ways belonging to the church. A terrible plague swept away vast numbers of people in all the western provinces.	VI	382
4683	3376	377	Mallobaudes , king of the Franks , is raised to the consular dignity by the emperor Gratian , who was himself his colleague.	VII	557
4684	3377	378	The Goths lately settled in Thrace go into Macedonia and Thessaly , and commit dreadful ravages, advance to Constantinople , plundered the suburbs, and block'd up the city for some time. As Valens was going against them, Gratian sends to inform him, he was coming to his assistance with a large army, and therefore desired him to forbear engaging the enemy till he joined him; and at the same time Fritigern , chief of the Goths , sues for peace, both of which he refuses, comes to an engagement, and has his best generals and two thirds of his army cut to pieces, and the other routed, and Valens himself killed.	VI	384
4684	3377	378	The next day the Goths besiege Adrianople , but are forced to raise it with great loss, and then march to Constantinople , where after spending some time, they are also forced to retire with great loss, then they over-run Thrace , Scythia , Misia , and Illyricum , without opposition.	VI	388
4684	3377	378	The Quadi and Sarmatians enter the Roman territories, and destroy all with fire and sword, wherever they come.	VI	388
4684	3377	378	There being great Numbers of Goths in the Roman armies in the east, Julius , the governor of Asia , fearing they should revolt, and join their brethren already too numerous, sent private orders to massacre them all at the same time, in the several places where they were quartered, which was executed without resistance. A great body of Sarmatians coming to join the Goths , are most of them cut to pieces by the Romans , and the rest forced to repass the Danube .	VI	38
4684	3377	378	Gratian , by the death of Valens , becoming emperor of the east, as well as of the west, recalls all the Catholic bishops, and restored them to their sees, from whence Valens had banished them, and published liberty of conscience to all Christians , except the Manichees , Photinians , and Eunomians , to whom he would allow no churches.	VI	389
4684	3377	378	The Sarmatians intending to join the rebellious Goths , pass the Danube ; but being met by Theodosius in Thrace , they are entirely overthrown.	VII	610
4684	3377	378	The Alemans passing the Rhine , began to lay waste the neighbouring provinces. Count Nannius and Mellebaudes , king of the Franks , attacked them, and gained a compleat victory, killing 30,000 on the spot, and slaying and taking the rest prisoners in pursuing them.	VII	594
4685	3378	379	Gratian proclaims Theodosius , a person of extraordinary accomplishments, and universally admired for his courage, piety, &c. his colleague in the empire, the 19th of January , at Sirmium , and committed to his care Thrace , and the rest of the provinces that Valens had in the east.	VI	389
4685	3378	379	The emperor Gratian coming to Milan , contracts a familiarity with count Ambrose , and by his influence recalls his law of liberty of conscience, especially to the Re-baptizers.	VI	391
4685	3378	379	The Lombards growing too populous, leaving their native country Scandinavia , to seek new settlements, and first overcome the Vandals , under their two chiefs, Iboreus and Aionus .	VI	391

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4685	3378	379	The emperor Theodosius receives the congratulations and homage of all the cities in the east at Theffalonica , and promises them all the service in his power; then goes against, and in several battles defeats, and at last entirely delivers Thrace from the ravages of the Goths .	VI	393
4685	3378	379	Artaxerxes , supposed to be the 4th son of Sapor , proclaimed king of Persia , upon that prince's death, and lived quietly four years.	IV	337
4686	3379	380	Theodosius being taken extremely ill at Theffalonica in February , desires to be baptized, which was accordingly performed by Akolus bishop of Theffalonica . Gratian comes into Illyricum to watch the Goths , who were preparing to cross the Danube : Gratian concludes a peace with them, which Theodosius upon his recovery confirmed.	VI	393
4686	3379	380	Gratian makes a law, whereby any woman obliged to act upon the stage becoming a Christian , should be exempt from that obligation: But she that behaved misbecoming a Christian , should be condemned to act on the stage for the remaining part of her life.	VI	393
4686	3379	380	Theodosius publishes a law at Theffalonica , the 28th of February , wherein he declares he will have all his subjects adhere to the faith Rome had received from St. Peter , and taught by Damasus bishop of that city, and Peter bishop of Alexandria , viz. confels the divinity of the father, son, and holy ghost; and all that did not should be treated as hereticks. Also another law, forbidding capital trials in Lent ; and another, prohibiting widows to remarry during their time of mourning, viz. 10 or 12 months.	VI	393
4686	3379	380	The Goths again return under Fritigern , Alatheus , and Saphrax , break into Thrace and Pannonia , advance to Macedon , and destroy all with fire and sword: Theodosius goes against them, and overthrows them: Then going in triumph to Constantinople , deposes Demophilus the Arrian bishop, and appoints Gregory Nazianzen bishop in his stead; and drove the Arrians out of all the churches which they had held for 40 years past.	VI	395
4687	3380	381	The Hereticks are every where all over the east put out of the churches they held, and the Catholicks put in their place: And to reconcile all differences, the emperor Theodosius summons the second oecumenical council at Constantinople , where all the bishops of his dominions assembled.	VI	395
4687	3380	381	Albanaric , king of the Goths , flies from the Hunns to Constantinople , where the emperor goes out to meet him, and receives him with great honours, and treats him nobly, &c.	VII	503
4688	3381	382	Gratian orders the altar of Victory , which stood in the palace where the Roman senate met, to be removed, and confiscated the revenues thereof: It had been before removed by Constantius in 357, but restored by Julian in 361, where it remained till now. He likewise took away the privileges of the Pagan pontiffs and vestal virgins. The Hereticks were also severely used, declaring them guilty of death.	VI	396
4688	3381	382	The emperor Theodosius I. upon the submission of the Goths , allow them lands in Thrace and Mæsia , and leave to settle there, those two provinces having been almost dispeopled by the frequent incursions of the several sorts of Barbarians .	VII	503
4689	3382	383	A dreadful famine raged in Rome , and Magnus Clemens Maximus revolts in Britain , and is proclaimed emperor by the soldiers; and coming into Gaul , persuades them to revolt likewise. Gratian goes against him, but is deserted by great numbers of his soldiers, to supply which he took in foreigners, so that the rest also forsook him: He flies, is refused admittance into several cities, and is at last taken at Lions , and put to death by order of Maximus , in the 25th year of his age.	VI	398
4689	3382	383	Maximus upon the death of Gratian takes his son Flavius Victor for his colleague with him in the empire, and gave him the title of Augustus , though then but an infant, and fixed the seat of his government at Treves . Maximus ordered Merobaudes , one of this year's consuls, to put himself to death, which he does, and Balio strangled himself, being condemned to be burnt to death for his inviolable attachment to Gratian .	VI	400
4689	3382	383	Theodosius , rather than go to war with Maximus , and fearing the inroads of the Barbarians , allows him to be his colleague in the empire, and orders him to be proclaimed at Alexandria in Egypt . The beginning of this year Theodosius proclaimed his son Arcadius emperor, with extraordinary pomp, at the palace of Hebdomon , seven miles distant from Constantinople , then about six years old.	VI	402
4689	3382	383	The Hunns having over-ran Mesopotamia , lay siege to Edeffa ; but being repulsed by the Roman garrison, are obliged by the Goths to retire.	VII	504
4690	3383	384	Proculus count of the east being accused of extortion, &c. at Daphne near Antioch , was ignominiously deposed, &c. This year a dreadful plague raged in Antioch , and most cities of Syria . A law is published, forbidding all on pain of death or perpetual banishment, to offer sacrifices to idols, or to consult a-ruspices, &c.	VI	403
4690	3383	384	Cynegius , præfect of the east, by order from Theodosius shuts up all the heathen temples, and abolishes superstition there and in Egypt .	VI	404
4690	3383	384	The emperor Theodosius publishes a law, prohibiting the marriage of cousin-germans, commanding the contracting parties to be burnt alive, their estates to be confiscated, and their children to be illegitimate.	VI	404
4690	3383	384	The Sarmatians make an irruption into the dominions of Valentinian , who were drove back with great slaughter, and many taken prisoners, who were sent to Rome to be massacred in the shews of the gladiators, or destroyed by the wild beasts.	VI	405

			(1059)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4690	3383	384	Valentinian the 22d of March , being Good-Friday , publishes pardon to all criminals, some few excepted, in honour of the approaching feast of Easter .	VI	495
4691	3384	385	A plot is discovered against the emperor Theodosius at Constantinople , and most of the conspirators put to death. The empress Flasilla and her daughter Pulcheria both die.	VI	406
4691	3384	385	Artaxerxes king of Persia dying, Sapor his son succeeds him, called Sapor the third, who reigned five years.	VII	338
4692	3385	386	The two emperors Theodosius and Arcadius obtain a great victory over the Greuthungi , in which king Odotheus was killed, and carries a vast number of them captive to Constantinople , which they enter in triumph.	VI	407
4692	3385	386	The Goths break into the empire, in order to settle in some of its provinces, but Theodosius engaging them, entirely overthrows them.	VI	504
4693	3386	387	Theodosius publishes a law, address'd by way of letter to all the cities in the east, to let all prisoners free (unless for very enormous crimes) at the feast of Easter then next coming.	VI	408
4693	3386	387	Theodosius wanting money to celebrate the 5th year of his son Arcadius , and the tenth of his own, laid a tax upon all the provinces to raise money, to which all but Antioch submit. The rabble break out into fury, and missing the governor, pull down all the statues of the emperors, &c. but being dispersed by the soldiery, many of the mutineers were punished, by the governor, with extreme severity, so that the greatest part of the people fled into the mountains, &c. besides which the emperor sent commissions to enquire into the riot, who punished many likewise with great severity; but thro' the mediation of saint Chrysostom and Flavianus , bishop of Antioch , the emperor forgave them, and restored the city again to the privileges he had deprived them of.	VI	413
4693	3386	387	Maximus passes the Alps , and goes to Milan . Valentinian flies to Theodosius for protection at Thessalonica , where Theodosius comes to comfort and assure him of help, and prevails on him to renounce Arrianism ; then he sends ambassadors to Maximus , desiring him to be content with Gaul , Spain , and Britain ; but he refuses, and besieges and takes Aquileia , and many other cities in Italy .	VI	412
4694	3387	388	The Alemans submit to Maximus voluntarily.	VII	594
4694	3387	388	Maximus is acknowledged emperor in Rome , and all the provinces of Africa . Theodosius raises a great army, chiefly of Goths , Huns and Alans , and goes against, engages him, and entirely defeats one of his generals in Pannonia . Soon after he engages and utterly defeats Marcellinus , brother of Maximus , with an army more numerous than his own. Theodosius pursues Maximus to Aquileia , which is taken, and Maximus in it, who is carried in chains to Theodosius . After which he was beheaded the 27th of August ; then sending Arbogastes into Gaul , against Vidar the son of Maximus , Arbogastes overcame and put him to death, and so ended the war. Theodosius publishes a general amnesty for all persons whatsoever that had sided with Maximus , and restored Valentinian to the full possession of all the western provinces.	VI	413
4694	3387	388	Upon a report that the emperor Theodosius had been beaten by Maximus , the Arrians at Constantinople rise in the night, and set fire to the house of Nectarius , the orthodox bishop of that city, and burnt it and him in it; but upon their humble petition to the young emperor Arcadius , he forgave them, and got his father to confirm their pardon.	VI	414
4694	3387	388	Theodosius publishes a law, forbidding the Apollinarians to hold assemblies, to have bishops or clergy, to live in cities, to appear at court, or to present a petition to the emperor. Another prohibiting all religious disputes. Another declaring the marriages between Jews and Christians unlawful, and the contracting persons subject to the laws against adultery, &c.	VI	415
4694	3387	388	The Franks ravage Gaul fiercer than ever. Nannius and Quintinus having defeated those parties of Franks that were left in Gaul , Quintinus pursues them to the Rhine , which he passes, but is there with his army cut all to pieces.	VII	557
4695	3388	389	Theodosius goes to Rome , with his son Honorius and young Valentinian , and entered it in triumph; and by his extraordinary candid behaviour, is greatly instrumental in converting the senate and people to christianity.	VI	415
4695	3388	389	The Pagans at Alexandria fall upon the Christians , for exposing some of their obscene figures, found in one of their temples, and making the temple of Serapis their garrison; they sallied out from thence, and dragging what Christians they met with into the temple, forced them to sacrifice to their idol, or else rack'd them to death; the emperor, to still the riot, forgave the Pagans , but ordered all the temples in Alexandria to be demolished.	VI	417
4696	3389	390	Theodosius , by a law, orders all who professed a monastic life, to retire out of all cities, and to live in deserts; and by another, that all found guilty of unnatural lust should be publicly burnt alive.	VI	418
4696	3389	390	Sapor , third king of Persia , dies, and is succeeded by his son Varanes , who reigned eleven years.	IV	338
4696	3389	390	An obelisk, twenty-four cubits high, was raised in the Circus at Constantinople , and a column before the church of Saint Sophia , on which was a silver statue of Theodosius , weighing 7400 Ounces.	VI	418
4697	3390	391	The Huns commit great ravages in Mesia and Thrace .	VII	460
4697	3390	391	Theodosius orders the heretics to be driven out of all cities, and that all who renounced the Christian religion, after baptism, should be incapable of giving or receiving any thing by will, or being a legal witness.	VI	418
4697	3390	391	Theodosius unexpectedly falls upon, and cuts to pieces many of the Barbarians , that concealed themselves in the marshes and woods, in the province of Macedonia ; and from thence sallied out and did great damage: but while the soldiers were

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			were refreshing themselves, the Barbarians fell upon them with great fury, and killed abundance of them. Next day the emperor attack'd them again and overthrew them with so great a slaughter, that very few of them escaped.
4697	3390	391	Theodosius goes to Constantinople , and orders all the heathen temples that remained in that city, to be demolished, and all the Arrians to be driven out of that and all other cities in his dominions.	VI	419
4698	3391	392	The emperor Valentinian sends to St. Ambrose , bishop of Milan , to come into Gaul to baptize him; but before he could get to him, the emperor was murdered by Arbogastes , the 15th of May , aged twenty years and some months.	VI	419
4698	3391	392	Upon the death of Valentinian , one Eugenius was proclaimed emperor in Gaul , a creature of Arbogastes , who soon over-run West Illyricum , Italy , Gaul , Spain , and Britain , but Africa submitted to Theodosius .	VI	420
4698	3391	392	Theodosius receives the ambassadors sent to him by Eugenius very civilly, and sends to consult one John , a hermit, by nation an Egyptian , who advises him to make war upon Eugenius , and assures him of victory; and that he should soon after die in Italy , and leave his son emperor of the west.	VI	421
4699	3392	393	Theodosius proclaims his second son Honorius Augustus , in the palace of Hebdomon , near Constantinople , with great magnificence.	VI	422
4699	3392	393	Eugenius having obtained great advantages over the Franks , leaves Gaul and goes into Italy , where, after repeated solicitations, he re-establishes Paganism.	VI	423
4700	3393	394	Theodosius goes to the Alps , the passes whereof he found guarded by Flavianus , prefect of Italy ; he attacks him; Flavianus is killed, and his soldiers run away; but as he came down those hills, he was met by Eugenius at the bottom, with a numerous army; they engage, and Theodosius loses above 10,000 of his auxiliaries; they are parted by the night. Next morning Theodosius renews the fight, kills many of the enemy, and forces the rest to save themselves by a precipitate flight. Eugenius is carried to Theodosius in chains, where his head is cut off, and carried about on a spear, and the rest submitted to Theodosius , who ordered the children of Arbogastes and Eugenius to be instructed in the Christian Religion, and taken great care of, gave them their paternal estates, and raised them to great offices and employments.	VI	423
4700	3393	394	Theodosius publishes a general amnesty, and sends for his son Honorius , and proclaims him emperor of the West, giving him Italy , Gaul , Spain , Britain , Africa , and West Illyricum , and sends Stilicho to Rome with this declaration, accompanied by his wife Serena , niece to the emperor. She goes to see the statue of Cybele , and snatches a fine necklace that was on the image; an old vestal cursed her, her husband, and children, for which she was punished severely.	VI	425
4700	3393	394	The Roman senate congratulate Theodosius on his victory, and beg the next consulship for the two brothers Olybrius and Probinus , which the emperor grants, and exhorts them to embrace the Christian religion. This year dreadful earthquakes were felt almost all over the empire every day, from the beginning of September to the end of November . Violent and incessant rains laid whole countries under water, and great darkness.	VI	435
4701	3394	395	Theodosius prepares to return to Constantinople , but is seized with a dropsy, whereupon he made his will, bequeathing the eastern part of the empire to his son Arcadius , and the western part to his son Honorius , and died at Milan the 17th of January , in the 16th year of his reign, and 50th year of his life. St. Ambrose pronounced his funeral oration; his body was embalmed, and sent to Constantinople , where it was interred the 9th of November following, in a tomb of porphyry, in the mausoleum of Constantine the Great , near the church of the apostles: he is characteriz'd to be endowed with every virtue becoming a prince, in a very eminent degree.	VI	426
4701	3394	395	Arcadius , upon his father's death, comes out of the East to Constantinople , where he reigned under the direction of Rufinus , whom his father had made his guardian, being then in the 18th year of his age; and Honorius continued at Milan , being in the 11th year of his age, under the guardianship of Stilicho ; the two ministers jealous of one another, Stilicho pretends Theodosius had left the care of both to him, and therefore endeavours to destroy Rufinus .	VI	432
4701	3394	395	The emperor Honorius allowed a colony of Alemans , to settle in the present Switzerland .	VII	594
4701	3394	395	The Huns break into the eastern provinces of the Roman empire, and commit unspeakable ravages.	VII	460
4701	3394	395	Eucherius , uncle to Arcadius , complained to him of Lucianus , count of the east, who is very differently characterized. Rufinus goes privately to Antioch , calls Lucianus to his tribunal, and condemned him to be beat to death with leaden balls, fastened to cords; the Antiochians murmuring at it, he ordered the most stately portico to be built that was in all Syria , to appease them.	VI	432
4701	3394	395	Rufinus proposes his daughter for a wife to Arcadius , but he chuses Eudoxia , daughter of count Bauto , a Frank , and the nuptials were solemnized the 27th of April , she had a vast influence over Arcadius .	VI	433
4701	3394	395	Rufinus disappointed in the marriage, and fearing the arms of Stilicho . and the influence of the eunuch Eutropius , the favourite both of the emperor and the empress, resolves to put all into a flame, and stirs up the Huns and Goths , who penetrated into the empire as far as Antioch .	VI	433
4701	3394	395	Stilicho renews the ancient alliances with the Germans , and goes with a great army to the assistance of Arcadius ; but Rufinus influenced Arcadius to send for the eastern troops that were with Stilicho , and to order him to return home with the western troops, which he did. Gainas , that commanded the eastern troops, was met at the palace of Hebdomon by Arcadius , and Rufinus , who passed his ward to proclaim him his colleague; but Gainas ordered his troops

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			to cut him to pieces, which they did the 27th of November; cut off his head, and carried it upon a spear to Constantinople , where every one rejoiced at the sight, and was succeeded by Eutropius the eunuch, who was originally an Armenian slave, very covetous, cruel, &c. who used all wicked means to convey the wealth of the empire into his own coffers.	VI	434
4701	3394	395	The Goths under Alaric ravage a great part of the empire, and even threaten Constantinople itself, continuing two years in Greece , &c. destroying all with fire and sword, and sending away multitudes of captives, with the whole wealth of the ravaged country.	VII	505
4702	3395	396	Eutropius so far influences Arcadius , that Stilicho is solemnly declared a public enemy, and all his lands and palaces in the east confiscated, and endeavoured to ruin all his friends. Eutropius prevails with the emperor to enact a law forbidding any body flying into the church for refuge, and that those who did so should be dragg'd out and punished more grievously than if they had not flew thither; this drew the general hatred upon him.	VI	437
4702	3395	396	Dreadful earthquakes were felt in most of the eastern provinces of the empire, the sky appearing all on a flame, over Constantinople , terrified the emperor and the people so much, that they flew out of the city to lie in the fields.	VI	437
4702	3395	396	Fritigil , queen of the Marcomans , by means of saint Ambrose , is converted to the Christian religion, and influences her husband to make peace with the Romans , and to favour the Christians .	VII	602
4703	3396	397	Eutropius , the emperor Arcadius's favourite and prime minister, stirs up Gildo , brother to the famous Firmus , commander of the Roman troops in Africa , to revolt from Honorius , and come over to Arcadius , which he doing, they oblige Carthage and the whole province of Africa to declare for Arcadius .	VI	438
4703	3396	397	Saint Ambrose , bishop of Milan , dies, universally lamented by all degrees of people throughout the whole empire. Honorius publishes a law, forbidding the Romans to follow foreign fashions. Arcadius banishes all the Apollinarian preachers out of Constantinople , and confiscates all their houses; and passes a law in favour of the Jews ; and sentences to death all domestics that should bear witness against their masters, in cases of treason; the empress Eudoxia is delivered of a daughter, who was named Flaccilla , the 17th of June .	VI	439
4704	3397	398	Mascezel is sent by Stilicho against his rebellious brother Gildo in Africa , where he engages and entirely overthrows him; Gildo flies, is pursued, taken, and put into prison, where he strangled himself; and all Africa returned to Honorius again, and the two brothers are reconciled to one another.	VI	440
4704	3397	398	Mascezel returns to Italy , where Stilicho seemingly receives him with great marks of esteem; but being jealous of his growing greatness, orders him to be pushed into the river, as they were both going over the bridge at Milan , in which he was drowned.	VI	440
4704	3397	398	Stilicho marries his daughter Maria , an infant, to the emperor Honorius , now in his 13th year; he assists the Britains against the Danes , Saxons and Picts , and settles a legion in Britain for their defence.	VI	441
4704	3397	398	A violent earthquake overthrows abundance of houses in Constantinople and Chalcedon , and several buildings are consumed with lightning, and the sea breaks in and lays whole countries under water.	VI	441
4705	3398	399	Eutropius prevails upon Arcadius to create him a patrician, intitle him Father to the Emperor , and to raise him to the consulate, being the first and last eunuch ever advanced to that dignity.	VI	441
4705	3398	399	Tribigild the Goth , commander of a great army of those people as auxiliaries to Arcadius in Nicolia in Phrygia , coming to court, is highly affronted at the haughty behaviour of Eutropius , and is influenced by Gainas , general of all the Roman horse and foot, to revolt; at his return to Nicolia , he plundered it and several other cities, and put all to the sword that fell into his hands, threw the whole province of Asia into confusion and consternation. Eutropius strove to bring him back by large presents and promises; but failing, sends one Leo , a creature of his, at the head of an army against him. Tribigild was cut off all to 300 men by the Pisidians ; but Gainas supplies him with a fresh army, who fell upon and defeated Leo , who perished, and most of his men were cut to pieces; and then he demands Eutropius to be delivered up to him, who after being degraded, was first banished to the island of Cyprus , and afterwards put to death, as the cause of all these troubles.	VI	444
4705	3398	399	Tribigild and Gainas , two officers in the Roman pay, revolt, and with their countrymen the Goths , do great mischief.	VII	506
4705	3398	399	Abundance of heathen temples were shut up and pulled down, both in the eastern and western empires, and some turned into churches, and severe laws enacted against all manner of idolatrous worship.	VI	445
4706	3399	400	Alaric king of the Goths , and Radagaisus king of the Hunns , entered Italy and committed vast ravages.	VII	504
4706	3399	400	Upon the death of Eutropius , the empress Eudoxia , a bold, enterprising, avaritious woman, so influenced her weak husband Arcadius , that the state was reduced to the utmost miseries, by the enormous wickedness of her creatures.	VI	445
4706	3399	400	Gainas makes a pretended peace with Tribigild , and unite their forces together, and went to Sardis in Lydia , plundered that metropolis; and then separated; Tribigild goes to Lampsachus , and Gainas towards Chalcedon , plundering the countries through which they pass. The emperor offers Gainas whatever terms he required. He first demanded the three greatest officers of the state to be delivered to him, which was done; then, that the emperor and he should have a private conference, which was likewise held in the church of St. Eu-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pg.
			phemia in Chalcedon , where it was agreed, that they should lay down their arms, and be advanced to the highest dignities in the state, which were both done accordingly.
4706	3399	400	Gainas having filled Constantinople with his countrymen the Goths , revived and greatly encouraged Arrianism , and formed a design to seize all the wealth of the city, and set fire to the palace; but mistaking the time of the signal, most of the Goths were cut to pieces by the inhabitants; upon which Gainas flies again into open rebellion. Fravitus , who commanded in Asia , opposes and kills several thousand of his men, and forces him back from that province; and upon his arrival in Thrace , he and all his soldiers were cut to pieces by the Roman soldiers, and so this disturbance ceased.	VI 446
4707	3400	401	The empress Eudoxia being created Augusta , orders her image to be carried through all the provinces, to receive the same homage that is paid to the images of the emperors, which no empress before had ever presumed to do.	VI 447
4707	3400	401	The empress Eudoxia is delivered of her third daughter Arcadia , on the third of April . This year Constantinople was shaken with violent earthquakes for three days together, upon which abundance of Pagans desire to be, and are baptized into the Christian religion.	VI 447
4707	3400	401	Varanes , king of Persia , dies, and is succeeded by Idigertes , whom Arcadius , emperor of the east, declared guardian of his son Theodosius , which begot a great intimacy and friendship between the two courts.	IV 338
4708	3401	402	Theodosius , son and successor of Arcadius , was born the 10th of April , and soon after baptized and declared Cæsar , with extraordinary pomp and solemnity. This year the Euxine sea was frozen over for the space of twenty days. A band of slaves and deserters pillaged Thrace , pretending to be Huns ; but Fravitus cuts most of them to pieces, and disperses the rest.	VI 449
4708	3401	402	Honorius forgives all debts due to his exchequer, contracted since his first consulate in 386, and orders all legal prosecutions for debt to stop, commenced since 395, the time of his coming to the empire, till he had examined into the circumstances thereof.	VI 449
4709	3402	403	Arcadius promotes his son Theodosius to the imperial dignity, in his palace of Hebdomen , on the 10th of January , with extraordinary magnificence.	VI 449
4709	3402	403	Alaric enters Italy without opposition, and ravages the provinces of Venetia and Liguria , and threatened to besiege the court; whereupon Honorius retires from Milan to Ravenna , which from this time became the ordinary place of his residence.	VI 449
4709	3402	403	The empress Eudoxia is delivered of her fourth and last daughter Maria . On the 10th of February a statue of silver was erected to the empress, upon a column of porphyry, near the church of St. Sophia in Constantinople , where sports were exhibited in honour of the empress, which occasioned a misunderstanding between St. Chrysostom , bishop of the city, and the empress. This year a statue was reared to Arcadius , in the same city, and he built the city of Arcadiopolis in Thrace .	VI 450
4709	3402	403	Stilicho engages and overcomes Alaric king of the Goths , at Pollentia , takes his camp, with all the rich plunder of several provinces, and his wife and children; upon which Alaric sues for peace, which is granted: He repasses the Po , and goes to Verona , where committing acts of hostility, he is pursued, and forced into the mountains, and so retires into Pannonia ; upon which Honorius goes to Rome , which he enters in triumph, with Stilicho in the same chariot with him, about the beginning of December , where he was received with all the marks of joy and respect possible.	VI 451
4710	3403	404	The empress Eudoxia dies of a miscarriage, the 6th of October , a few days after she had prevailed on Arcadius to banish St. Chrysostom : That day he went out of Constantinople a fire consumed the great church, the palace where the senate assembled, and many other adjoining edifices.	VI 451
4710	3403	404	The Huns break into Thrace , and east Illyricum , and having amassed great booty, retired beyond the Danube : And the Issaurian robbers commit great ravages in Asia and Syria ; but Arbaxacius going against them, cut most of them to pieces, and shut up the rest on all sides, but for the sake of a great bribe let them escape, when they over-run the provinces of Cilicia , Pamphilia , Lycia , Lycaonia , Pisidia , Cappadocia , and Lower Syria , pillaging all the open country, and then retired into their inaccessible mountains with their vast booty.	VII 451
4711	3404	405	Ragaisus king of the Goths , a Pagan , comes with a mighty army into Italy , and offering sacrifices to Jupiter every morning, vows all the Romans to destruction. The Pagans all over the empire, but especially at Rome , lay all their sufferings upon the Christians , for despising the gods and their service. Stilicho assembles 30 Roman legions at Pavia , and reinforced them with a great number of Goths , Huns , and Alans , under Sarus , a Goth , and Uldin king of the Huns , and goes towards Florence , which Radagaisus had besieged, and orders his auxiliaries to fall upon one of the divisions of Ragaisus's army, which doing, they kill him 100,000 men without the loss of one man: upon which he retired to the mountains of Fesula , where Stilicho closely besieged him, and reduced him to such straits, that he attempted to escape and leave his men behind, and so was taken and put to death: His army submitted to the Romans , who sold them for slaves in droves, at a crown per head; but all died in a few days, being almost starved to death before in their camp.	VI 453
4712	3405	406	A dreadful fire reduced great part of Constantinople to ashes on the 25th of October ; and such multitudes of grasshoppers infested Egypt , that turned the day into night; and by the stench of them, after they were dead occasioned a great plague, which carried off abundance of the people.	VI 453

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1063)	Vol. Pag.
4712	3405	406	December 30th. prodigious numbers of the northern nations entered into and settled in Gaul, which at length utterly ruined the western empire, said to be invited and supported by Stilicho, with an intent to make his son Eucherius emperor of the west.	VII 452
4712	3405	406	The Franks fall upon the Vandals, as they were preparing to march into Gaul, and cut off 20,000 of them.	VII 55
4713	3405	407	The Gauls are terribly ravaged by the Vandals, Alans, and Suevians, and are joined by the Burgundians. They took Mentz by storm, and levelled it to the ground, after having murdered many thousands of the inhabitants in the churches, whither they flew. Worms, Strasburgh, and Spires underwent the same fate; then they mastered all Aquitain, Gascony, Lions, and Narbonne.	VI 453
4713	3406	407	The Britains set up an emperor of their own, named Mark, who was murdered a few days after: Then they advanced one Gratian to that dignity, who after a reign of four months was also murdered; and then one Constantine, a common soldier, was chose, who forced the Picts and Scots out of the Roman province, and then formed a design of reigning over the whole empire: He goes into Gaul, with all the youth of Britain and what Roman forces were in the country, and after various successes settled at Arles, but leaving the Britains defenceless, they were terribly ravaged by their settled enemies, the Scots and Picts.	VI 454
4714	3407	408	Arcadius emperor of the east dies on the 1st of May at Constantinople, in the 31st year of his age, and was buried in the church of the apostles near his wife Eudoxia. He was naturally inclined to virtue, but being of a weak understanding, suffered his people to be grievously abused by his ministers and his wife's favourites. He was succeeded by his son Theodosius, then about eight years old, under the guardianship of his mother.	VI 455
4714	3407	408	Constantine the Britain made himself master of all Gaul; he caused his son Constantius, who was a monk, to quit his retirement, and created him Caesar, and sent him under Gerontius into Spain, where he cut most of Honorius's troops to pieces, and took Didymus and Verinianus their generals, and their wives, prisoners: They were brothers, and related to Honorius. This reduced all Spain, where Gerontius laid, and Constantius returned into Gaul, and presented his father with the illustrious prisoners, who ordered them to be privately murdered, and created his son Augustus, and gave him a diadem, and sends ambassadors to Honorius, demanding to be associated with him in the empire, who was forced to send him the imperial purple, and honour him with the title of Augustus, upon condition of his helping him against Alaric.	VI 455
4714	3407	408	Alaric being privately encouraged by Stilicho, threatens to lay waste all Italy, unless the Romans paid him a large sum of money. The senate at last were compelled by Stilicho to send him 4000 pounds weight of gold.	VI 455
4714	3407	408	One Olympius pretending great sanctity, thereby ingratiated himself so far into Honorius's favour, as to wait immediately upon his person where-ever he went; and in the emperor's journey from Pavia, so thoroughly convinced him of the treachery of Stilicho, that he sent two orders to Ravenna, where Stilicho was, the one to secure, and the other to put him to death, both which were executed. The army flew to arms, and slew all Stilicho's friends and creatures. The emperor having married Thermantia, Stilicho's second daughter, sent her back to her mother Serena untouched. Eucherius his son fled to a church, but was dragged out, and executed. Stilicho's estate, and the estates of all his partizans, were confiscated; and Olympius succeeded as prime minister. This year the Roman nobility were forbid all traffick. The Roman soldiers upon Stilicho's death murdered the wives and children of such heathen auxiliaries as he had hired; upon which 30,000 of them join Alaric, who thereupon sends to Honorius, and offers to retire, and never return again, if he would give him money to pay his army their arrears; which he refusing, he sends his brother-in-law Ataulphus into Italy, and goes himself and besieged Rome. A famine soon began in the city, and that was followed by a plague. The Romans send out deputies to treat with Alaric, who agrees to raise the siege, and for ever to continue faithful to the Romans, upon their delivering to him hostages, and paying him 5000 pounds weight of gold, 30,000 l. of silver, 4000 silk garments, 3000 purple skins, and 3000 l. of pepper; all which was done, and ratified by Honorius, and the siege accordingly raised.	VI 458
4714	3407	408	Uldin king of the Huns taking dislike to the Romans, crossed the Danube, and entered Thrace with a numerous army; but behaving in a very haughty manner towards his officers, they desert to the Romans who forced him to retire with great loss and precipitation.	VII 462
4714	3407	408	Anthemius is chose prime minister in the east, to govern it and Theodosius, which he did with great integrity and skill, to the intire satisfaction of the people of all degrees. The Squiri and Huns break into Thrace; but some of their officers abandoning them to join the Romans, they retire with great precipitation, but the emperor's troops overtaking the Squiri before they reached the Danube, cut great numbers of them to pieces, and took the rest prisoners; so that by this overthrow that nation was nearly extirpated.	VI 459
4715	3408	409	Honorius emperor of the west neglecting to deliver up to Alaric the hostages agreed on, he returns and besieges Rome a second time, and is increased by 40,000 slaves, who made their escape out of the city. Honorius sends 6000 troops to the assistance of Rome, whom Alaric intercepts, and cuts them almost all off. Honorius engages Ataulphus, and kills about 1200 of his men, but can't stop his going to Rome and joining his brother Alaric.	VI 459

Olympius

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
4715	3408	409	Olympius , the prime minister to Honorius , is disgraced and discharged, and is succeeded by Jovius prefect of Italy . The soldiers at Ravenna mutiny, and demand the heads of their two generals, and of the emperor's two chamberlains. The senate send a second message to press Honorius to perform the articles of peace, among whom was Innocent bishop of Rome , but without success. Alaric sends several bishops to him without effect. Then he goes to Rome , and in a few days the inhabitants open their gates to him, when he obliges them to proclaim Attalus , then prefect of the city, emperor, and to renounce Honorius , which they do: Attalus was an Arrian , and promoted all of that opinion, making Alaric his generalissimo.	VI 461
4715	3408	409	Attalus sends Constantine into Africa , to secure that province; but he and all his men are cut off by Heracianus , who hinders all manner of provisions going to Rome , which reduces them soon to great straits. Attalus goes from Rome to besiege Honorius in Ravenna : Honorius sends Jovius his prime minister, Valens the general of his foot, Potamus the quaestor, and Julian his first secretary, to wait Attalus's coming to Rimini , and to offer him the partnership in the empire. Jovius betrays his master, and Attalus offers him only his life, and liberty to retire to what island he pleased. Attalus sends another body of troops more numerous than the former into Africa , who were also cut off by Heracianus , who also sent Honorius a seasonable supply of money, which he immediately distributed among the soldiery, with good effect. Alaric reduced Liguria and Æmia , except Bononia , and proclaimed Attalus every where, and forced the people to swear allegiance to him.	VI 463
4715	3408	409	Gerontius revolts from Constantine in Spain , and sets up one Maximus for emperor; upon which the Vandals , Suevians , and Alans , that Constantine had permitted to remain in Gaul , flew to arms, and took several cities.	VI 462
4715	3408	409	The Vandals , &c. break into Spain , and proving too hard a match for the Romans , then commanded by Constantine , son of the emperor Constantine , settle there, and divide those provinces among them.	VII 430
4715	3408	409	All the Armoricii , or inhabitants of the sea coasts, shake off the Roman yoke, and erect a new state and government, which proved but short lived.	VI 463
4715	3408	409	The Vandals , Alans , and Suevians quit Gaul , and enter Spain , and take several cities, and defeat Constantine's army that he had sent against Gerontius , under the command of his son Constantine , and forces him to return to his father at Arles , and entered into a league with Gerontius , and then over-run the country, committing the most horrid cruelties, and continued this savage treatment till 411, when having conquered the whole country, they set about tilling the land for their own subsistence.	VI 462
4715	3408	409	The populace rise at Constantinople , and burn the palace of Monaxus , prefect of the city, upon account of the scarcity of bread. The rich men make a voluntary contribution, and divide it among the poor, and whip the bakers through the streets, and so appease the multitude.	VI 463
4716	3409	410	The Britains having often implored the Romans to assist them without success, shook off all obedience to them; but not being able to withstand the continual irruptions of their enemies, again implore the assistance of Honorius , who sent them a legion; these coming unexpectedly, cut the Scots and Picts in great numbers to pieces, and drove them into their own territories; and after advising the natives to rebuild the wall, returned to the emperor.	VII 437
4716	3409	410	Heracian keeping the ports of Africa so well guarded, that the Romans could get no sustenance from thence, was reduced to the necessity of eating human flesh. Alaric and Attalus go to Rome to consult about the measures of relieving Rome . Alaric proposes to send Gomarus , one of his officers, with a detachment of Goths to force Africa : Attalus refuses to employ the Goths , which so exasperated Alaric , that he sent moderate proposals to Honorius , who seemingly complied therewith. Alaric publicly stripped Attalus of all the badges of sovereignty, and sent them to Honorius , and insisted on Attalus and his son Ampelius being pardoned; and then Alaric goes towards Ravenna , to finish the peace: But Sarus the Goth , with 300 men, having remained neuter, Ataulphus goes against him; upon which he declared for Honorius , and went to Ravenna , where being kindly received, so provoked Alaric , that he returned to Rome , and reinstated Attalus again in the sovereign power, and in a few days deposed him again, besieged Rome , and reduced it to extremest necessities, and took it the 24th of August , and gave his soldiers leave to plunder the town, but ordered them not to kill the people. After five or six days spent in plunder, they burnt the greatest part of the city to ashes, and vast numbers of the people were massacred, but they spared all those that fled to the churches for safety, which were the only buildings that were not destroyed.	VI 464
4716	3409	410	Alaric goes from Rome into Campania , with his vast booty, and multitudes of captives, among whom was Placidia , the sister of Honorius , whom he treated with great respect; and after laying waste Campania , Lucania , Samnium , Apulia , Calabria , and Bruttii , he went towards the Streights of Sicily , intending to go from thence into Africa ; but his fleet being shipwrecked, he remained near Rhegium , where he was suddenly taken ill, and died in a few days. The Goths , for fear any insult should be offered to his bones, turned the course of the Busento near Cosenza in the farther Calabria , and buried him with many rich spoils in the bed of the river, and then let the waters return to their old course, and run over him, and killed all the slaves they employed in the work, and then chose Ataulphus , his sister's husband, for their king in his stead.	VI 466

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4716	3409	410	Constantine comes out of Gaul, where he reigned, prepares to enter Italy, under the pretence of helping Honorius; but being obliged to return into Gaul to repel Geronicus, who had pursued his son Constant out of Spain, Constantine sends to beg help of the Franks and Germans. Geronicus besieges his son Constant in Vienne, took it and him, puts Constant to death, and goes and besieges Constantine in Arles.	IV	466
4716	3409	410	By the wise administration of Anthemius, all remained quiet and secure in the east, where Andronicus, governor of Pentapolis, being proved guilty of extortion, &c. was first excommunicated by Synisus bishop of Ptolemais, and then degraded from his government.	VI	466
4717	3410	411	The emperor Honorius sends Constantius with an army into Gaul against Constantine, for coming into Italy without desire: He is joined by many of the troops of Geronicus, who forsook their master, upon which he raised the siege of Arles, and fled into Spain, where for his severity his soldiers mutiny, and force him to kill his wife, his friend, and then himself. Maximus, whom Geronicus had set up in Spain, is brought by his own men to Constantius, who stripped him of his authority, but spared his life. Constantius besieged Constantine in Arles, when after four months Edobius comes with a very numerous army of Franks to his assistance, which Constantius engaging, presently routed with great slaughter; when, upon oath promising to spare the lives of Constantine and his son, the gates of Arles were opened to him; but they being sent to Honorius, he ordered them both to be beheaded.	VI	467
4717	3410	411	The Asfariani, a Moorish nation, broke into Pentapolis, and laid the province waste, but were soon driven out by Anisus the governor. The Saracens break into the frontiers of Egypt, Palestine, Phenicia, and Syria, and carry off great booty.	VI	467
4717	3410	411	The Sueves, &c. having intirely driven the Romans out of Spain, make peace with the natives, and divided the Spanish provinces by lot among them.	VII	541
4718	3411	412	The Goths under Ataulphus quit Italy, and go into Gaul, and ravage all the places they come to.	VI	467
4718	3411	412	Sarus the Goth being disgusted at Honorius, goes into Gaul to join Jovinus, that had declared himself emperor there, upon the deposition of Constantine; which Ataulphus hearing, meets and takes him, and soon after puts him to death. Jovinus finding fault with Ataulphus for it, and promoting his brother Sebastian to be his partner in the empire, Ataulphus sends word to Honorius, that if he would furnish him with a quantity of corn, he would set his sister Placidia at liberty, and send him the heads of the two rebels; which being readily agreed to by Honorius, Ataulphus soon dispatched Sebastian, but Jovinus fled to Valence, where Ataulphus besieged and took him, and delivered him to Dardanius, præfect of Gaul, who put him to death at Narbonne.	VI	468
4719	3412	413	Lucius and Heraclianus were consuls this year; but after defending Africa gallantly a long time, Heraclianus revolts from Honorius, and proclaims himself emperor, fits out a prodigious fleet, lands in Italy, and marches directly to Rome. Count Marinus goes out against him, upon which he flies, gets into one of his ships, and returns alone to Africa: His men submit, and are pardoned, and himself soon after cut to pieces in Africa.	VI	468
4719	3412	413	The Franks make an irruption into Gaul, set fire to the city of Treves, and lay the country waste.	VII	558
4719	3412	413	The Burgundians, Vandals, and Alans, who entered Gaul in 407, make themselves masters of Alsatia, and are allowed to settle there, which gave rise to the kingdom of the Burgundians in Gaul, under Gondicarius, or Guntiarus.	VII	583
4719	3412	413	Ataulphus begins hostilities again, took Narbonne and Toulouse, and goes to Martieller, where count Bonifacius engages him, kills great numbers of his men, wounds himself, and makes him retire, when he went to Bourdeaux, where he was received as a friend.	VI	469
4719	3412	413	Lucius, a Pagan, having the command of the troops attending the court of young Theodosius, being displeased at the zeal of the young prince for Christianity, resolves to assassinate him, but is hindered by an imaginary apparition. This year Constantinople was surrounded with walls, twenty miles in circumference, in two months time.	VI	469
4720	3413	414	Placidia, sister to the emperor Honorius, is prevailed on to marry Ataulphus king of the Goths, at Narbonne in Gaul, after having been long his prisoner of war, in January, where the nuptials were celebrated with the utmost magnificence: He presented her with 50 basons filled with pieces of gold, and 50 filled with jewels and precious stones. Honorius not consenting to this match, Ataulphus set up Attalus again to be emperor, to bring Honorius to his terms.	VI	470
4720	3413	414	Honorius published a law, forbidding any one to molest such as should take sanctuary in churches, on pain of being punished for high-treason.	VI	470
4720	3413	414	Anthemius resigns his government of the empire and emperor to Pulcheria, sister to the emperor Theodosius, for her extraordinary wisdom and piety, on which account she is honoured with the name of Augusta.	VI	470
4721	3414	415	Theodosius, son of Ataulphus and Placidia, dies in Spain, and is buried in a silver coffin in a church near Barcelona, where Ataulphus was killed in August or September in his own stable, by Dobbis a Goth, one of his servants, whose master he had killed several years before. Upon which the Goths choose Sigeric, the brother of Sarus, for their king, who murders the six children of Ataulphus by his first wife, in revenge for the life of his brother Sarus, and obliged Placidia with other captives to walk twelve miles before his chariot, for which he was assassinated by his own people, the 7th day after his promotion, and Vallia chose in his room, after he had murdered all who stood in competition with him.	VI	471

Y. of World Flood	Y. of Christ	Y. of Christ	Vol. Pag.
4721	3414	415	VII 509
4721	3414	415
4721	3414	415	VI 471
4722	3415	416	VI 471
4723	3416	417	VI 472
4723	3416	417	VI 472
4723	3416	417	VI 472
4723	3416	417	VI 472
4724	3417	418	VII 513
4724	3417	418	VI 473
4724	3417	418	VI 473
4726	3419	420	VI 473
4726	3419	420	VII 558
4726	3419	420	VI 473
4727	3420	421	VI 473
			IV 331

Ataulphus king of the Goths being driven out of Gaul, flies into Spain, and is murdered.

A great tumult happened at Alexandria; the Christians and Jews, that were very numerous, quarrelling about some sports that were exhibited on a Saturday. St. Cyril the bishop of the city threatned to drive all the Jews out of it; upon this the Jews having armed themselves, in the dead of the night cried out the great church was on fire; upon which the Christians coming out of their houses to quench the fire, were massacred in great numbers; for which the bishop drove them all out of the city; Orestes the governor resented it as an incroachment upon his authority: Both write to court; the hermits fly to the city for refuge, and revile Orestes with the names of Pagan and Idolater, and Ammonius wounded him on the head with a stone; the monk was seized, and by the præfect racked to death. The populace seized Hypatia, daughter of the philosopher Theon, a person much famed for her great wisdom, and because she was respected by Orestes, they dragged her out of her chariot into a neighbouring church, and flayed her alive, then tore her to pieces, and burnt her mangled carcase.

Theodosius publishes a law to exclude Pagans from all employments both civil and military, and deposed Gamaliel patriarch of the Jews, for abusing his authority.

Vallia king of the Goths sends a fleet out to go and reduce Africa, which is destroyed by shipwreck near the Streights of Gibraltar, and most of his Goths on board drowned. He treats with Constantius, and concludes a peace with Honorius, delivers up hostages, and for 600,000 measures of corn sends back Placidia to her brother. Atalus is taken, has his right-hand cut off, and is banished to the island of Lipari.

Honorius gives his sister to Constantius his general to wife, the 1st of January against her consent. The Armorici, who formed themselves into a new sort of government in 409, are reduced again to the Roman subjection by Constantius, now brother-in-law to the emperor Honorius.

Honorius goes to Rome, which he enters in triumph, causing Atalus to be fetched from Lipari to walk before his chariot, and then sent him back into exile again. This year the Franks, after dwelling 200 years on the German side of the Rhine, are allowed to come and settle in Thongria, where they were governed by as many kings as they consisted of cities or cantons.

In the east Constantinople, and Cybyra in Phrygia, suffered very much by an earthquake, which threw down a great many houses.

Vallia in Spain cuts off those Vandals called Silingi, that had settled in Bætica or Andalusia, and terribly mauled the Alans, who ruled over the Vandals and Suevians in Spain, whose king Ata being killed, they flew to Gonderic king of the Vandals in Galicia, and submitted to him: For these services, and delivering up his conquests, Constantius gave Villa and his Goths Aquitania Secunda, containing the present archbishoprick of Bordeaux, and some neighbouring cities, and soon after the province of Auch and Gascogn. Vallia fixed his abode at Tboulouse, which became the capital of the kingdom of the Goths.

Honorius declares by law the right and privilege of sanctuary to all places within 50 paces of every church, and declares those guilty of sacrilege that should arrest any person within that space.

Placidia is delivered of a son at Ravenna, the 2d of July, named Valentinian, who succeeded his uncle Honorius in the empire.

In Spain Gonderic king of the Vandals drives Eremeric king of the Suevians into the mountains of Biscay, where he blocked him up. Asterius, count of Spain, and Maurocellas the vicar, cuts off great numbers of Gonderic's men, and forced the rest to retire into Bætica.

The Franks pillage and burn Treves a 3d time.

Honorius raises Constantius his brother-in-law on the 8th of February to the imperial dignity, and declares him his colleague, and gave his wife Placidia the title of Augusta. Upon sending their statues to Constantinople, Theodosius refused to acknowledge them; but Constantius dying the 2d of September following, put an end to all disputes.

The emperor Theodosius on the 17th of June marries Eudocia, the daughter of Heracitus, an Athenian philosopher, she being first baptized by Atticus bishop of Constantinople.

Isdigertes, king of Persia, dies, and is succeeded by his son Varanes the 5th. Abdas, the Persian Christian prelate, thro' intemperate zeal, burns down a Pagan temple; and being by the king requested to rebuild it, refused, for which he was put to death. All the Christian churches were demolished, and a terrible persecution followed. Theodosius complain'd of this and other matters, and both sides prepare for war. Ardaburius, the Roman general, goes into Azazene, a Persian province, and began to lay it waste with fire and sword. Narjes, the Persian general, comes and gives him battle, but is defeated, and goes into Mesopotamia, a Roman province; upon which Ardaburius blocks up Nisibis. Varanes solicits the Saracens to break with the Romans, which they readily comply'd with, and passed the Euphrates with a mighty army, and ravaged the Roman province so terribly, that the people joining the soldiers, engaged them, and cut off 100,000 of them, and forced the remainder to return home. Varanes goes with a mighty army to the relief of Nisibis; upon which the Romans retire, and the king returns to his capital. This done, the Romans engage his generals, and defeat them, and a second time repulse the Saracens, and overthrow the Persians, killing them abundance of men and seven generals. Soon after a corps of 10,000, called Immortals, were attack'd by the Romans, and every man of them cut off, upon which a peace was concluded for a 100 year.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4729	3421	422	Honorius sends Cassinus with a fine army into Spain , to recover it out of the hands of the Barbarians ; but he imprudently venturing a battle, has 20,000 of his men cut off.	VI	475
4728	3421	422	The Britains being in great distress, through the ravages of the Picts , &c. implore help from the Romans , who grant it, and drive out the enemies.	VII	437
4729	3422	423	Honorius , who till now had entertain'd his sister Placidia with all the love and respect possible, suddenly changes his behaviour to the contrary; upon which she, her son Valentinian , and daughter Honorio , quit the court, and retire to Constantinople , where they are received with great affection by Theodosius . Soon after Honorius dies at Ravenna , upon which Theodosius proclaims himself emperor; but John , the late emperor's chief secretary, sets up himself at Rome , and is acknowledged in Rome , Italy , Dalmatia and Gaul , and sends ambassadors to Theodosius , who ordered them to be imprisoned, and prepares for war.	VI	478
4730	3423	424	Theodosius creates Placidia Augusta , and her son Valentinian Caesar , and sends them with his army against the usurper John ; Salona is taken by storm, and then they go to Aquileia with the army by land, under the command of Aspar the son; but Aradaburius the father going by sea, is shipwreck'd and taken by John , who uses him civilly. He gives information to his son Aspar , who comes at unawares, and seizes the city of Ravenna , took the usurper, and sent him in chains to Placidia at Aquileia , where he was beheaded, after bearing the title of emperor about eighteen months.	VI	480
4731	3424	425	Three days after the death of the usurper, John Actius comes into Italy to his assistance with 60,000 Hunns : Aspar meets him, and a bloody engagement happens, without any considerable advantage on either side; but Actius being informed of the death of John , makes the best terms he can for himself; Placidia not only pardons, but takes him into favour, with the title of count, (at that time a title of great note:) He submits, and prevails upon the Hunns to return home. Theodosius , upon hearing Placidia's success, declares Valentinian her son, his young cousin and son-in-law, emperor, and Placidia regent during his minority.	VI	483
4731	3424	425	The Vandals , who had settled in Spain , ravaged the Balearick islands; and the Goths , who had been permitted to settle in Gaul , seized on the neighbouring cities, and laid siege to Arles , which Actius obliged them to raise. Thrace was laid waste by the Hunns , but a plague raging in their army they retired.	VI	480
4733	3426	427	Theodosius transplanted the Goths that had been settled in Pannonia 50 years before into Thrace , where they continued 58 years.	VI	480
4734	3427	428	Pharamond king of the Franks dies, and is succeeded by his son Clodio .	VII	559
4734	3427	428	Count Bonifacius in Africa revolts from Valentinian ; Placidia sends a large army under the command of Marcellus , Galba , and Sinex , who were all intirely defeated; upon which she sent Sigisvult the Goth , who with the assistance of his countrymen, took Carthage and Hippo ; Bonifacius begs the help of the Vandals under the command of Genferic ; they come from Spain , men, women, and children.	VI	481
4734	3427	428	The Vandals evacuate Spain , and go and settle in Africa , where they commit most terrible ravages.	VII	532
4736	3429	430	Actius is made commander of all the troops in the western empire, who gained great advantages over the Jutongi , the revolted Noricans , the Franks , and the Goths in Gaul .	VI	481
4736	3429	430	A body of Sueves attempting to cross the Rhine in order to go and join their brethren settled in Galicia in Spain , are attacked by Actius the Roman general, who cut great numbers of them to pieces, and obliged the rest to return to their own home between the Elbe and Weissel .	VII	543
4737	3430	431	Actius intirely reduced the Norici and Vindelic . The true reason of Bonifacius's revolting comes to light; Placidia and he are reconciled, when he strives to free Africa of Genferic and his companions, by offering them large sums to return home: Genferic rejects his offer, falls upon him, and cuts off most of his men, and forces him to fly to Hippo .	VI	482
4737	3430	431	An oecumenical council was held at Ephesus , where Nestorius bishop of Constantinople was condemned, by upwards of 200 bishops, for holding two persons as well as two natures in Christ . St. Austin , bishop of Hippo in Africa , dies in the 4th month of its siege by the Vandals .	VI	482
4738	3431	432	Bonifacius engages the Vandals in Africa , is overthrown with great slaughter, many taken prisoners, and the rest forced to shelter themselves among the rocks and mountains; after which the Vandals committed such dreadful ravages, that the inhabitants of Hippo quitted the city, which was first plundered and then set on fire. Bonifacius retires to Placidia , at Ravenna . Actius perceiving his treachery was discovered, meets and engages Bonifacius , who being much wounded, died soon after. Actius withdraws to the court of Rouas , king of the Hunns , and returns with a great army: Placidia pardons and restores him to his former post.	VI	482
4739	3432	433	A dreadful fire breaks out at Constantinople , which lasted three days, during which it consumed all the publick granaries, &c.	VI	482
4740	3433	434	Honorio sister to the emperor Valentine having suffered herself to be debauched by one of her domestics, named Eugenius , was banished the court, being about 16 years old, she invites Attila king of the Hunns to enter Italy with his army and marry her, &c.	VI	483
4741	3434	435	The Romans make a peace with Genferic king of the Vandals in Africa , and yield them great part of Numidia , all the province Proconsularis , and Bizacene . Actius gains a great victory over the Burgundians .	VII	535

The

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4741	3434	435	The Romans after having with the Britains built on the Isthmus between the two friths of Glota and Bodoria a wall of eight foot broad and twelve foot high, take their final leave of Britain, &c.	VII	438
4741	3434	435	The Burgundians, &c. entered Belgic Gaul, made great devastations and dreadful ravages; but Aetius the Roman General overcame them in a pitched battle, and reduced them to such straits, that Gundicarius their king sued for peace, and obtained it.	VII	583
4742	3435	436	The Huns attack the Burgundians, and cut off 20,000 of them in Gaul; the Goths take several places in Gaul, and besiege Narbonne, but are obliged to raise it and retire.	VI	483
4743	3436	437	The nuptials between Eudoxia, daughter of the emperor Theodosius, and the emperor Valentinian, were celebrated at Constantinople the 29th of October.	VI	483
4743	3436	437	Emeric the Suevian king makes peace with the native Galicians, and being in an ill state of health, resigns his crown to his son Rochila, and lives a private retired life the remainder of his days.	VII	543
4743	3436	437	Clodio makes himself master of Cambray, from whence he pierced into Artois, where Aetius and Majorinus fall unexpectedly upon them, while they were celebrating the nuptials of one of their chiefs, and cut great numbers of them to pieces; but notwithstanding this, he extended his conquests as far as the Somme.	VII	561
4744	3437	438	Aetius removes the Burgundians from the banks of the Rhine, into the present dutchy of Savoy.	VII	583
4744	3437	438	Aetius engages and cuts off 8,000 Goths in Gaul.	VII	510
4744	3437	438	The famous code, or body of Roman laws, are published by Justinian.	VI	484
4744	3437	438	Genferic king of the Vandals surprizes and takes Carthage in Africa, the 23d of October, after it had been possessed by the Romans 585 years.	VII	534
4745	3438	439	Rochila the Suevian king enters Lusitania, and takes Merida the capital of that province.	VII	543
4745	3438	439	Genferic, king of the Vandals, makes a descent into Sicily, ravages the country without opposition, and carries off immense booty.	VI	510
4745	3438	439	The emperor Theodosius, in a fit of jealousy, orders Paulineus, the empress Eudoxia's chief favourite, to be executed; upon which she retires to Jerusalem, and remains there till the time of her death, which happened twenty-one years afterwards, during which time she built many churches, &c.	VI	486
4745	3438	439	Litorius, as auxiliary to the Romans, with his army of Huns besiege Thoulouze, the capital of the Goths; upon which Theodoric king of the Goths goes out, gives them battle, overcomes them, and takes Litorius prisoner.	VII	510
4746	3439	440	Cyrus alone was consul, who, as he was a great proficient in polite literature, especially poetry, was much esteemed, and particularly by the emperors; and as he went into the Circus with the consular ornaments, the people received him with such acclamations, as made the emperor jealous, and a few days afterwards stripped him of all his employments, and confiscated his estate, &c. pretending that he inclined to Paganism, and aspired at the empire; but flying into a church for refuge, he got himself ordained a priest. The emperor granted him his life, and afterwards made him bishop of Cotyae in Phrygia.	VI	486
4746	3439	440	Arfaces king of Armenia dying, and leaving two sons, Tygranes and Arfaces, by his will divided the kingdom between them; Arfaces disliking his share, appeals to Theodosius, who espouses his cause, and threatens Tygranes with war; upon which he resign'd up the whole to his brother, and retired to the Persian court, where he lived privately. Arfaces, for fear of the Persians, surrendered up the whole to Theodosius, and so put an end to the Armenian kingdom, after it had subsisted many ages, and occasioned many bloody wars.	VI	487
4747	3440	441	The empire being vastly weakned, Theodosius is forced to make peace with Attila king of the Huns, conditioning to deliver up such Huns as had or should take refuge in the Roman dominions; that every Roman prisoner that made his escape from the Huns, without paying his ransom, should be delivered up, or have eight pieces of gold paid for him; that the Romans annually should pay the Huns 700 lb. weight of gold; that the Romans should not assist the enemies of the Huns, &c. In consequence of this treaty, Attila conquered all the nations north of the Euxine sea; then crossing the Danube, over-run Thrace, and demands all the Huns that sheltered themselves in the Roman dominions. This being refused, Attila began to ravage the country, and put all to fire and sword, and forced the emperor to retire from Constantinople into Asia for his better security.	VI	487
4748	3441	442	Theodosius concludes another shameful peace with Attila king of the Huns, and returns to Constantinople, the 28th of August, where he was forced to keep Attila in temper, by making him frequently extraordinary presents. 'Tis said Attila sent two Goths ambassadors to the two emperors; one to Theodosius and one to Valentinian, charging them to say, "Attila, my master and yours, commands you to get a palace ready for his reception."	VI	488
4748	3441	442	The Sarmes, under the direction and command of their king Rochila, take the city of Seville in Spain, reduce all Betica, and the province of Carthagera.	VII	534
4748	3441	442	The emperor Valentinian III. makes peace with Genferic king of the Vandals, and confirms to him all his conquests in Africa.	V	534
4738	3441	442	Varanes, the fifth king of Persia, dies, and is succeeded by Varanes the sixth; by some called Isligertes, who lived peaceably with the Romans seventeen years and four months, and then died.	IV	342
4749	3442	443	Theodosius visits Pontus, and causes the public edifices and walls of Heraclea, to be repaired.	VI	488

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4749	3442	443	Paschasius , bishop of Lilybæum in Sicily , returns from captivity in Africa , where he had been kept upwards of three years, by Genjeric king of the Vandals , in a miserable condition.	VII	534
4750	3443	444	Arcadia , the sister of Theodosius , dies, and Antiochus the eunuch, and great chamberlain to Theodosius , is degraded from the rank of a Patrician, and confin'd to the monastery of St. Euphemia at Chalcedon , stripp'd of all his immense wealth, and deprived of all his honours, for extorting upon the people, and a law is made for ever excluding all eunuchs from the patrician dignity.	VI	488
4751	3444	445	Vitus , the Roman general, is defeated in Spain by the Sueves , who under Rochila their king cut off most of his men, and oblige him to save himself by flight.	VI	489
4752	3445	446	Actius , being this year consul the third time, the Britons cruelly harraisd by the Picts and Scots , beg assistance from him, but obtain no relief. What the sword left, the plague took away; so that they were forced to invite the Saxons , who come into that island.	IV	442
4753	3446	447	A terrible plague the foregoing and this year rages in most of the provinces, and a violent earthquake overturn'd several cities, and great part of the new walls of Constantinople , and fifty-seven towers, together with many sumptuous edifices, in Antioch and Alexandria .	VI	489
4753	3446	447	Attila joined by the Goths , Alani , and Gepidæ , over-run Illyricum , Thrace , both Dacia's , Mæsia and Scythia ; took and plundered seventy cities, &c. extending themselves from the Euxine Sea to the straits of Thermopylæ . Arnegiselus , governor of Mæsia , opposes and cuts great numbers of them to pieces; but falling from his horse, is killed and his army put to the rout, and the same happened to others.	VII	468
4753	3446	447	Rochila , king of the Suevians , dies in Spain , and is succeeded by his son Requiarus , who tho' he professed himself a Christian , yet began his reign with plundering his neighbours.	VII	489
4754	3447	448	The Romans sue for peace to Attila , who grants it upon condition that they pay 6000 lb. weight of gold down, and every year 200 lb. weight; that they should return back all deserters, and for the future receive none; that they should pay 12 lb. weight of gold for every Roman captive that escaped without ransom, or send them back, &c.	VI	489
4754	3447	448	Requiarus , king of the Sueves , marries the daughter of Theodoric , king of the Goths in Languedoc , and visiting him at Thoulouze , in his return to Spain , surprized the city of Lerida , and carried off a great number of captives, and then pillaged the territory of Saragossa .	VI	489
4754	3447	448	Attila falsely claims certain curious vessels belonging to the church, pretending that one Silvatus , a Roman banker, had stolen them from him, and threatened Valentinian with war, if he did not surrender them.	VI	490
4754	3447	448	Clodio king of the Franks dies, and is succeeded by his younger son Meroveus .	VII	562
4755	3448	449	Attila sends Edecon his ambassador to Constantinople , where Chrysaphus , the great chamberlain, back'd by Theodosius , promises Edecon great rewards to dispatch his master, and sent Vigilius the interpreter with him to the court of Attila , to be assistant in the affair. Edecon discovers the matter to Attila ; Vigilius is seized, and Attila sends Orestes his secretary to reproach Theodosius , and demand Chrysaphus ; but Nomus , and several other persons of distinction, make up the business.	VI	490
4756	3449	450	The emperor Theodosius is so much bruised by a fall from his horse in hunting, that being with much difficulty carried to Constantinople in a chair, he died there the next day, the 28th of July , in the 50th year of his age, and the 43d of his reign from the death of his father, and buried in the same tomb with his father Arcadius . He is allowed to have been a prince of exemplary piety, tho' but of slender parts, being much governed by his eunuchs and favourites.	VI	490
4756	3449	450	Pulcheria , sister of the late emperor Theodosius , declares Marianus (a person of extraordinary qualifications, tho' of no great birth) emperor, which the senate confirms, and crowned him at Hebdomon , the 24th of August , with great solemnity, and then Pulcheria married him with mighty pomp.	VI	493
4756	3449	450	Pulcheria , mother of Valentinian , dies at Ravenna , (where her tomb is still to be seen) after governing the western empire 26 years.	VI	493
4757	3450	451	The emperor Marcian calls the council of Chalcedon , the 8th of October , and ends the first of November .	VI	498
4757	3450	451	Attila king of the Hunns sends to the emperor Valentinian , and demands Honorio his sister for his wife, and half the empire for her dowry. He sends ambassadors to Attila , who seems satisfied; but only dissembled his intentions; comes with a mighty army into Gaul , having first defeated the Franks , and taken Childeric and his mother prisoner, pretending friendship to the Romans . Several cities opened their gates to him; but his soldiers plundering and ravaging the inhabitants, shewed him to be an enemy, wherefore others opposed him, and then he pulled off the mask. He besieged and took by storm Tongres , Treves , Strasburgh , Spire , Worms , Mentz , &c. and going into the open country, put all to the sword, and laid Arras , Laon , Besançon , Toul , and Langres , in ashes; and laid siege to Orleans , and took it by storm; and while his men were plundering it, Actius , Theodoric , &c. came with a large army, and cut abundance of the Hunns to pieces, forced Attila to repass the Loire , in which many of his men were drowned. At last he reached the plains of Chalons , where they engage. Theodoric king of the Visigoths is slain, and about 300,000 men on both sides, after which Attila retired into Pannonia .	VII	478
4758	3451	452	The Nubians and Blennytes broke into the eastern empire, but Marcian forces them to accept of peace upon his own terms.	VI	498

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Page
4758	3451	452	Attila invades Italy , and invests Aquileia the metropolis of Venetia , battering it continually for the space of three months, when he took it by assault, and reduced every house in it to ashes, and killed every person that fell into his hands. The cities of Trevigio , Verona , Mantua , Cremona , Brescia , and Bergamo , suffered the same fate. Milan , the metropolis of Liguria , he also took, and burnt the cities round about. Valentinian sends Leo bishop of Rome , and some others, to treat with Attila about an accommodation, who concluded a truce with him.	VII 480
4759	3452	453	Attila enters that part of Gaul now called Dauphiny , but is entirely routed by Sangibar king of the Alans , and Thorismund king of the Visigoths . Upon his return home, he married a beautiful young woman, and drinking to excess, in the night bled to death; and with him ended the empire of the Hunns .	VII 480
4759	3452	453	Attila by will appointed Ellack his eldest son his successor; but a civil war happening between him, his brethren, and the conquer'd nations, Ellack is killed in battle, and the Hunns entirely routed, with a great slaughter on the banks of the Netad in Pannonia .	VII 481
4759	3452	453	Thorismund , king of the Visigoths , is murdered, and succeeded by his brother Theodoric the second.	VII 511
4759	3452	453	The empress Pulcheria dies, and leaves an immense stock of wealth to the poor, and was honoured with the title of Saint both by the Greeks and Latins .	VI 498
4760	3453	454	Actius , now consul the 4th time, is accused by Heraclius the eunuch, to the emperor Valentinian , who being a weak prince, believes the insinuation; sends to speak with him in privacy, and himself and several others stab Actius to death with their swords.	VI 392
4761	3454	455	The emperor Valentinian having violently forced the chastity of Petronius Maximus , Maximus hires two Barbarians to murder Valentinian , who came into the Campus Martius and killed him, and his favourite eunuch Heraclius , in the face of the whole court, the 17th of March , in the 34th year of his age, and 30th of his reign. The next day Maximus assumed the purple, and being saluted by all the people with the title of Augustus , he immediately raised his son Palladius to the dignity of Cæsar ; and his wife dying, he obliged Eudoxia , wife of the late emperor, to marry him against her will, and married her daughter Eudoxia to his son Palladius . She sends to Genferic king of the Vandals in Africa , and begs him to rescue her out of the arms of the tyrant, and to revenge the murder of his friend, he comes with a mighty fleet and army to Rome . Maximus frighted flies, upon which the people pursue and kill him. Three days after, viz. the 15th of June , Genferic enters Rome , and gave it up to be plundered, strictly forbidding his soldiers either to burn the city, or kill the people. They pillaged the houses, churches, and all the public edifices, for fourteen days, and carried away a vast number of captives, each taking as many women as he liked. Genferic stript the place, and took with him Eudoxia and her two daughters, and Gaudentius the son of Actius .	VII 534
4761	3454	455	Flavius Mæcilius Avitus , who had been appointed, by the deceased Maximus , commander in chief of all the Roman forces, and was now at the court of Theodoric king of the Visigoths , at Thoulouse , is by him prompted to assume the purple; and the 8th of August following was declared emperor at Arles by all the soldiery; from whence he went to Rome , where he was received with the universal applause of all the people, and Marcian readily acknowledg'd him for his colleague.	VI 502
4762	3455	456	Requiarus , king of the Survians in Spain , wars upon the Visigoths in Aquitain , and laid the provinces of Terraco waste. His brother-in-law Theodoric , as ally of Rome , endeavours to persuade him to peace and good neighbourhood; but he answering very haughtily, they come to blows, in which Requiarus was entirely defeated, and forced to fly; is pursued, taken, and put to death, and the Sueves , submit to Theodoric , who sets one Aquilphus as governor over them. Aquilphus revolts, and proclaims himself king of the Sueves , but dies soon after.	VII 544
4762	3455	456	Gundiac king of the Burgundians joins Theodoric king of the Visigoths , and goes with him into Spain , where they discomfit the Sueves ; but in their return home, the Burgundians seized on part of Gaul .
4762	3455	456	Genferic puts to sea with a numerous fleet and army; designs to ravage the coasts of Italy and Gaul ; was met and engaged by Ricimer , the Roman admiral, and entirely defeated; elated with this success, Ricimer and one Majorinus go to Rome , and oblige the senate to depose Avitus , who was then in Gaul , but Avitus coming back, was met by Ricimer at Placentia , who there stripped him of all the ensigns of majesty; upon which Avitus caused himself to be ordained bishop of Placentia ; but the senate insisting upon his being put to death, he retired towards Brioude , and died by the way.	VI 573
4762	3455	456	The Burgundians dwelling amongst the mountains of Savoy , seize on part of Gaul , and take Lions .	VI 504
4762	3455	456	The Heruli make a descent upon Galicia in Spain ; but not succeeding, they fail to Biscay , where they land, and commit great ravages, &c.	VII 504
4763	3456	457	Marcian , the emperor of the East, dies in the seventh year of his reign, and is succeeded by Leo , (surnamed the Great) with the unanimous consent of the senate, people and soldiery, and crowned by Anatolius , patriarch of Constantinople , being the first prince that received his crown at the hands of a bishop. The Eutychians in Alexandria rose in a tumultuous manner, murdered the Catholic bishop Proterus , and chose Timotheus Eleurus , one of their own sect, in his stead.	VI 504
4763	3456	457	Majorinus emperor of the west, falling upon the Vandals who were ravaging Campania , defeats and destroys multitudes of them, and retakes the spoil and plun-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			der they had amassed together, and forces the remainder to fly on board their ships.	VII	535
4763	3456	457	After three months interregnum, Majorianus (a person of extraordinary merit) is declared emperor in the West, by the senate, people and soldiery.	VI	505
4763	3456	457	Theodoric king of the Visigoths , having entirely reduced the Sueves in Galicia , enters Lusitania , takes Merida the metropolis, and several other cities; and then goes to Tboulouse . Having left a body of troops to reduce some few Suevians in Galicia , who being admitted as friends into Astorga , a town belonging to the Romans , put most of the inhabitants to the sword, plundered the houses, set fire to the place, and carried those that remained alive into captivity; among the rest, the whole clergy and two bishops that happened to be there. Palentia met with the same fate.	VI	505
4763	3456	457	Hengist the Saxon having overcome Vortigern in a battle fought in Kent , made himself king thereof.	VII	445
4764	3457	458	The Vandals make a descent into Campania ; the emperor Majorianus goes against them, defeats them, and puts great numbers to the sword, among whom was their commander, brother-in-law to Genferic ; the rest fly to Africa .	VI	505
4764	3457	458	Maldra the Suevian king orders that part of Galicia , which lay on the Douro , to be laid waste, contrary to the peace that had been concluded the year before.	VII	545
4764	3457	458	Upon Vortigern's retirement, Aurelius Ambrosius takes upon him the command of the British army, and becomes their king.	VII	445
4764	3457	458	Majorianus enters Gaul , and obliges the Burgundians to surrender Lyons , which they had taken, and to retire.	VI	505
4765	3458	459	Perofes succeeds his father Varanes the 6th in the kingdom of Persia , and going against the Euthalites or White Hunns , was by them drawn into a snare, that cut off abundance of his men by famine, and compelled him to do homage to their king, and swear never to trouble them again.	IV	342
4765	3458	459	Theodoric surprized some cities in Gaul , belonging to the Romans . Majorianus goes against him, engages and in a pitch'd battle defeats him, and forces him to sue for peace.	VI	505
4765	3458	459	The city of Antioch was almost entirely overthrown by an earthquake.	VI	505
4766	3459	460	Genferic sues to the Romans for peace, but is denied; whereupon attacking the Roman fleet in the bay of Alicant , took most of their ships, and carried them in triumph to Africa ; and soon after a peace was concluded.	VII	536
4766	3459	460	An earthquake overturned a great part of the city of Cyzicus .	VI	506
4766	3459	460	The Franks , &c. break into Gaul , and having ravaged the most wealthy provinces there, made an irruption into Italy .	VII	552
4766	3459	460	Ricimer gets the emperor Majorianus by treachery into his power, strips him of the Imperial ornaments at Tortona in the Milanese , the second, and put him to death the 7th of August ; and proclaim'd one Severus , the 19th of November following, at Ravenna .	VI	506
4767	3460	461	Leo emperor in the East refusing to pay the usual pension to the Astrogoths , allowed to settle in Pannonia , they fly to arms, laid waste Illyricum , and took several cities; but Anthemius drives them into Pannonia again, and then concludes a peace with them.	VI	506
4767	3460	461	Genferic sends a powerful fleet to pillage the coasts of Sicily and Italy , and made himself master of Sardinia . The Visigoths take Narbonne , and besiege Arles . Egidius goes against them, forces them to raise the siege and retire.	VII	536
4767	3460	461	Marcellinus revolts from Severus , and retires into Dalmatia , where he establishes a new sovereignty, independant of the empire.	VI	507
4768	3461	462	Egidius gains a great victory over the Visigoths in Gaul , killing many of them, and Frederic their general the king's brother.	VI	507
4769	3462	463	Beorgor king of the Alans , having entered Italy , Ricimer meets him near Bergamo , and cuts him and all his men off.	VI	507
4770	3463	464	Egidius being murdered, the Visigoths conquered the greatest part of Gaul .	VI	507
4770	3463	464	Childeric king of the Burgundians besieged and took Paris , and conquered all the provinces bordering upon the Rhine . The Saxons settled at Nantz and Bayeux ; the Alemans in the country of the Helvetii , and the Britons were driven out by the Angles and Scots in the territories of Vennes and Treguier , with the adjacent country, supposed to be called Bretagne , from the Britons .	VI	508
4770	3463	464	Rumarius dying, Rumismund his brother reigns over all the Sueves in Galacia alone.	VII	546
4770	3463	464	The Sueves are universally poisoned by one Ajax , an Arrian priest, with that heresy.	VII	546
4771	3464	465	The emperor Severus dies in the 4th year of his reign, being suspected to be poisoned by Ricimer , and an interregnum of near two years followed, during which Ricimer reigned absolutely without the title of emperor.	VI	508
4771	3464	465	A violent fire reduced eight of the fourteen quarters of Constantinople to ashes; it raging six days before it could be extinguished.	VI	508
4771	3464	465	Uric murders his brother Theodoric , king of the Visigoths , and succeeds him in the government, who had reigned thirteen years.	VII	514
4772	3465	466	Ricimer assembles a powerful fleet in order to recover Africa , but was obliged to lay aside his enterprize, not being able to put out through contrary winds, that blew violently all the summer.	VI	508
4772	3465	466	The Hunns , under Dengizic son of Atila , broke into Dacia ; but were defeated first by Anthemius , and then by Anagastus general of Thrace , who slew Dengizic , and sent his head to Constantinople .	VII	482
4773	3466	467	Ricimer consents that Anthemius count of the east should be proclaimed emperor of the west, being a native of Constantinople , of an ancient, illustrious, and wealthy family, and who had married Marciana , the only daughter of the late

			(1072)
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ			Vol.	Page
			emperor Marcian , had been consul in 455, and general, and was a patrician, and refused the empire at the death of Marcian : Upon his coming to Rome he was received and proclaimed emperor by the senate and people, with all possible tokens of joy and respect. A few days after he gave his daughter in marriage to Ricimer .		VI	508
4773	3466	3467	Genferic incensed that Leo had not preferred Olybrius to the western empire, sends a powerful fleet, and ravages Peloponnesus and the Greek islands, and destroys all with fire and sword.		VI	508
4774	3467	468	Leo fits out a very great fleet, consisting of 1113 ships, with each 100 men, under the command of Basiliscus , his brother-in-law, and all the best troops of the west under the command of Marcellinus , who went and landed in Sardinia , and recovered the whole island, but was soon after assassinated by one of his officers. Heraclianus landed in Lybia , took Tripolis , defeated the Vandals , and reduced the whole province. Basiliscus arrives at cape Mercury , 30 miles from Carthage , where Genferic sends ambassadors to treat with him (and bribing him with a very large sum of money) Basiliscus made a short truce, during which time Genferic sailed out in the night with a great many fire ships, and set fire to the Roman fleet, and destroyed abundance of them, and put the whole into great confusion; during which Genferic's fleet fell upon them, took several, sunk others, and put the whole to flight, with the slaughter of 50,000 men: This expedition is said to have cost both empires above 130,000 pounds weight of gold.		VII	538
4774	3467	468	The Romans are totally routed out of Spain by Euric king of the Goths .		VII	515
4774	3467	468	The emperor Leo marries his daughter Ariadus to one Leo an Illyrian , to be a check upon Aspar , and raised him to the patrician rank, made him captain of his guards, and commander of all the armies in the east.		VI	510
4774	3467	468	Rumismund king of the Sueves sets down before Lisbon , which the governor Lusides , a Lusitanian , betrays to him: And the Goths surprise Merida , and commit dreadful ravages in the country, sparing neither Romans nor Sueves .		VI	510
4776	3469	470	Ella , &c. the Saxon , comes with fresh troops, and after defeating the Britains , possesses themselves of the sea coast of Suffex .		VI	446
4776	3469	470	Childeric extends his conquests as far as the Loire , and takes Paris , and then makes himself master of Angers , after having killed count Paul the Roman general.		VII	564
4777	3470	471	Leo and Aspar quarrelling, to reconcile them Leo marries one of his daughters to Patricius Secundus , Aspar's eldest son, and created Aspar Cesar , which heightening their natural pride, they plot against the emperor, which being discovered, Aspar is murdered by the eunuchs of the palace; upon which the Goths rise in Constantinople , and do great mischief: Zeno goes against them, and drove them out of the city with great slaughter, when they retire into Thrace , and commit great ravages; and being joined by the Goths in Pannonia , they take Philippi and Arcadiopolis : But upon the emperor's paying them a large sum of money they lay down their arms, and restore the cities, &c.		VI	511
4777	3470	471	Leo publishes several laws against the Arrians , deprived them of their liberty, and forbid them to hold any publick or private assemblies.		VI	511
4777	3470	471	All the British princes engage Ella , but are defeated.		IV	446
4777	3470	471	Euric king of the Visigoths gains great advantages over the Romans in Gaul .		VII	515
4778	3471	472	Ricimer revolts from Anthemius , and besieges him in Rome : The Romans , though afflicted with famine and the plague, made a stout resistance. Bilimer , the emperor's general in Gaul , comes to his assistance, but is overthrown by Ricimer ; who then taking the city by storm, permitted his men to commit the most dreadful ravages and cruelties: The emperor was put to death, and Olybrius proclaimed in his stead the 11th of July ; and the 19th of September following Ricimer died of a violent pain in his bowels; Olybrius likewise died at Rome the 23d of October following.		VI	511
4778	3471	472	Mount Vesuvius in Campania threw up such a vast quantity of fiery ashes as turned night into day even at Constantinople ; where the streets and houses were covered with ashes three inches thick.		VI	511
4779	3472	473	Glycerius at Ravenna proclaims himself emperor the 5th of March , supported by Gondibal , nephew of Ricimer . The Goths resolve to make war upon both empires, and send Vidimir to break into Italy ; but he dying soon after, Glycerius by rich presents prevails upon his son to retire, who goes into Gaul and joins the Visigoths , who thus strengthened, soon after conquer Gaul and Spain . Theodimir invades the eastern provinces, but dies soon, and is succeeded by his son called Theodoric the Great .		VI	511
4779	3472	473	Euric king of the Visigoths concludes a peace with the Romans .		VII	515
4779	3472	473	Leo proposes Zeno his son-in-law for emperor of the east, but is opposed by the senate and people of Constantinople . The emperor creates Leo , the son of Zeno and his daughter Ariadne , Cesar , and declared him partner with him in the empire, though but between 5 and 6 years of age.		VI	512
4780	3473	474	Leo the younger is consul alone, when the emperor Leo the elder was seized with a bloody flux and fever, of which he died in January , having reigned almost 17 years; and Zeno the father was declared colleague to Leo the son, through the mediation of the empress Verina . The ceremony was performed in February following, not in the palace of Hebdomon as usual, but in the circus at Constantinople ; but the young prince Leo died in November following, having reigned about 10 months.		VI	512
4780	3473	474	Leo the elder not approving of the promotion of Glycerius to the western empire, had named Julius Nepos , a Dalmatian , nephew of Marcellinus . Nepos goes from Constantinople , lands at Porto , and seizes Glycerius , took him prisoner, stripped him of the imperial ornaments, and caused him to be ordained bishop of Salona in Dalmatia , and reigned in his stead.		VI	512

(1073)			Vol. Pag.
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
4780	3473	474	VII	515
4781	3474	425
4781	3474	475	VI	513
4781	3474	475	VI	513
4781	3474	475	VI	513
4781	3474	475	VII	517
4782	3475	476	VII	539
4782	3475	476	VI	513
4782	3475	476	VII	539
4782	3475	476	VI	514
4783	3476	477	VII	599
4783	3476	477	VI	515
4783	3476	477	VI	515
4783	3476	477	VI	515
4784	3477	478	VII	595
4785	3478	479	VI	515
4785	3478	479	VI	515
			VI	515

Euric breaks peace with the Romans, and enters Auvergne with a great army.

Nepos having made Orestes general of the Roman forces that were going into Gaul, Orestes delays his march, and goes into Ravenna with an intent to seize Nepos, who being apprehensive of his design, fled by sea on the 28th of August to Salona in Dalmatia, where he was entertained by Glycerius, whom he had a little before deposed. Orestes proclaimed his son Augustus, though very young, emperor, the 29th of October. The new prince called himself Augustus Romulus Augustus, and Orestes took the administration upon himself as tutor and guardian to his son.

The Saracens break into the eastern empire, and committed dreadful ravages in Mesopotamia; and the Hunns in Thrace put all to fire and sword, the emperor Zeno minding nothing but lewdness and debauchery.

The empress dowager Verina exasperated against her son-in-law Zeno for his debaucheries, &c. whom she had advanced to the empire, conspires against him with her brother Basiliscus; he, conscious of his defects, when the affair was discovered to him, fled first to Chalcedon, and then into Isauria, and Basiliscus was declared emperor in his stead by the senate and people of Constantinople, upon which he created his wife Zenonides Augusta, and his son Marcus Caesar.

Auvergne is delivered to Euric by treaty, and a peace is concluded with the Romans.

Zeno the emperor makes peace with Geneseric king of the Vandals, and cedes Africa to him and his successors for ever.

The several Barbarians that served in the Roman army demand of Orestes a 3d part of Italy for their good services, which he refusing, they revolt, and choose one Odoacer for their leader, a private man in the guards of Augustus, a person of extraordinary parts both natural and acquired, and then marched against Orestes, who took refuge in Pavia, which Odoacer took by assault, and first plundered and then reduced it to ashes. Orestes being taken prisoner, Odoacer carried him to Placentia, and put him to death the 28th of August, being the same day he had deprived Nepos of the empire. He then went to Ravenna, where Paul the brother of Orestes was with the young emperor; he put Paul to death, stripped Augustus of the imperial robes, and confined him to Lucullanum, a castle in Campania, and made him a handsome allowance to live on.

Geneseric makes peace with Odoacer king of Italy, and grants him the islands of Sicily.

Rome readily submitted to Odoacer, whereupon he proclaimed himself king of Italy, but refused the purple, and so put an end to the title of emperor in the west, five hundred years after the battle of Actium, when the Roman monarchy was first established, and 1229 years after the foundation of Rome.

Odoacer grants the Heruli leave and lands to settle in Italy.

Zeno being fled into Isauria, Basiliscus sends Illus and Trocondes, two of his generals, with an army after him; upon which Zeno shuts himself up in a castle, which they besiege for some time, during which Basiliscus becoming hateful at Constantinople, the senate ordered Illus and Trocondes to join Zeno and bring him back against Basiliscus; which being done, Basiliscus dispatches Harmatius, his kinsman with a great army against them, who notwithstanding he had solemnly sworn to be true to Basiliscus, as soon as he had crossed the Bosphorus joined Zeno upon conditions: Thus strengthened, Zeno enters Constantinople without opposition. Basiliscus with his wife and son flies to the great church, and there resigned his crown upon the altar, and soon after perished with hunger and cold in the castle of Limnos in Cappadocia, whither Zeno had sent him and his family.

Zeno being restored in the month of June, according to his promise raised Harmatius to be general of the household troops, and his son Basiliscus to be Caesar, but soon after murdered the father, deposed the son, and made him reader in a church near Constantinople, who was afterwards ordained bishop of Cyzicus.

A great fire happens at Constantinople, that consumed the biggest part of the city, with the library, containing 120,000 volumes, among which were the works of Homer, written in golden characters on the great gut of a dragon 120 foot long.

Audacrius king of the Saxons, and Childeric king of the Franks, march against the Alemans settled among the Alps, and stripped them of the booty they had lately brought out of Italy.

Theodorus son of Triarius, who had espoused the cause of Basiliscus, broke into Thrace with a numerous army of Goths, and advanced within four miles of Constantinople; which so frightened Zeno, that he made peace with him upon his own terms.

Marcian, the son of Anthemius emperor in the west, claiming the empire in right of his wife Leontia, eldest daughter of the late emperor Leo, suddenly attacked the imperial palace at Constantinople, at the head of some desperate malecontents; but not carrying his point, Zeno bribed his companions, and he flew into a church, from whence being dragged, he was ordained a priest, and confined to a monastery near Cæsarea in Cappadocia, by the emperor's order.

Theodoric breaks into Macedon, and goes into Epirus, where by the treachery of one Sidimont, a Goth, Duras is delivered to him: But Sabinianus, Zeno's general having surprized and cut to pieces Theudimont, brother of Theodoric, as he was coming with a large reinforcement, and taken all their baggage, with 2000 waggons loaded with provisions, forced Theodoric to abandon Duras, and to retire with great precipitation into Pannonia.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4786	3479	480	Zeno makes peace and enters into an alliance with Huneric , son of Genserik king of the Vandals .	VI	515
4786	3479	480	The Goths make themselves masters of all the places the Romans held in Gaul .	VII	516
4786	3479	480	The Gepidae defeat the Huns with great slaughter, and recover both their ancient lands and liberty.	VII	596
4787	3480	481	Theodoric again breaks into Macedon and Thessaly , and in two years time obliged Zeno to yield to him part of lower Dacia and Mæsia , make him general of the household troops, and consul in the year 483; upon these conditions in 482 he retired, restored Larissa the metropolis of Thessaly , and engaged to defend the empire with all his forces.	VI	516
4788	3481	482	Clodoveus , or Clovis , upon his father Childeric's death, succeeded him in his kingdom.	VI	566
4788	3481	482	Soon after the death of Varanus the 6th. who was killed in battle by the Huns , with almost all his whole army, the Persians chose Obolus his brother, called also Valens , to succeed him, an excellent prince, but hated because he loved peace.	IV	343
4789	3482	483	Leontinus , a native of Chalcis in Syria , and commander of the troops in that province, pretends himself emperor: Zeno sends Illus the captain of his guards against him, who instead of opposing, joined him, and ravaged Syria and Isauria . Longinus the emperor's brother goes against them; but his whole army is cut to pieces, and himself taken prisoner; and then the rebels entered Antioch in triumph. Then Zeno sends one John , his general, who prevailed upon Theodoric to join him; they go, engage, and overthrow the rebels near Seleucia .	VI	516
4790	3483	484	Leontinus and Illus are besieged in the strong castle of Papyra in Cilicia by John , and Theodoric returned to Constantinople : Trocundris brother of Illus being taken prisoner by John , was beheaded.	VI	516
4790	3483	484	Euric dies, after having reigned upwards of eighteen years, and conquered the greatest part of Gaul and Spain .	VII	516
4791	3484	485	The Bulgarians break into Thrace , but are drove back, and forced to repass the Danube , by Theodoric the Roman general.	VI	625
4792	3485	486	Zeno disobliging Theodoric , he breaks into Thrace with a great army, and puts all to fire and sword, and advanced within 15 miles of Constantinople . Zeno cedes all Italy to Theodoric , upon which he returns to Novæ in Mæsia .	VI	516
4792	3485	486	Valens , or Obelas , king of Persia , dying, is succeeded by his nephew Cavadus .	IV	343
4793	3486	487	Hengist having joined the Picts and Scots , is engaged by Ambrosius , who gave him a total overthrow.	VII	446
4793	3486	487	Clodoveus makes war upon Syagrius the Roman governor, overcomes and beheads him, after the taking of Soissons .	VII	567
4794	3487	488	Theodoric enters Italy , overcomes Odoacer in several battles, and settles a new kingdom in Italy .	VI	516
4794	3487	488	Leontinus and Illus having bravely defended themselves and the castle of Papyra , for four years, were at last taken by treachery and put to death, and their heads sent to Constantinople .	VI	516
4794	3487	488	Hengist king of Kent dies, and is succeeded by his son Eik .	VII	446
4794	3487	488	The Goths in great multitudes, with their wives and children, and all their effects, set out from Novæ in Mæsia for Italy .	VII	523
4795	3488	489	Zeno puts several persons of great distinction to death, and confiscates their estates under pretence of having favoured Leontinus and Illus .	VI	657
4795	3488	489	The Goths encounter and defeat Odoacer , and make themselves masters of Milan , Pavia , &c.	VII	524
4796	3489	490	Zeno having been told by an astrologer that one Pelagius , a patrician of great distinction, should succeed him in the empire, put him to death.	VI	517
4796	3489	490	The Goths besiege Odoacer king of Italy in Ravenna .	VII	524
4796	3489	490	The Burgundians , under the conduct of their king Gundebald , entering Italy under the pretence of assisting Odoacer the king against Theodoric the Ostrogoth , committed so great ravages in Liguria , that what with the number they put to the sword, and the number they carried away captive, left so few behind, that there were not sufficient to till the ground.	VII	584
4797	3490	491	Zeno the emperor dies, in the 66th year of his age, and 18th of his reign, one of the most debauched weakest princes that had ever reigned in the east. Longinus his brother set up to succeed him, but was rejected upon account of his lewd and wicked life; and by the interest of the empress dowager Ariadne , Anastatius was declared emperor by the senate, and crowned the 11th of April in the Circus , by Euphemius patriarch of Constantinople , who obliged him to swear to protect the catholic church, and maintain the doctrines of the councils of Nice and Chalcedon .	VI	517
4797	3490	491	The Heruli compel their king Rodolphus , without any provocation, to make war upon the Lombards , are by them overthrown with great slaughter, and the remainder obliged to live in subjection to the conquerors, or leave their own habitations; upon which many of them went and settled in the country of the Rugians , now Switzerland .	VII	599
4797	3490	491	Ella founds the second Saxon kingdom in Britain , called the kingdom of the south Saxons in Essex , &c.	VII	447
4798	3491	492	Longinus , the late emperor Zeno's brother, raising disturbances in Constantinople , is seized, deprived of all his employments, and himself and all his countrymen, the Isaurians , sent back to Isauria their native place; upon which the whole people revolt, and raise an army of 150,000 men: Anastatius sends his best troops against them, who engages, cuts great numbers to pieces, defeats and drives them into the mountains.	VI	518

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
4799	3492	493	Anastasius taxing the Constantinopolitans against their inclination, they rise, pull down his statues, and Ariadne's , and drag them about the streets.	VI 519
4799	3492	493	Odoacer submits to Theodoric king of the Goths , and is soon after murdered; upon which Theodoric is proclaimed king of Italy , and acknowledged as such by Anastasius the emperor.	VII 525
4800	3493	494	Diogenes , one of Anastasius's generals, is besieged in Claudiopolis , the metropolis of Isauria , by Conon , an Isaurian bishop, and reduced to great straits, but is relieved by John , surnamed Gibbus , who falls unexpectedly upon the rebels, and cuts many of them to pieces, and forces them to raise the siege: The bishop died soon after of the wounds he received in the battle.	VI 519
4802	3495	496	The Alemans out of Alsace , joined by those of Switzerland , enter Germania Secunda , belonging to the Riparian Franks , and put all to fire and sword.	VII 526
4803	3496	497	John the Scythians general for the emperor Anastasius , intirely defeats the Isaurian rebels, and takes the two heads of them prisoners, viz. Longinus , brother to the late emperor Zeno , and Theodosius , who were put to death, and their heads sent to Constantinople .	VI 195
4803	3496	497	Cavadus king of Persia intoxicated with pride and power, grew hateful to his subjects, particularly for an edict he made, that all the women in the empire should be common to all the men therein: for which he was deposed and cast into prison, and Zambades (by some called his son, by others his brother, &c.) elected in his stead.	IV 343
4803	3496	497	Clovis king of the Franks , with Albofeda his sister, and three thousand of his subjects, are baptized into the Christian faith by Remigius bishop of Rheims .	VII 569
4804	3497	498	The rest of the chief ringleaders of the Isaurian rebellion are taken and sent in chains to Constantinople . Most of the cities of this province of Isauria having been ruined during the war, which lasted six years, the inhabitants that were left were removed into Thrace .	VII 519
4804	3497	498	The emperor Anastasius refusing to set some prisoners at liberty who had been taken in a riot, very narrowly escapes being sacrificed in the Circus by the enraged populace, who finding themselves opposed by the soldiery, set fire to the Hippodrome , which consumed it, and several other stately edifices, with the square of Constantine , in which there was not one single house left standing.	VI 519
4804	3497	498	The Arabs and Saracens break into Palestine and Syria , but Romanus governor of Palestine , and Eugenius , commander of the Roman troops in Syria , drove them back, and recovered the island of Jotape in the Red Sea from the Saracens .	VI 520
4804	3497	498	The Armorici , a people between the Loire and the Seine , having formed themselves into a republick, submit voluntarily to Clovis , and become one nation with the Franks ; upon which the Roman troops surrender the places they held, and enter into the service of Clovis , which ended the Roman dominion, after they had been masters of Gaul more than 500 years.	VII 571
4805	3498	499	Neocesarea , and several other cities in Pontus , are almost utterly ruined by an earthquake.	VI 520
4805	3498	499	The Bulgarians break into Thrace , and commit great ravages, and utterly defeat Aristus the Roman general, and carry off great booty and many prisoners.	VII 623
4807	3500	501	The blue and green factions quarrelling in the Circus at Constantinople , 3000 of the former were killed.	VI 520
4807	3500	501	Cavadus , the deposed king of Persia , having escaped out of prison by the love and loyalty of his queen, goes to the Euthalites , whose king entertained him courteously, gave him his daughter in marriage, and furnished him with money, &c. by which means holding correspondence with some of the Persian nobility, he was this year restored to his crown. Zambades had his eyes put out, and was then imprisoned, &c.	IV 345
4808	3501	502	The Bulgarians break anew into Thrace , and the Saracens into Palestine , and commit dreadful ravages in these two provinces.	VI 520
4808	3501	502	Cavadus being dunned by his father-in law, king of the Euthalite Hunns , to repay him the vast sums he had advanced for him, enters Armenia , and seizes upon the effects of the people, took Amida by storm, cut the Roman army to pieces, and with the plunder paid his debts.	IV 345
4809	3502	503	The Romans under Celer enter Arzamea , a Persian province, and lay it waste. The Hunns making a sudden irruption into Persia , the Romans besiege Amida , and have it delivered upon paying 50 talents.	VI 520
4810	3503	504	A truce is made between the Persians and Romans for seven years, which lasted twenty.	VI 521
4811	3504	505	One Mondo , a Goth , with some of his countrymen, seized a strong hold called Herta , from whence he made frequent incursions into the Roman territories: The emperor sends Sabinianus against him; Theodoric assists Mondo , and overthrows Sabinianus , and forced him to shut himself up in the castle of Nato .	VI 521
4813	3506	507	The emperor Anastasius built the famous wall, called the Long Wall , 20 foot broad, distant from the city 280 furlongs, extending from sea to sea, at Constantinople , and defended the empire against the sudden irruptions of the barbarous nations.	VI 521
4813	3506	507	Clovis wars upon Alaric king of the Visigoths , and in a battle in the plain of Fougle near Poitiers gave them a total overthrow, cutting off the greatest part of his troops, and killing Alaric with his own hand. The emperor Anastasius sends to complement him upon his victory, and presented him with the consular ornaments, and a diadem, which he accepted, and was called consul.	VII 575

Anastatius

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Pag.
4814	3507	508	Anastasius repairs and fortifies Daras on the Cardus , a frontier town towards Persia , about 15 miles from Nisibis , and three from Carrhae .	VI	521
4815	3508	509	Theodoric king of the Visigoths having defeated the army of Clovis , they conclude a peace.	VII	577
4816	3509	510	Clovis being honoured with the consular dignity from the emperor Anastasius , moves his habitation from Tours to Paris .	VII	577
4816	3509	510	Clovis is proclaimed king of the Riparian Franks , another tribe of the same people, whose territories are incorporated with those of Clovis .	VII	557
4816	3509	510	Clovis seizes and murders Chararic , king of another body of Franks , settled in the bishoprics of Bologne , St. Omer , Bruges , and Ghent , and his son, and incorporates his subjects and dominions into his own.	VII	579
4816	3509	510	Ragnacharius king of Cambray , having rendered himself odious to his own people, Clovis enters his kingdom with a great army, overcomes Ragnacharius , and kills him and his brother, and also another brother called Regnomer , king of Mons , and seizes all their dominions, and so becomes king of all Gaul .	VII	580
4817	3510	511	Clovis orders a council at Orleans to be held, for the regulating church affairs.	VII	569
4818	3511	512	The Heruli are allowed to settle in Thrace , where lands are allotted them, upon their promise to live quietly, and assist the empire when occasion called for their help.	VI	521
4819	3512	513	The emperor Anastasius favouring the Eutychians , at their instigation, drove Macedonius , the orthodox patriarch of Constantinople , from his see, and put Timotheus an Eutychian in his stead, (the like was done in many other places) who by introducing novelties in the public worship, created such great and pernicious disturbances, that 10000 of the inhabitants were killed in a riot, and several houses burnt, &c.	VI	521
4820	3513	514	Vitalianus , one of the emperor's generals, espouses the cause of the Catholic bishops, comes to Constantinople at the head of a numerous army, threatens to depose Anastasius , if he did not restore the deposed bishops, and drive out the Eutychians ; the emperor refuses; Vitalianus conquered Mæsia and Thrace , took Cyril governor of Thrace prisoner, and then returns to Constantinople , where Anastasius promised to stop the persecution, restore the deposed bishops, and call and stand to the decision of an oecumenical council. Vitalianus retires and disbands his army, and Anastasius breaks his word.	VI	522
4820	3513	514	Cerdic the Saxon , after having been twenty-four years in Britain , and got large territories, set up the third Saxon kingdom, by the name of the West Saxons .	VII	449
4822	3515	516	Gundebald king of the Burgundians dies, and is succeeded by his son Sigismund .	VII	585
4823	3516	517	The northern Barbarians called Getæ break into Illyricum , laid Macedon and Epirus waste, defeat Pompeius the emperor's nephew, near Adrianople , penetrate into Thessaly , and then return beyond the Danube , with an immense booty, and a prodigious number of captives.	VI	522
4824	3517	518	The emperor Anastasius was found dead in his chamber on the 9th of July , in the 88th year of his age, and 28th of his reign. The soldiers of the household proclaimed Justin , then præfectus prætorio, emperor, a person of a mean and obscure family in Thrace . Soon after a conspiracy was formed against him; but being discovered, and the ringleaders executed, he reigned without opposition.	VI	523
4825	3518	519	Justin restores all the orthodox bishops to their sees, and discourages all sorts of heresies; and assembles several synods, wherein Eutychianism was particularly condemned.	VI	523
4826	3519	520	Vitalianus being made consul, cabals against Justin , and is murdered in the palace by the emperor's orders.	VI	523
4827	3520	521	Cabades king of Persia proposes that Justin the Roman emperor should adopt Cosroes his youngest son, whom he had declared his successor; but this being refused, he enters Iberia , whose king applies to Justin , who sends an army under Sittas , and the famous Bellisarius , who enter Persian Armenia , and laid it waste; but engaging Narjes and Aratius , two Persian generals, were put to flight.	IV	346
4828	3521	522	Narjes and Aratius , two brothers and Persian generals, revolt from Cabades , and serve under Bellisarius in Italy , and then Bellisarius goes to Daras on the frontiers of Persia .	523 VI
4828	3521	522	Sigismund king of the Burgundians causes his son Sigeric to be inhumanly murdered.	VII	585
4829	3522	523	Sigismund is defeated by Clodomir king of the Franks , and is delivered up by his own subjects, who submit to the Franks . The Franks throw Sigismund , and his wife and children, into a deep well, where they are all drowned.	VII	586
4830	3523	524	The Burgundians revolt from the Franks , and proclaim Godemar , brother of Sigismund , their king; upon which war breaks out between them, and in a pitch'd battle the Burgundians were put to flight, but the Franks following too rashly, they, and Clodomir their king, are surrounded and cut to pieces, and Clodomir 's head carried by the Burgundians in triumph upon a spear; upon which peace is concluded, and all those countries that had been surrendered to the Franks , are return'd to Godemar .	VII	587
4831	3524	525	Justin by an edict deprives the Arrians of all their churches throughout his dominions, which created a misunderstanding with Theodoric king of Italy , who was a zealous Arrian . The city of Antioch is almost utterly overthrown by an earthquake, and great numbers of the inhabitants buried in the ruins, with Euphrasius their bishop. The cities of Epidamnus , Corinth , and Anazarbus in

Cilicia,

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1077)	Vol. Pag.
			Cilicia , underwent the same fate; but were repaired at the emperor's ex- pence.	VI
4832	3525	526	The Lombards under Audoinus are allowed to settle in Pannonia , by the emperor Justinian .	VII 617
4832	3525	526	Styrax and Glonas , two kings of the Hunns , being stirred up by Cabades king of Persia , against the emperor Justinian , with whom he was at war, breaks into the empire with two powerful armies; but Boarex , widow of Balach , king of the Sabirite Hunns , led to the Romans assistance an army of 100,000 men, en- counters the two kings, destroys their armies, takes Styrax prisoner, and sends him in chains to Constantinople .	VII 483
4832	3525	526	The Heruli having murdered their king, send ambassadors into Thule or Scandi- navia , to fetch them one of the blood royal, many of them residing there.	VII 600
4833	3526	527	The emperor Justin the first of April declares his nephew Justinian partner with him in the empire. Justin dies the beginning of August following, in the 77th year of his age, and 10th of his reign, and Justinian became sole em- peror.	VI 524
4833	3526	527	The fourth Saxon kingdom is founded in Britain by Erchenwen , and called the kingdom of the East Saxons .	VII 450
4834	3527	528	Justinian orders Bellisarius to build a fort in Mindon , to be a check on the Per- sians . Cavades king of Persia comes against him, they engage, the Persians are victors, and great numbers of the Romans were killed and taken prisoners, and the Persians levelled the fort with the ground.	VI 524
4835	3528	529	Bellisarius is made general of the east, and ordered to make an inroad into Persia . Pirofes the Persian general meets him near Daras ; they engage, and the Persians are defeated with the loss of 5000 men. The Romans were as successful in Armenia , where they take a great many Persian cities.	IV 347
4836	3529	530	The Persians under the command of Azarethes , joined by a vast number of Sa- racens , commanded by Alamundarius their king, engage Bellisarius ; and after an obstinate fight, put the Romans to the rout.	IV 347
4837	3530	531	The Persians still continued the war, and got advantages over the Romans , ra- vaged the country, and put all to fire and sword.	IV 347
4838	3531	532	Cavades king of Persia dies, and his youngest son Cosroes succeeds him in the kingdom. The Persians and Romans conclude an eternal peace, by which the Romans were to pay 1000 lb. weight of gold, and both parties were to return the places taken, &c.	IV 349
4838	3531	532	A rebellion broke out in Constantinople , upon account of the avaricious practices of two ministers, John the prefectus prætorio, and Trebonianus the quæstor, and Hypatius the emperor's nephew was proclaimed emperor. Anastasius de- posed the two accused officers; but the senators joining the populace, Hypa- tius was carried by violence into the Circus , and proclaimed there: but Beli- sarius the emperor's general, and Mundus governor of Illyricum came with their troops, and fell upon the unarm'd multitude, and killed 3000 of them; took Hypatius and likewise Pompeius , another of the emperor's nephews, who were both beheaded, and the estates of those senators concerned were for the present confiscated, but soon after restored.	VI 526
4838	3531	532	The Franks break the peace with the Burgundians , and under Chillebert and Clotharius enter their territories, besiege Augustodunum , now Autun , ob- lige Godemar their king to save himself by flight, and in 534 made themselves masters of his kingdom.	VII 587
4839	3532	533	Athalaric king of the Astrogths in Italy dies, and his mother reigns in his stead, and chuses Theodotus her cousin for her colleague, who imprisons her.	VII 650
4839	from 3532 to	533	The emperor being engaged with the Goths in Italy , the Hunns enter Illyricum , lay the country waste, take thirty-two castles, and destroyed Cassandria , and return home unmolested with immense booty and 100,000 captives; the Ar- menians shake off the Roman yoke; the Persians enter Syria , take and plunder Bozæa , Hierapolis , and many other places; and then besiege and take Anti- och , plunder the town, murder the people, and then reduced the city to ashes, and what few inhabitants remained, carried away captive, and sold them for slaves; and then conclude a peace, upon condition that the Romans should pay 500 lb. weight of gold down, 500 lb. annually, &c. and in his re- turn plundered the cities of Apamea and Chalcis , and laid waste Mesopotamia , carrying off vast booty, and a great number of captives.	IV 352
4847	3540	541
4840	3533	534	Amalsuntha , queen of the Ostrogths , murdered by order of Theodatus , for which the emperor Justinian proclaims war against him.	VII 651
4841	3534	535	Bellisarius takes Palermo from the Goths , and makes himself master of Sicily , &c.	VII 652
4843	3536	537	Theodatus king of the Goths is by them first deposed, and Vitiges proclaimed king in his stead, and then murdered.	VII 654
4843	3536	537	The Gepidæ join'd by the Heruli begin to plunder the neighbouring provinces; upon which Justinian sends his best generals against them, who drive them en- tirely out of Illyricum , and force them into Dacia beyond the Danube .	VII 596
4844	3537	538	The Goths , after losing abundance of their men, are compelled to raise the siege of Rome by Bellisarius , who cut off vast numbers of them in their retreat, and forced many into the river.	VII 658
4845	3538	539	The Franks invade Italy , though they had engaged to help the emperor.	VII 661
4845	3538	539	The Hunns pass the Danube in great multitudes, and lay waste Thrace , Greece , Illyricum , and all the provinces from the Ionian sea to the suburbs of Constan- tinople , &c. and return home with incredible booty, after having committed all manner of cruelties.	VII 483
4845	3538	539	The Bulgarians are defeated by the Romans , and both their kings killed.	VII 623

Y. of World	Y. of Hood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Fol.
4846	3539	540	The Bulgarians come again into Thrace , which they plunder and lay waste far and near; but being attack'd by Mundus governor of Illyricum , are totally overcome, most of them being cut to pieces, and the remainder carried prisoners to Constantinople , where the emperor ordered part to be incorporated among his troops, and the rest to be transplanted into Armenia and Lazica .	VII 664
4846	3539	540	Belisarius proclaimed king of Italy , and admitted into Ravenna , &c. but is called to Constantinople by the emperor, whither he carries Vigitts king of the Goths and vast plunder.	VII 663
4847	3540	541	Hdebold is chose king of Italy ; but behaving disagreeably, Vilas one of his guards gave him so violent a stroke on the neck with his sword, as he was seating his nobility, that his head dropp'd on the table with the meat in his fingers, and is succeeded by Eraric .	VII 664
4848	3541	542	The Goths displeased with Eraric , murder him, and proclaim Totila king of Italy in his stead.	VII 665
4848	3541	542	Arthur the great British king dies, and is said to be succeeded by his cousin Constantine .	VII 450
4848	3541	542	The Lazians , a people between the Euxine and Caspian seas, being grievously oppressed by the Roman troops, revolted from the Romans to the Persians , and delivered up all their strong holds and castles to them, who drove out the Roman and put Persian garrisons in their stead. Belisarius the Roman general enters Persia , lays waste Assyria , &c.	IV 353
4849	3542	543	Totila king of the Goths recovers Tuscany , and several other places in Italy .	VII 666
4849	3542	543	Cosirhoes invades the Roman territories afresh; a dreadful plague rages in Persia , yet he overthrew 30,000 Romans , as they attempted to break into Persia , with only 4000 Persians .	IV 354
4850	3543	544	Cosirhoes orders Gubazes king of the Lazians to be murdered, and the people to be transplanted; but before it could be executed, 'twas discovered. Gubazes submits to Justinian , who sends him 8000 men, with whom and his own people joined together he has several encounters with the Persians , and at last cut off and drove them all out of his country, upon which a truce for five years is concluded between the Persians and Romans .	IV 356
4853	3546	547	Totila king of the Goths takes and plunders Rome , but spares the lives of the inhabitants and soldiers.	VII 669
4853	3546	547	Ida founded the fifth Saxon kingdom in Britain , and called it the kingdom of Northumberland .	VII 450
4856	3549	550	Totila takes Rome a second time, by the treachery of the Isaurians .	VII 672
4856	3549	550	The Persians invade Lazica , and take the strong castle of Telepus , and then put the Romans to flight. Gubazes complains to Justinian of the cowardice of his generals, which to exasperated them, that they murder him. The Lazians are going to revolt, but Justinian appeases them by ordering all concerned in the murder to be executed, and making the brother of the deceased, king in his stead. 60,000 Persians besiege Phasis in Lazica ; Justin commander of the Romans falls upon them, kills 12000 on the spot, and forced the rest to run away; upon this Cosirhoes sue to Justinian for peace, which is mutually agreed to.	IV 357
4858	3551	552	The Gepidae enter the territories of the Lombards , and destroy all with fire and sword; but the Lombards receiving assistance from Justinian the emperor, entirely overthrow the Gepidae .	VII 579
4859	3552	553	The Lombards , after assisting the Romans , are sent home loaded with rich presents for their good services.	VII 618
4859	3552	553	The Goths , by submitting to the Romans , put an end to their government in Italy .	VII 678
4864	3557	558	The Hunns come into Thrace , &c. Belisarius defeats and puts them to flight with a very few men; but they hearing of his disgrace, upon his return to Constantinople , return again and ravage all the country, coming before the royal city. Germanus heading the imperial troops, fell upon them, slew great numbers, and obliged the rest to fly.	VII 484
4864	3557	558	A violent earthquake overturned many stately buildings and churches at Constantinople , which destroyed a vast number of people; and then a terrible plague broke out, that swept away vast numbers.	VI 569
4865	3558	559	Belisarius , the famous Roman general, after many years severe service, and obtaining many extraordinary victories, falls a victim to the malicious accusations of his enemies, and is deprived of all his honours and employments, and confined to his house at Constantinople .	VI 529
4866	3559	560	Sigebert king of Mentz engages the Hunns upon the banks of the Elbe , and entirely routs them.	VII 485
4867	3560	561	Ethelbert king of Kent kindles a civil war among the Saxon kings in Britain .	VII 451
4867	3560	561	The emperor Justinian convinced of the injury done to his faithful servant and valiant general Belisarius , restores him to all his honours and commands.	VI 530
4871	3564	565	Marcellus , Sergius and Ablavius , three chief officers in the court of the emperor Justinian , conspire his death, are detected and executed, and many banished, but the emperor died soon after, in the 39th year of his reign, and was succeeded by his nephew Justin , son of his sister Vigilantia , who was unanimously proclaim'd by the senate, and crown'd by John patriarch of Constantinople .	VI 530
4872	3565	566	The people grumbling at the discontinuance of the name and office of consul, Justin revives it, after it had been omitted twenty-five years, and entered upon that office the first of January of this year.	VI 531
4872	3567	568	The emperor Justin causes his kinsman Justin to be seized and carried to Alexandria , and there murdered, because the people loved him.	UI 531
4874	3567	568	Longinus alters the ancient manner of government in Italy , and settles in every city a governor, which he called a duke, and took upon himself the name of

(1079)

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
			exarch, or governor of the whole, under the emperor, which continued till the year of Christ 751.	VII 679
4874	3567	568	The Lombards invade Italy, and make themselves masters of several cities, and found a kingdom which lasted 200 years.	VII 619
4875	3568	569	Alboinus king of the Lombards, having taken Prin , erected it into a duchy, which continues so to this day.	VII 620
4875	3568	569	The inhabitants of Perfarmeria , being cruelly persecuted by the Persians , for professing the Christian religion, revolt to the Romans . Cosroes invades and over-runs Syria and Mesopotamia ; but Justin being seized with madness, the empress Sophia writes to him in such moving terms, that in 572 a peace for three years was concluded.	VI 357
4876	3569	570	Alboinus is proclaimed king of Italy, and makes Paria his residence, and the metropolis of his kingdom.	VII 620
4877	3570	571	Clephis king of the Lombards, and Messana his queen is murdered by his subjects, for his cruelty towards them.	VII 622
4877	3570	571	The Lombards shake off monarchy, and are governed by dukes.	VII 622
4878	3571	572	Cunimundus king of the Gepidae enter the Lombards country with a numerous army, and commits most cruel ravages. Alboinus king of the Lombards raises a great army, and engages the Gepidae ; and after a very doubtful and obstinate battle, the Gepidae fly, and are pursued by the victorious Lombards, with so great slaughter, that scarce one is left alive. Alboinus slew Cunimundus with his own hand, and cutting off his head, turned his skull into a cup, which he used to drink out of upon all public occasions. The Lombards seized upon all their land in Dacia , and obliged the people to submit to them, or go into other countries, and so ended the kingdom of the Gepidae .	VII 597
4878	3571	572	The empress Sophia prevails on the senate to advance Tiberius the Thracian to the government during her husband's illness.	VI 532
4879	3572	573	Justin influenced by his wife Sophia , raises Tiberius to the dignity of Cæsar , and relights to him the whole management of affairs.	VI 532
4880	3573	574	Cosroes king of Persia breaks into Perfarmeria as soon as the truce between him and the Romans expired, and marched to besiege Cæsarea , the capital of Cappadocia : Justinian the Roman general meets him, engages, and puts him intirely to the rout; which so affects Cosroes , that he soon after fell sick and died of grief, after reigning 48 years.	IV 358
4880	3573	574	Alboinus, the first Lombard king of Italy, is murdered by Helinchild , his shield-bearer, at the instigation of the queen.	VII 621
4883	3576	577	Hormisdas II. succeeds his father Cosroes in the kingdom of Persia , a prince every way unable to support so great a burthen.	IV 359
4887	3580	481	Justin dies, and is succeeded by Tiberius in the empire, who owned Anastasia for his wife, and made her Augusta ; which so exasperated Sophia the empress dowager, (who expected him to marry her) that she conspires to set Justinian upon the throne; but Tiberius strips her of all her wealth, and puts Mauritius in the place of Justinian , and peace was restored again.	VI 533
4888	3581	482	Mauritius engages and entirely overthrows Hormisdas king of Persia , took the camp with all the royal plate and treasure, and an incredible number of prisoners, all which he sent to Constantinople . Hormisdas fits out another army, which Mauritius likewise overthrows, took an immense booty, and whole nations of slaves. Upon Mauritius 's return to Constantinople , Tiberius gives him his daughter in marriage, and raises him to the dignity of Cæsar , and a peace is concluded with the Persians .	IV 360
4891	3584	585	Creda the Saxon founds the seventh Saxon kingdom in Britain, and calls it Mercia .	VII 453
4891	3584	585	Uffa the Saxon founds the 6th Saxon kingdom in Britain, and calls it the kingdom of the West-Angles .	VII 452
4891	3584	585	The Lombards restore monarchy among them, and choose Autharis , son of Clephis , for their king.	VII 622
4892	3585	586	The emperor Tiberius dies, greatly lamented for his extraordinary care of his people, and is succeeded by his son-in-law Mauritius .	VI 534
4895	3588	589	Hormisdas king of Persia breaks the peace concluded with the Romans , but is defeated in several battles with prodigious slaughter.	IV 360
4896	3589	590	A terrible earthquake at Antioch destroys almost the whole city, and buries 30,000 persons in its ruins.	VI 535
4896	3589	590	Autharis king of the Lombards poisoned.	VII 684
4897	3590	591	Sittas , the architect, a citizen of Martyropolis , betrays that great city and important place into the hands of the Persians , from whom Germanus the Roman general some time after retook it.	IV 360
4897	3590	591	Agilulf duke of Turin marries Theudelinda , wife of Autharis , and is proclaimed king of the Lombards.	VII 684
4899	3592	593	Hormisdas king of Persia behaving very haughtily, cruelly, &c. is deposed, has his eyes bored out with red hot irons, and cast into prison, and his son Cosroes put in his stead, who ordered his father to be put to death, which so dissatisfied the Persians , that they drove him out of the kingdom; who flying to the emperor Mauritius at Constantinople , is by him kindly received, and assisted with an army that reinstated him upon his throne, and a peace is concluded between the two princes.	IV 363
4900	3593	594	The Avari having broke into Thrace , and taken many strong places, the emperor Mauritius goes against them, and after various battles, is forced to buy a peace.	VI 535
4901	3594	595	Chagan king of the Avari , together with the Gepidae , Sclavi , &c. enter the Roman dominions, swearing they would utterly demolish the Roman name, and established

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Vol.
			establish a new empire over all people and nations, and after laying Thrace waste, advanced towards Constantinople ; but a violent plague breaking out in their army, swept off multitudes, among whom were seven of Chagan's sons: Chagan offering to set 12,000 Romans at liberty for a small ransom, which Mauritius refusing to pay, he put them all to death, which occasioned a mutiny in the Roman army, and a great tumult at Constantinople .	VI	536
4903	3596	597	The Avari renew their ravages, and are defeated in five successive battles by Priscus the Roman general, who cutting off 30,000 of them, drove the remainder out of the Roman dominions.	VI	536
4908	3601	602	The emperor Mauritius commanding his brother Peter to cross the Danube and winter in the enemies' country, so exasperated the soldiers, that they mutiny and proclaim one Phocas , a centurion, emperor. The populace at Constantinople rise, and force Maurice to embark in disguise, with his wife and children, in a small ship; but being driven back by contrary winds, takes refuge in the church of Autonomus the martyr, about twenty miles distant from Constantinople , whither Phocas comes, and is crowned with loud acclamations in the church of St. John Baptist , with his wife Leontia , by the patriarch.	VI	536
4908	3601	602	In the publick sports at Constantinople a contest happening between the Blue and the Green , Phocas sends his guards to quell the uproar, who using the tribune of the Blue roughly, they cry out, Maurice was yet alive, who would do them justice; upon which Phocas ordered Maurice to be dragged out of his sanctuary, and after killing five of his sons before his face, beheaded him, and put many of his friends and relations to death afterwards.	VI	536
4909	3602	603	Phocas sends his own and his wife Leontia's images to Rome , which are received by Gregory the Great , bishop of Rome , with great respect, and lodged in the oratory of the martyr Casarius ; but Phocas behaving very cruelly, he grew hateful to the people.	VI	537
4910	3603	604	Narfes , commander of the Roman forces on the borders of Persia , revolts, and is joined by Cosroes king of Persia , who defeat and kill Germanus , who was sent against them, and some time afterwards they also defeated Leontinus . Phocas by solemn oaths and large promises prevails upon Narfes to lay down his arms and return home; as soon as Phocas had him in his power he ordered him to be burnt alive, to the great grief of the Romans .	VI	537
4711	3604	605	Agilulf king of the Lombards in Italy declares his son Adaluald (or Aldonald) yet an infant, his colleague, and causes him to be openly crowned with great solemnity.	VII	688
4912	3605	606	Phocas sends ambassadors with large presents to Cosroes king of Persia , in order to make peace, who rejects all his offers, ravages Mesopotamia and Asia , and carries off immense booty.	IV	366
4913	3606	607	Constantina , widow of the late emperor Maurice , is rack'd, and confesses that several of the great officers were conspiring with her to set her son Theodosius on the throne; for which she and many of the grandees are put to death, and also three of her daughters, and multitudes daily imprisoned, where they died miserably.	VI	538
4914	3607	608	Cosroes lays waste Syria , Palestine , and Phenicia , putting all to fire and sword; and having defeated the troops sent against him, entered Galatia , and commits dreadful ravages, and goes to Chalcedon ; and while this was doing abroad, Phocas murders all who were any ways related to, or favourers of Mauritius at home.	VI	538
4915	3608	609	The Jews at Antioch rise, and murder the Christians in great numbers, and dragged the mangled carcass of Anastatius the patriarch about the streets in a most ignominious manner. Bonofus , who was going against the Persians , strove to quell the tumult by fair means; but not prevailing, orders his troops to fall on them, who cut great numbers to pieces, and drove the rest out of the city.	VI	539
4915	3608	609	Phocas being upbraided with his vices, in the Circus at Constantinople by the populace, he ordered several immediately to be beheaded on the spot, and others to be cast into the sea; which so enraged them, that they set the palace and publick prison on fire. The great men having an intention to murder Phocas in the Hippodrome , are betrayed by Anastatius the Comes largitionum ; but Phocas puts him as well as them to death.	VI	538
4916	3609	610	Heraclius , son of Heraclius governor of Africa , proclaims himself emperor, and is as such acknowledged by the Africans , who furnish him with a great army and fleet: He comes to Constantinople , engages and beats the fleet of Phocas ; Phocas flies into the palace, whither Photinus , whose wife he had debauched, followed, took and bound him in chains, and so sent him to Heraclius , who orders first his hands and feet, then his privy members, and lastly his head to be cut off.	VI	539
4917	3610	611	Heraclius is proclaimed emperor at Constantinople , and crowned by Sergius the patriarch. The Persians continued their ravages and destructions, being now arrived at Antioch , no force then on foot being able to withstand them.	VI	539
4919	3612	613	The Persians over-run Cappadocia , and take and sack Cæsarea , and carry off immense booty, and a vast number of captives. The empress Eudocia is delivered of a son, but died soon after. Heraclius desires peace of Cosroes , and offers to pay an annual sum, but is refused.	VI	539
4921	3614	615	Agilulf dies, and is succeeded by Adaluald his son, as king of the Lombards in Italy .	VII	686
4922	3615	616	The Persians come again into Syria , break into Palestine , and take Jerusalem , where they sell 90,000 Christians for slaves to the Jews ; but Zacharias the patriarch, and part of the cross on which Christ was crucified, with immense booty, is carried into Persia .	VI	539

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4922	3615	616	The emperor Heraclius marries his brother's daughter Martina , and caused her to be crowned with the usual pomp by Sergius patriarch of Constantinople .	VI	539
4923	3616	617	The Persians renew their ravages; Heraclius goes into Armenia , and again offers proposals for an accommodation, which are rejected: Then he entered Persia , took and levelled several towns with the ground; and then went to attack Cosroes , who ran away, when he entered Gazzeum , where he seized immense treasure, and burnt the city, and carried off 50,000 captives: But going to winter in Albania , the weather proving very cold and troublesome to the Persians , he sent them home without ransom.	IV	368
4925	3618	619	The Persians over-run all Egypt , take and pillage Alexandria , and then come into Africa and besiege Carthage , and return to Persia with the spoils of several provinces, and a prodigious number of captives. Heraclius begs for peace again, but is refused by Cosroes , unless he will renounce his crucified god, and adore the sun.	IV	366
4925	3618	619	Heraclius defeats the Persians in two pitched battles, and cut off great numbers, and their general Sarablacas .	IV	368
4926	3619	620	Heraclius concludes a peace with the Alvari , and goes against the Persians in person: Saas the Persian general invites Heraclius to an interview, under pretence of peace; Heraclius sends 70 persons of distinction, whom Saas loads with chains, and sends them captive into Persia . Cosroes fleas Saas alive, for having seen the Roman emperor and not took him likewise. Heraclius penetrates through Armenia into Persia , and lays all waste before him, engages and defeats the Persians , and takes their camp and baggage, and then returned to Constantinople .	IV	368
4928	3621	622	Heraclius crosses the Euphrates , takes Samosa , &c. and intirely overthrows Sarabazes on the banks of the Sanis .	IV	368
4930	3623	624	Cosroes not able to beat Heraclius , raises a universal persecution against all the Catholicks in his dominions, and only spares the Nestorians .	IV	368
4931	3624	625	Cosroes engages the Avari , Hunns , and Sclavonians , to invade Thrace , which they do, and destroy all before them, and besiege Constantinople , while Heraclius enters Persia , and lays it waste, and Theodorus the Roman engages and gives Saas the Persian a dreadful overthrow.	IV	368
4932	3625	626	Heraclius invades Persia again, and at Nineveh meets Razastes the Persian general, whom he engages, kills him and a great part of his army, and puts the rest to flight, with only the loss of 50 Romans . Cosroes flies to Seleucia , with his wives and children; and Heraclius destroyed the Persian provinces with fire and sword, released the Roman captives, recovered the standards, and carried off great part of the wealth of Persia .	IV	368
4932	3625	626	Sarbarazes revolts with his whole army from Cosroes , who falling ill, declares his younger son Merdaia his successor; whereupon Syroes his eldest son joins Chardanichas , seized his father, and threw him chained into prison, where he was murdered, with Merdaia and his other children: Then Syroes being king, concluded a perpetual peace with Heraclius , by which all the Roman provinces were again restored to the empire.	IV	369
4933	3626	627	All the Persians and Romans that were prisoners of war in either dominions were set at liberty; and Heraclius upon his approaching Constantinople is met by his son Constantius , the patriarch, the nobility, and people, with all the demonstrations of joy possible.	IV	542
4933	3626	627	Syroes king of Persia dies, and is succeeded by his son Ardeser , or Artaxerxes , a child of seven years old, who after reigning seven months, is murdered.	IV	369
4933	3626	627	Adalwald and Theudelinda both die, and Ariovald succeeds as king of the Lombards .	VII	689
4934	3627	628	Sarbarazes the Persian general having killed Ardeser , sets up himself for king in his room; but after much blood being spilt, the nobility depose him, and set up Hormisdas , or Isdigertes , (one of Syroes nephews) two years afterwards.	VI	370
4934	3627	628	Heraclius goes to Jerusalem with that part of the cross that had been carried into Persia , which he entered in great pomp, returned it to the great church, and instituted the festival of The Exaltation of the Holy Cross , observed by the present Roman church on the 14th of September : Then the emperor banished all the Jews , forbidding them under severe penalties to come within three miles of that holy city.	VII	544
4935	3628	629	The emperor Heraclius coming to Edeffa , Abanassus , the patriarch of the Jacobites , influenced him so far as to imbrace the doctrine of the Monotholites , who acknowledge but one will in Christ .	VI	543
4936	3629	630	Mahommed , or Mahomet , (who called himself king and prophet of the Saracens) died this year, having first reduced Mecca and Media , and part of Arabia , and was succeeded by Eububezer , one of his kinsmen.	VI	543
4938	3631	632	Eububezer enters Persia , intirely defeats Syroes , and puts an end to the Persian empire, after it had continued upwards of 400 years in the line of Artaxerxes ; and he and his Saracens inhabited the country: Then he broke into Palestine , laid waste the territory of Gaza , and cut the governor and all his troops to pieces.	IV	370
4939	3632	633	Eububezer dies, and is succeeded by Haumar , who conquered Bosra , and several other cities of Arabia , and intirely defeated Theodorus , the king's brother, who went against him.	VI	543
4940	3633	634	Boanes the Roman general is overthrown by the Saracens , who take and conquer all Phenicia .	VI	543
4941	3634	635	Haumar sends one part of his army into Egypt , and leads the other to Jerusalem . Cyrus bishop of Alexandria engages to pay them 200,000 Denarii per Annum, so saves Egypt from being plundered.	VI	543
4942	3635	636	Haumar took Jerusalem after a siege of near two years.	VI	544
4942	3635	636	Ariovald dies, and is succeeded by Rotharis , who introduces the first written laws among the Lombards in Italy .	VII	689

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4944	3637	638	Manuel governor of Egypt refuses to pay the annual sum of 200,000 Denarii to the Saracens ; upon which they engage, and Manuel is beat, and they become masters of the whole country, which had belonged to the Romans ever since the time of Augustus .	VI	543
4944	3637	638	Rotharis engages the Romans , defeats them, and kills 8000 upon the spot.	VII	691
4946	3637	640	Haumar takes all Syria , with Antioch , the metropolis of the east.	VI	543
4947	3640	641	Heraclius the Roman emperor dies, and was succeeded by his son Constantine , who after a reign of seven months died also, suspected to be poisoned by his stepmother Martina , whose son Heracleonas succeeded him.	VI	544
4948	3641	642	The senate depose Heracleonas the emperor, after six months reign, cut off his nose, and pull out the tongue of his mother Martina , and send them both into banishment, and advanced Constans son of Constantine to the throne; upon which Pyrrhus the heretical patriarch of Constantinople quits his see, and flies into Africa , being suspected of being privy to the death of Constantine .	VI	544
4953	3646	647	The Saracens break into, and conquer the whole province of Africa .	VI	544
4954	3647	648	Mabias , or Mabwias , the Saracen admiral, falls upon Cyprus with a great fleet and army, reduced the island, and laid the city of Constantia in ashes; then went and took the island of Aradus ; then went and took Rhodes , and destroyed the famous Colossus of the sun, after it had been made 1360 years, containing 900 camels loads of metal.	VI	544
4958	3651	652	King Rotharies dies, who for his great wisdom and moderation was much lamented; and though an Arrian himself, permitted his subjects to embrace orthodoxy if they liked it best, and appointed a bishop of each persuasion in all the great cities of his dominions: He was succeeded by Aio his son, whom he had made partner with him in the government five months before.	VII	691
4963	3656	657	Mabwias prepares a mighty fleet at Tripolis in Phœnicia , with an intent to besiege Constantinople . Two Christian captives breaking open the goal, that was very full of them, kills the governor, and sets fire to the fleet, and made their escape: But Mabwias having got another fleet, engages the imperial fleet, commanded by Constans in person, and beat him, the emperor being forced to fly to Constantinople in disguise.	VI	544
4964	3657	658	Constans goes against the Sclavi , and defeats them in several encounters; but not being able to drive them out of the country they had seized, returned to Constantinople , and the country bears the name of Sclavonia to this day.	VI	545
4964	3657	658	The Saracens quarrelling among themselves, send to make peace with the emperor Constans ; to which he consents, and cedes to them the provinces they had taken, upon their engaging to pay him 1000 Nummi a year, together with a horse and a slave.	VI	545
4965	3658	659	Constans being jealous of his brother Theodosius , causes him to be ordained a deacon, and soon after murdered him, but was ever after so terrified in his mind, that he could not rest night or day.	VI	545
4966	3659	660	Mabwias the Saracen having killed his competitor Hali , reigned alone, and broke the peace with the Romans , and sent his son Ized into the Roman territories, as far as Chalcedon , took Amorium , a strong city of Phrygia , put a garrison into it, and returned to his father with immense booty; but Andreas the Roman general soon retook it, and put all the Saracens to the sword.	VI	545
4968	3661	662	The Franks and Lombards quarrelling, Constans goes against the latter with a great fleet and army, lands at Tarentum , and takes several places, and besieges Beneventum ; but Grimoald , duke thereof, coming to its relief, the emperor retired to Naples : An engagement happening soon after, 20,000 Romans together with their general were cut off.	VI	545
4968	3661	662	Grimoald , duke of Benevento , is proclaimed king of the Lombards .	VII	693
4969	3662	663	Constans visits Rome , and takes away the valuable rarities, and sends them to Constantinople , returns to Naples , and from thence goes to Syracuse , where he staid five years, grievously oppressing the people, and stripping the churches of their rich ornaments and vessels; thus becoming hateful, he was murdered as he was bathing, by one Troilus , in the 27th year of his reign, Anno 668.	VI	545
4969	3662	663	Grimoald falls upon the Franks in the dead of the night, and slew almost all of them that were come into Italy to rethroné Partharist .	VII	693
4969	3662	663	Romuald , son of Grimoald , attacks the Romans , who was come to drive the Lombards out of Italy , and entirely defeats them, and gains many cities.	VII	694
4974	3667	668	Upon the death of Constans , the Syracusans proclaim one Mexizus emperor; but Constantine , son of the late emperor, comes from Constantinople with a great fleet, defeats, takes, and puts Mexizus to death, and got himself acknowledged emperor in his stead.	VI	545
4974	3667	668	Grimoald , with the consent and approbation of the Italians , corrects, alters, and improves the laws of Rotharis .	VII	697
4974	3667	668	The Bulgarians enter the Roman territories, commit great ravages, and defeat the emperor Constans 's army, so that he is obliged to allow them a large annual pension to be quiet.	VII	624
4976	3669	670	The Saracens enter Africa , and commit most terrible ravages and cruelties, and carry away 80,000 captives.	VI	546
4977	3670	671	The Saracens make a descent into Sicily , take and plunder Syracuse , and overrun all the island, destroying every thing with fire and sword.	VI	546
4978	3671	672	The Saracens enter Thrace , and come and besiege Constantinople ; but after an unsuccessful vigorous attempt, they return in September to Cyricus , and continued for seven years to besiege it in the summer, and go to Cyricus in the winter.	VI	546
4978	3671	672	Grimoald bleeds to death, but first bequeaths to his youngest son Garibald the kingdom of the Lombards , who accordingly succeeded him; but Partharist , who had been expelled, returning to Pavia , the Lombards re-elect him king, and depose Garibald .	VII	697

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
4983	3676	677	Florus Petronius and Cyprianus gain a signal victory over Suphianus the Saracens , in Syria , and kill 30,000 of his men. The Maronites seize on mount Libanus , and fortify themselves, and by the assistance of some Christian slaves they reduce the whole country between mount Taurus and Jerusalem , and by frequent incursions force Mahmudias to sue to Constantine for peace, which was agreed to thus: 1. It should be inviolably observed for 30 years by both nations. 2. The Saracens should retain the provinces they had seized. 3. They should pay 3000 pounds weight of gold annually, 50 slaves and 50 fine horses.	VI	546
4984	3677	678	The Bulgarians to the number of 100,000, cross the Danube and enter and ravage the empire, and put the Roman army to flight: The emperor agrees to pay them an annual sum, and then they retire.	VI	546
4984	3677	678	A large body of Bulgarians are settled in the dukedom of Benevento .	VII	624
4986	3679	680	The emperor Constantine calls the sixth general or oecumenical council at Constantinople , where the doctrine of the Monothelites was condemned.	VI	546
4986	3679	680	Partbarit takes his son Canipert for a partner with him in the government.	VII	697
4991	3684	685	The emperor Constantine dies of a lingering illness, in the 18th year of his reign, and was succeeded by his son Justinian , a youth of 16 years of age.	VI	547
4992	3685	686	Abdelmelech , the new prince of the Saracens , confirms the old peace, and proposes to pay Justinian 1000 Nummi a day, and a slave and a horse, to suppress the Maronites : He agrees, and sends Magistrianus against them, who overcomes and disables them for a long time to interrupt the Saracens .	VI	547
4993	3686	687	Justinian goes against the Bulgarians , who had been allowed by his father to settle in Lower Masia , which from them was called Bugaria , and ravages their country: They assemble, engage, defeat, and drive him quite out of the country, and recover all he had taken from them: And then he went against the Sclavonians , over whom he got the advantage several times; so that now he would quarrel with the Saracens , though Abdelmelech strove all he could to prevent it.	VI	547
4993	3686	687	Justinian II. invades the Bulgarians , overcomes them, and obliges them to quit their country or live in intire subjection, he refusing peace upon any other terms: They assemble together from all parts, and fall upon the emperor, defeat his army, force him to restore the prisoners and booty he had taken, and to confirm the annual pension his father had allowed them.	VII	625
4994	3687	688	Mahommed engages the Romans , and is beat, and besieged in his own camp; but finding means to draw off the Sclavonian general with 20,000 men, the Romans were so frightened at this revolt, that they run away; and the enemy pursuing, killed abundance of them. When the emperor came to Leucate , he was so exasperated, that he ordered 10,000 Sclavonians that remained with him to be cut to pieces, with their wives and children, and their bodies to be thrown into the sea.	VI	547
4996	3689	690	Partbarit king of the Lombards dies, upon which Alachis duke of Trent revolts, and drives Canipert , son of Partbarit , from the throne; but Canipert defeating and slaying Alachis , he reigned in the stead of his father.	VII	697
5000	3693	694	Constantine upon his return to Constantinople , instead of raising troops, &c. spends his time in erecting new buildings, &c. which gaining him the ill-will of the people, and suffering his two chief ministers to execute many of the nobility wrongfully, and ordering Rufus , one of his generals, to fall upon the inhabitants in the night-time of a certain day, and massacre them in their houses, and to begin with the patriarch Callinicus ; before the time came, Leontinus governor of Greece was declared emperor, who seizing Justinian , carried him to the Circus , where his nose was cut off, and then he was banished to Chersona , and his two favourites, Theodotus and Stephen , were burnt alive.	VI	548
5001	3694	695	Sergius , who commanded the Roman troops in Lazica , betrayed that province to the Saracens .	VI	548
5002	3695	696	The Saracens invade Africa , take Carthage , and over-run all the country; but John the patrician going against them, drives them out again.	VI	548
5003	3696	697	The Saracens equip another great fleet, and again invade Africa , and force John to fly, who embarks his troops for Constantinople ; but the fleet touching at Crete , the soldiers revolt, and proclaim Apfimar , one of Leontinus 's generals, emperor. Apfimar (or Tiberius) goes directly to Constantinople , surprizes the city, took Leontius prisoner, cut off his nose, and put him into a monastery in Dalmatia , in the third year of his reign.	VI	548
5004	3697	698	The emperor Apfimar , or Tiberius , being settled in the empire, sends his brother Heraclius with an army into Cappadocia , to watch the Saracens , who having private quarrels, Heraclius penetrates into Syria to Samanta , put 200,000 to the sword, and returned with immense plunder.	IV	548
5005	3698	699	The Saracens again break into the Roman empire, besiege, take, and fortify Mopsuestia in Cilicia .	VI	548
5007	3700	701	Boanes , surnamed Hepzadamon , betrayed Armenia to the Saracens .	VI	548
5008	3701	702	The Armenian nobility revolt from and drive out the Saracens with great slaughter, and send to Tiberius for assistance; but Mohammed enters Armenia with a great army, recovers the country, and burns the conspirators alive. Then they invade Cilicia , but Heraclius engages, and kills, and takes 10000 of them; the prisoners he sent in chains to Constantinople .	VI	548
5008	3701	702	The deposed emperor Justinian flies from Chersona to the king of the Chazari , who entertained him kindly, and gave him his sister Theodora in marriage; but Tiberius prevails with the king to deliver him up alive or dead, by large promises; which being known, Justinian flies to Trebelis king of the Bulgarians , who receives him, and uses him very respectfully, raises a great army, and goes directly to Constantinople , and besieges and takes it the 3d day. Tiberius flies with his treasures to Apollonias ; but soon after, he, his

brothe

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			brother, and Leontius , were taken and beheaded by Justinian ; and the patriarch Callinicus had his eyes put out, and afterwards banished to Rome .	VI	549
5009	3702	703	Cunibert dies extremely lamented, and leaves his kingdom to his son Luitberg , who being but an infant, Ragumbert duke of Turin having defeated Asprand his guardian, causes himself to be proclaimed king of the Lombards .	VII	699
5010	3703	704	Ragumbert king of the Lombards dies, and is succeeded by his son Aripert ; but several lords declaring for Luitberg , are defeated in a battle fought near Pavia , in which Luitberg was taken and put to death.	VII	699
5011	3704	705	Justinian breaks the peace concluded with his friend and restorer Trebelis , and enters Thrace with a mighty army; but was totally defeated, and forced to fly in a light vessel to Constantinople .	VI	549
5012	3705	706	Justinian fits out a mighty fleet, and goes against Chersona and Bosphorus , for their intention of delivering him up while a prisoner among them. He orders them all to be cut to pieces, men, women and children, which was executed upon so many as did not get away. Those who flew went to the Chazari , who joining them, they defeated the emperor's forces several times, and proclaimed one Philippicus emperor. Justinian's troops revolt, and go over to Philippicus , who immediately marches to Constantinople , and enters it. Justinian being at Sinope in Paphlagonia , Elias prince of the Bosphorans goes and takes him prisoner, and cuts off his head. His son Tiberius takes sanctuary in a church, from whence being dragg'd, he was killed in 711.	VI	550
5017	3710	711	The emperor Philippicus being a favourer of the Monothelites , summon'd a council of bishops of that persuasion, who condemned and revoked the sixth general council, and established their own doctrine.	VI	550
5017	3710	711	Luitprand son of Asprand declared king of the Lombards .	VII	701
5018	3711	712	The Bulgarians break into Thrace , and come to Constantinople ; lay waste the country, put prodigious numbers of people to the sword, and returned loaded with spoil, without interruption. The Saracens invade and take Medea , &c. and carry off a great number of captives. Philippicus growing hateful, one Rufus gets into the palace, and while he was asleep, put out his eyes, and went away undiscovered.	VI	550
5018	3711	712	The people on Whitsunday proclaim Artemius (called also Anastasius) chief secretary to Philippicus emperor, a man of great learning and a true catholic.	VI	550
5019	3712	713	The Bulgarians enter Thrace , and advance as far as Constantinople ; and having laid the country waste, and put a vast multitude to the sword, returned home unmolested, with an immense booty, and an incredible number of captives.	VII	624
5020	3713	714	Anastasius having sent out a large fleet against the Saracens , the sailors mutiny, kill their admiral, and declare one Theodosius emperor, who comes and besieges Constantinople , and after six months takes it, and sends the magistrates and patriarch to Nice to Anastasius , to tell him what had happened, who upon promise of his life, renounced all claim to the empire, became a monk, and was banished to Theffalonica .	VI	550
5022	3715	716	Leo , commander in chief of all the forces under the late emperor Anastasius , refuses to acknowledge Theodosius , and proclaims himself emperor, engages and overthrows, and takes prisoner, the son of Theodosius , who had been sent against him at Nicomedia , and then goes to Constantinople , where he is met by Germanus the patriarch, &c. with offers of Theodosius's resignation, upon sparing his life, which he readily grants, and Theodosius and his sons enter into orders, and Leo was crowned by Germanus the 25th of March.	VI	551
5022	3715	716	The Saracens surprize and take Pergamus .	VI	551
5023	3716	717	Solyman a Saracen general breaks into Thrace , but he dying, Humar succeeds him, but through the severity of the weather, loses most of his men.	VI	551
5024	3717	718	Humar , with an army of Saracens , besieges Constantinople by land, and Sophian and Izeth by sea, with two mighty fleets; but after thirteen months siege, and losing most of their ships by storms, &c. they raise the siege and retire.	VI	551
5025	3718	719	Anastasius the deposed emperor flying to the Bulgarians , tells them, upon his approach with an army the people would restore him; they arm and go with him; but finding strong opposition, they seize him, and deliver him to Leo , who put him to death.	VII	625
5026	3719	720	Haumar prince of the Saracens , vexed at his disappointment at Constantinople , raises a persecution against the Christians , and forces some to embrace Mahometism .	VI	551
5026	3719	720	Sergius governor of Sicily revolts, and declares one Basilus emperor, and changed his name into Tiberius ; but Paul , an officer of the household, being sent against him, took him, and cut off his head.	VI	551
5026	3719	720	The empress Maria is delivered of a son, to the great joy of the emperor and the whole empire, and is called Constantine .	VI	551
5026	3719	720	The deposed emperor Anastasius comes with a great army of Bulgarians , and claims the crown, and besieges Constantinople , which being vigorously defended, they seize Anastasius , and deliver him up, who was put to death with all his accomplices, and then caused his son to be crowned on Easter-day by Germanus the patriarch. The Saracens under their new prince Ized , who succeeded Haumar , ravaged the coasts of Italy and Sicily , put all to fire and sword; but intestine divisions arising among them, they are employed at home.	VII	709
5028	3721	722	Luitprand king of the Lombards takes and plunders Ravenna .	VI	552
5031	3724	725	The emperor Leo by a law commands all images to be removed out of all the churches, and forbids all manner of worship to be paid to them. Germanus the patriarch opposed this law with all his power; for which Leo deposed him, and put Anastasia	VII	709

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			fus in his room. The populace become outrageous at the pulling down and turning out the images, attack the palace, but are driven back with great slaughter; and in the west the people openly revolted in defence of their images, prompted to it by Gregory II. bishop of Rome.	VI	553
5035	3728	729	Luitprand being softened by a moving speech of Gregory bishop of Rome, gives over the siege of Rome, &c.	VII	707
5037	3730	731	Gregory the then pope begs the friendship and protection of Charles, king of the Franks.	VII	708
5038	3731	732	Leo marries his son to the daughter of the Chazari, being first instructed in the Christian religion, and baptized by the name of Irene.	VI	554
5038	3731	732	Leo fits out a mighty fleet, with an intent to chastize the revolted Italians ; but it being shipwreck'd in the Adriatic sea, he caused the revenues of the pope in Calabria and Sicily to be confiscated.	VI	554
5047	3740	741	A dreadful earthquake at Constantinople overturns many churches, monasteries, and private houses, and buries abundance of people in their ruins. Soon after Leo emperor of Constantinople dies, in the 26th year of his reign, and was succeeded by his son Constantine .	VI	554
5048	3741	742	Constantine goes against the Saracens in Asia ; in his absence Artabazus , who had married his sister, gave out that he was dead, and was thereupon proclaimed emperor, who took Nicephorus his eldest son for his partner in the empire; but Constantine came against him, and defeated him several times, and besieged Constantinople , and took it. Artabazus and his two sons were delivered up, and had their eyes put out. Anastasius the patriarch was punished in the most degrading manner possible.	VI	554
4049	3742	743	Luitprand dies greatly lamented, and is succeeded by his son Hildebrand or Hildebrand .	VI	554
5050	3743	744	Hildebrand is deposed, and Rastus duke of Friuli chosen in his room.	V I	709
5050	3743	744	Constantine goes again against the Saracens , and defeats them several times, took Germanicia and other strong holds. The Saracens fit out a mighty fleet, which the emperor meets and destroys all but three ships. In Syria and Palestine such terrible earthquakes happened as swallowed up whole cities, and an extraordinary darkness, that lasted from the 4th of August to the first of September.	VII	709
5050	3743	744	A terrible plague breaks out in Calabria , and spreads into Sicily , Greece , and the islands of the Aegean sea, and then to Constantinople , where it lasted three years, with such fury, that the living could scarce bury the dead.	VI	555
5051	3744	745	Rachis , with the consent and approbation of the states convened at Pavia , publishes a new pandect of laws.	VI	555
5053	3746	747	Constantine proclaims his son Leo , about a year old, emperor, and goes into Armenia , takes Mitlene , &c. but the Bulgarians breaking into Thrace , laid the whole country waste. Constantine goes against them in person, but was defeated and forced to fly to Constantinople , where he renews the edict against images, which began to be used again. Those bishops that opposed it were deposed, and those monks that preached against it were banished, or put to death, and an edict was published, prohibiting any one to take upon him a morastick life; most of the religious houses were suppressed, and the monks obliged to marry.	VII	709
5056	3749	750	The Bulgarians disobliged by Constantine , surnamed Copronymus , make a sudden irruption into the Roman territories, lay the country waste, and carry off a great booty unmolested.	VI	555
5056	3749	750	The emperor enters the Bulgarians country, and begins to lay all waste with fire and sword; they fall upon him as he marched through a narrow pass, called Baragaba , put him to flight, and pursued him with great slaughter to the very gates of Constantinople .	VII	626
5057	3750	751	Rachis resigns his kingdom, and turns monk; upon which his brother Astulphus is chose, and reigns in his stead.	VII	627
5058	3751	752	Astulphus invades the exarchate of Italy , and takes Ravenna , and puts an end to the name and power, and by adding all their dominions to his own, turned it into a dukedom.	VII	710
5060	3753	754	Astulphus king of the Lombards publishes a new pandect of laws.	VII	711
5060	3753	754	Pepin king of France , by the instigation of pope Stephen , comes into Italy with a great army, besieges Pavia , and obliges Astulphus by a solemn oath to restore those places he had seized in the Roman dukedom, the exarchate and pentapolis to the pope.	VII	712
5062	3755	756	Pepin king of France puts the pope in possession of the exarchate, &c. of Italy .	VII	714
5062	3755	756	Astulphus dies, and Desiderius duke of Tuscany gets himself proclaimed king, and is supported by pope Stephen .	VII	714
5069	3762	763	A violent frost begins the 1st of October, and lasts till the end of February following, so that the two seas at Constantinople were froze for a hundred miles from the shore.	VI	555
5069	3762	763	Constantine goes against the Bulgarians , and cuts them all off to a man.	VI	556
5069	3762	763	The Romans entirely overthrow the Bulgarians .	VII	626
5080	3773	774	Charlemagne entering Italy , besieges Pavia , takes it and the king, and his wife and children, which he sends to France , where they were never heard of more, and so put an end to the kingdom of the Lombards , taking the sovereignty thereof to himself.	VII	719
5081	3774	775	Constantine is seized, in his march against the Bulgarians , with a violent fever, and dies at Strongylum in the thirty-fifth year of his reign.	VI	556
5082	3775	776	Leo III. succeeded his father Constantine in the eastern empire, and was crowned the latter end of April, and in May his brother Nicephorus formed a conspiracy against him, which being discovered, he and his accomplices were banished to Chersona .	VI	556

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. Pag.
5082	3775	776	Elerich king of the Bulgarians resigns his crown, and repairs to Constantinople , and is baptized. The emperor creates him a patrician, and married him to a relation of the empress Irene .
5085	3778	779	Leo gaining some advantages over the Saracens , they to be revenged, persecute the Christians , and demolish all their churches in Syria .	VI 557
5086	3779	780	Leo revives the edict against images, and punished with great severity those who paid any worship to the virgin Mary , the saints or their images; being seized with a fever, he died this year the 16th of September .	VI 557
5086	3779	780	Constantine succeeded his father Leo in the empire, under the guardianship of his mother Irene , he being but ten years old. A conspiracy was formed against him in favour of his uncle Nicephorus ; but being discovered, the authors were banished, and then she obliged the late emperor's brother to take orders. The Saracens broke into the eastern provinces, but were driven out by the forces sent by Irene against them.	VI 557
5087	3780	781	Hespidius governor of Sicily revolts, but is drove out by Theodorus , whom the empress Irene sent against him. He flies to the Saracens in Africa , who acknowledge him for emperor, and then they fell upon the eastern provinces with such fury, that Irene agrees to pay them an annual pension to quiet them.	VI 557
5087	3780	781	Arechis duke of Benevento revolts from the French , and changing his dukedom into a principality, causes himself to be crowned king.	VII 724
5094	3787	788	Irene breaks off the match between Rotrudris , daughter of Charles the great king of France , and her son, and obliges him to marry one Mary , a woman of mean descent, for which he ever after hated his mother.	VI 557
5096	3789	790	Constantine takes the government upon himself, and banishes his mother and her favourites from the court. A terrible fire breaks out at Constantinople , which consumed great part of the city, with the patriarch's palace, in which were the comments of St. Chrysostom on the several books of the scripture, written with his own hands.	VI 558
5097	3790	791	A violent earthquake makes the inhabitants of Constantinople quit their habitations, and retire into the open fields. Constantine is reconciled to his mother, and recalls her to court, then goes against the Bulgarians , but meets with a dreadful overthrow.	VI 558
5097	3790	791	Constantine being egged on, puts his four uncles eyes out.	VI 558
5098	3791	792	The Bulgarians entirely defeat the emperor Leo III.	VII 627
5100	3793	794	The emperor Charles the great, having several times defeated the Huns , destroyed their cities, and by putting all to fire and sword, completed the utter destruction of that warlike people.	VII 485
5101	3794	795	Irene persuades her son to divorce his wife Mary , and marry one of her maids named Theodota , which was done with the utmost magnificence; then he went against the Bulgarians , who run away.	VI 559
5102	3795	796	The emperor Constantine being with his mother at the baths of Prusa in Bithynia , has word brought that his wife Theodota was delivered of a son, upon which he goes to Constantinople . Irene conspires against her son, and sends some of the officers of the army to Constantinople , who go to him and seize him, and carry him to the palace of Porphyra , where he was born, and tore out his eyes in so rude a manner, that he died a few days after with the anguish of the operation.	VI 559
5103	3796	797	The Saracens enter the empire, defeat the forces sent against them by Irene , come up to Constantinople , and carry off immense booty, and vast numbers of captives.	VI 559
5104	3797	798	Saturacius , Irene 's great favourite, conspires against her, but is detected, and punished only by forbidding any one to keep him company, which so vexed him that he died. Soon after Irene , to gain popular applause, remits an annual tribute the people had long paid, promoted commerce, and indulged image worship, &c.	VI 560
5106	3799	800	Pope Leo III. crowned Charles the great, king of France , emperor of the west, on Christmas-Day .	VI 560
5108	3801	802	Charles the great, now emperor of the west, sends ambassadors to Irene , empress of the east, with proposals of a firm and lasting peace, and to make a marriage between himself and her, and to unite the two empires. The nobility disliking it, they go one night in a large body to the palace, and seize upon and confine Irene to her chamber; then conduct Nicephorus , (whom they chose emperor) to the great church, and crowned him; and Irene was shut up in a monastery, which she had built in the island of Lesbos .	VI 560
5109	3802	803	The emperor Nicephorus concludes a treaty of peace, and acknowledges Charles the Great emperor of the west, &c.	VI 561
5111	3804	805	Nicephorus causes Nicetas Tryphyllius (who had set him on the throne) to be poisoned, because he was beloved by the army; and then took his son Saturacius partner with him in the empire, and crowned him as usual; then he marched against the Saracens , who had broke into the empire, but was most shamefully beaten, and narrowly escaped being taken.	VI 561
5112	3805	806	Three hundred thousand Saracens invade the empire anew, take Tyana , the metropolis of Cappadocia minor , and extend their ravages to the gates of Ancyra in Galatia . Nicephorus sends ambassadors with rich presents to Aaron their kalif, who grants peace thus; the emperor to pay 30,000 pieces of gold annually, and 6000 for his own head and his son's, and that he should not rebuild the demolished forts: But as soon as they were gone, he rebuilt the forts; upon which they returned, and put all to fire and sword in Cyprus , then demolished all the churches, and murdered all the inhabitants.	VI 561
5112	3805	806	The Bulgarians fall upon a party of the Romans that were escorting 1100 pounds weight of gold to pay the army, which they take, and cut off all the guards.	VII 627

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Pag.
5114	3806	807	The Saracens make a descent upon the island of Rhodes , and take a great number of prisoners; but in their return home their fleet suffered much by a violent storm.	VI	561
5115	3808	809	The Bulgarians surprise Sardica , a city of Mæsia , and put the whole garrison, consisting of 6000 men, to the sword: Nicephorus goes against them, but they retired with their booty: He comes back to Constantinople , and taxes the people to raise money to repair Sardica : A tumult rises, and attacks the palace; but the guards killing great numbers of them, quell them.	VII	276
5117	3810	811	Nicephorus goes with a great army into Bulgaria , and destroys all with fire and sword: Crumus their king fies for peace; the emperor refuses, and goes on wasting the country, destroying the cities, and murdering the inhabitants. Crumus sends a second time, offering to quit the country, &c. Nicephorus will not hear; then Crumus attacks the emperor's camp and forces, cuts off the emperor, and almost his whole army, took all the arms and baggage, cut off Nicephorus's head, and made a drinking cup of his skull: Nicephorus is said to have been a Manichee , one who denied providence; and to have been excessively lewd, cruel, covetous, and debauched.	VII	627
5117	3810	811	Saturacius succeeded his father Nicephorus , and was declared emperor at Adrianople by some few of the officers that had escaped; but the senate proclaimed and crowned Michael , that had married his sister, who a few days after caused his wife Procopia and his son Theophylact to be crowned also; upon which Saturacius with his wife Theophania retired into a monastery, and died there about two years after.	VI	572
5118	3811	812	The Saracens break into the empire on one side, and the Bulgarians on the other: Leo drives back and defeats the first, and Michael goes against the last, has several slight skirmishes, but at last was utterly defeated, and forced to fly shamefully back to Constantinople ; this so affected him, that he begged Leo to take the purple, which with some difficulty he accepted.	VII	627
5119	3812	813	Michael and his wife Procopia retire to the monastery of Pbarus , where on the 11th of July he took the habit. Leo goes against the Bulgarians , and after a very obstinate battle the Romans were put to flight; but the enemy pursuing disorderly, the Romans rallied and engaged again, and got so complete a victory, that the Bulgarians did not invade the empire again for some years.	VI	563
5120	3813	814	The emperor Leo overcomes the Bulgarians in a pitched battle, wherein he slew and took a very great number.	VII	628
5126	3819	820	The emperor Leo having revived the edict against images, and banished Nicephorus the patriarch, Theodorus , a famous monk, &c. for not complying, one Michael Balbus conspires against Leo , is detected, and condemned to be burnt alive; but his accomplices fell upon Leo as he was going to his devotions, and killed him in the chapel of the palace, banished the empress Theodasia and her four sons to the island Prota , where they were made eunuchs, and Michael was declared emperor, and crowned by the patriarch.	VI	564
5127	3820	821	The emperor Michael recalls great numbers of bishops, monks, and others who had been banished by Leo on account of image worship, and restores them.	VI	564
5128	3821	822	A civil war breaks out in the east by one Thomas , who gave out, that he was Constantine the son of Irene : Under this pretence he raised a great army, and over-ran all Asia , and proclaimed himself emperor, and was acknowledged by the patriarch of Antioch . Michael sends his troops against him; they meet and engage in Asia , where Thomas overthrows them; then defeats Michael's fleet, and besieges Constantinople , but is forced to raise it.	VI	565
5128	3821	822	They engage again, and Thomas is routed with great slaughter by land, and his fleet driven on shore, and ruined at sea: Upon this Gregory one of his generals revolted with 12,000 men; Thomas goes after him, cuts most of his men to pieces, takes him prisoner, and puts him to death: Soon after he is put to flight with great slaughter by the Bulgarians , and his fleet revolts to Michael , who sends his troops against him, and while they were engaged most of his troops desert: Thomas flies to Adrianople , where being besieged, his own men delivered him up, and having his hands and feet cut off, he died in great agony.	VI	566
5128	3821	822	The Saracens who had settled in Spain growing too numerous, transport a large number into Crete . Damianus , the emperor's general, joined by Photinus , goes against them; they engage, Damianus is killed, and the whole army put to flight. Then the Saracens built Candax , or Candia , and soon became masters of the whole island.	VI	566
5129	3822	823	Michael sends Craterus against the Saracens in Crete ; they engage, and Craterus kills great numbers, and makes them fly; but instead of pursuing, goes to revelling; the Saracens in the middle of the night fall out upon them, half drunk and asleep, and cut them all off to a man, Craterus himself hardly escaping.	VI	566
5132	3825	826	Michael emperor of the east forces Euphrosyne , daughter of Constantine Porphyrogenitus , out of the monastery whither she had retired, and marries her: One of his officers fancying another sacred virgin, takes and debauches her: Complaint being made, the offender to avoid punishment revolts to the Saracens in Africa , where he is proclaimed emperor, and sent with an army into Sicily , where he is beheaded; but the Saracens never quitted the island till they had conquered it, and then went into Italy , and conquered Calabria .	VI	567
5135	3828	829	The emperor Michael dies of a flux, the 1st of October , in the 9th year of his reign, and was succeeded by his son Theophylus , who punished all the murderers of Leo , and sent the empress Euphrosyne back to her monastery, and performed every part of the imperial government with unwearied diligence.	VI	568

The

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
5138	3831	832	The emperor Theophilus marries his daughter Mary to one Alexius Moseles , an Armenian by birth, a person of great personal beauty, bravery, and endowments; made him proconsul, created him Cæsar , and sent him against the Saracens in Italy , where he did wonders; but being misrepresented to the emperor, he desired leave to retire and live privately, which was granted.	VI	568
5138	3831	832	The Saracens beat the Romans who went to hinder their depredations.	VI	568
5140	3833	834	Theophilus commands the Roman forces, obtains a complete victory over the Saracens , killing great numbers, and carrying 20,000 of them prisoners to Constantinople in triumph.	VI	568
5141	3834	835	Theophilus the Roman emperor is defeated by the Saracens , and rescued with great danger by Manuel , one of his generals, whom he use very ill soon after, so that he was forced to fly to the Saracens for protection, who received him with great honour, for which he defeated the Cermata for them several times.	VI	569
5145	3838	839	The emperor Theophilus invaded Syria , ravaged the country, and after taking several strong holds, returns to Constantinople , leaving the army under the command of Theophobus .	VI	569
5146	3839	840	Theophobus the Perfian general, commander of the Roman army in Syria , is proclaimed emperor by 30,000 Perfians ; but he refuses, and resigns to Theophilus .	VI	569
5147	3840	841	Theophilus having destroyed Sozopetra , the birth-place of the prince of the Saracens , he swore he would at all events destroy Amorium , the birth-place of Theophilus , in Cilicia : He raises a great army, and advances and besieges Amorium , takes it, puts the men to the sword, levelled the city, and carried the women and children away captive; which so afflicted the emperor, that he fell sick and died, at Magnaura , in the 13th year of his reign.	VI	570
5147	3840	841	Michael the son of Theophilus , a child of six years old, succeeded his father in the empire of the east, under the regency of his mother Theodora , who immediately recalled all those that had been banished for image-worship, and drove John the patriarch away, put Methodius , a monk, in his stead, and is said to cut 100,000 Manichees to pieces; upon which Carbeas at the head of 4000 of that sect revolted to the Saracens , who returned with them into the Roman territories, and dispeopled whole nations.	VI	571
5149	3842	843	Roderick the Great became king of all Cambria , or Wales ; which before was divided into six kingdoms.	VII	453
4161	3854	855	The emperor Michael takes the government upon himself, and begins with murdering his guardian Theodisius , then giving ear to the false accusations of his uncle Bardas , locks up his mother and three sisters in a monastery, and then fell into the most extravagant debaucheries and cruelties, making Nero his example.	VI	571
5162	3855	856	The emperor Michael besieging a Saracen city on the Euphrates , one Sunday as his army was at their devotions the Saracens fall out upon them, put the whole army to flight, and took their camp and baggage.	VI	571
5164	3857	858	The Saracens entering the empire with 30,000 men, put Michael to flight at the head of 40,000; but his brother Petronas falls upon the Saracens near Epirus , cut off the kalif and his whole army, and took his son prisoner.	VI	572
5166	3859	860	The emperor Michael creates his uncle Bardas Cæsar , when he acted beyond all law or reason, first putting away his wife, without pretending any fault, and marrying his niece; for which the patriarch Ignatius refused to communicate with him; to revenge which he calls a council, and gets Ignatius falsely condemned for the murder of his predecessor Methodius , for which Ignatius was deposed and imprisoned, and Photius put in his place.	VI	572
5167	3860	861	Bardas persuades the emperor to go against the Cretan Saracens : They encamp at Chorus , where on the 1st of April he orders Bardas to be murdered, which was done, and the 26th of May following declared Basilus his great chamberlain, his partner in the empire, who strove what he could to reclaim Michael ; but finding it impossible, with some others enters his room when in bed, and murders him, and reigns alone, to the liking of all persons.	VI	573
5168	3861	862	Two patricians, George and Symbatius , conspire against Basilus ; but being discovered, have their eyes put out, and their accomplices banished.	VI	573
5169	3862	863	The emperor Basilus proclaims his eldest son Constantine his partner in the empire, and his sons Leo and Alexander Cæsars ; and made his 4th son Stephen take orders: His four daughters took the religious habit in the monastery of St. Euphemia .	VI	573
5169	3862	863	Basilus goes against the Manichees settled in Armenia , from whence they made frequent inroads into the empire, under their leader Carbeas , who was now become very numerous: He laid their country waste, killed their best commanders, and returned with immense booty.	VI	573
5170	3863	864	The Manichees under Chrysochir break into the empire; but the imperial troops meet, engage, and cut them all off almost to a man, with their leader.	VI	573
5177	3870	871	The Britains are drove out of Cornwall , south of Scotland , and Carlisle , and take shelter in North Wales .	VII	454
5186	3879	880	Basilus and his son Constantine invade Syria , take several strong holds, with an incredible number of prisoners; and in their return they take Cæsarea , the capital of Cappadocia : He was forced to put multitudes of the prisoners to the sword, upon which several of their governors joined the emperor. The African and Cretan Saracens were likewise defeated with great slaughter, and their fleet destroyed by Nazar , the Roman admiral: But the Cartaginian Saracens took Syracuse .	VI	573
5191	3884	885	Constantine being dead, Basilus advances his second son to be his partner, who is presently accused by a favourite monk with a design to kill his father; for which he was thrown into goal; but his father dying soon after, he succeeded

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			(1089)
5192	3885	886	him, when he ordered the monk who had falsely accused him to be first whipped, and then banished to Athens , where his eyes were put out.	VI	574
5199	3892	893	Photius , patriarch of Constantinople , having conspired to put one of his kinsmen on the throne, was deposed, and Stephen the emperor's brother put in his place.	VI	574
5201	3894	895	Simeon king of the Bulgarians entering the Roman empire, is opposed by the Roman army under Crenes and Curticius , which he defeats, kills their generals, and uses the prisoners very barbarously and inhumanly.	VII	629
5203	3896	897	Simeon king of the Bulgarians engages the Ungri , or Hungarians , and is entirely overthrown; upon which he sues for peace, and the emperor Leo grants it; but as soon as Leo was returned to Constantinople , Simeon falls unexpectedly upon the Hungarians , puts them to flight, ravages their country, and puts all to fire and sword.	VI	575
5206	3899	900	The emperor Leo sends a great army under Theodosius a patrician against the Bulgarians , which Simeon their king entirely defeats, and obliges the Romans to make peace upon his own conditions.	VII	630
5207	3900	901	The empress Theophano dies, and Leo marries one Zoe , who had been his concubine; but she dying soon after, he married one Eudocia ; and the dying in child-birth, he married another Zoe : All fourth marriages being at that time held unlawful, Nicholaus Mysticus the patriarch excommunicated the emperor for his marrying a fourth time; which so exasperated him, that he deposed Mysticus , and put Euthymius Syncellus in his room; which occasioned a schism, and great disturbances in the church.	VI	575
5208	3901	902	As the emperor Leo was entering the great church on Whitsunday , a mean person gave him a violent blow on the head with a great club, and left him for dead; but Leo recovered, and the assassin being seized, was racked, and his hands and feet cut off, and then burnt alive.	VI	525
5209	3902	903	The Saracens take Taurrominium in Sicily , with a mighty fleet, and then they took Thessalonica , which Simeon , the emperor Leo 's secretary, redeemed with a mighty sum. Leo sends an army against them, and gained several victories over them.	VI	575
5217	3910	911	The Saracens invade the empire with a great army, which is defeated by Himerius the Roman general.	VI	576
5218	3911	912	The Saracens with a great fleet commit dreadful ravages on the coast: Himerus goes with the Roman fleet against them, and is utterly defeated; which so affected the emperor, that on the 11th of May he died of the cholic, and was succeeded by his brother Alexander , who being a lewd, cruel, and dissolute person, began his reign by banishing all the good and great, and promoting the most profligate and mean persons.	VI	577
5218	3911	912	The emperor Alexander 's debaucheries threw him into an inward bleeding, of which he died, after reigning 13 months, and declared his nephew Constantine (a child of about six years old) his successor; and appointed those who had indulged his own debaucheries the child's guardian.	VI	578
5218	3911	912	One Constantine Ducas , son of Andronicus , a famous general, was by many of the nobility declared emperor in the Circus ; but the guards seized him, cut off his head, and most of his companions were put to death or banished.	VI	578
5218	3911	912	The Bulgarians ravage Thrace , and besiege Constantinople ; but are forced to raise the siege and return home.	VII	630
5220	3913	914	The emperor's governors quarrelling among themselves, the empress Zoe his mother is recalled to court, and made regent, who dismissed all Alexander 's favourites.	VI	579
5220	3913	914	The Saracens and Bulgarians both break into the empire; the latter over-ran Thrace , and besiege Adrianople : Simeon having bribed Pancatucus the governor with rich presents, he delivered the city up.	VII	630
5223	3916	917	A peace is concluded with the Saracens , and a great army sent against the Bulgarians , who at first were defeated; but rallying, and falling upon the pursuing Romans , intirely overthrew them.	VII	631
5226	3919	920	Romanus Lacapenus , the Roman admiral, having by his great interest at court got himself declared Cæsar , banishes the empress Zoe to the monastery of St. Euphemia , and caused himself to be crowned emperor by the patriarch.	VI	579
5227	3920	921	Romanus caused his two sons, Stephen and Christopher , to be crowned in the great church; reserving his third son Theophylactus for the patriarchal dignity.	VI	579
5228	3921	922	The Bulgarians overthrow the Romans with great slaughter, take many of the great men prisoners, burn the imperial palace at Pegæ , and became masters of Adrianople a second time, and torture Leo , who defended it, to death.	VII	631
5229	3922	923	The Bulgarians again enter the empire, lay waste Macedon and Thrace , taking many strong holds, and putting garrisons in some, and levelling others: Then they go to Constantinople , and offer to come to an accommodation; they conclude a peace, and return home.	VII	632
5233	3923	924	John Radenus the Roman admiral surprizes the Saracen fleet in the harbour of Lemnos , destroyed the whole fleet, and cut them all off to a man.	VI	579
5234	3927	928	Simeon king of the Bulgarians engages the Chrobat , and is intirely defeated, and soon after dies of grief, and is succeeded by Peter his second son, who breaks into Macedon , and destroys all with fire and sword. Romanus going against him, he proposes a peace and alliance; which being concluded, he marries Mary the granddaughter of Romanus .	VII	632
5235	3928	929	The Syrian Saracens invade the Roman territories, but are driven back by the Roman general in those parts. A severe frost, that lasted 120 days, was followed by a plague, which swept off abundance of people. Earthquakes troubled several provinces, and whole cities were overthrown.	VI	580
5239	3932	933	A great fire destroyed many stately buildings at Constantinople , and Christopher the son of Romanus dies.	VI	580

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1090)	Vol.	Page
5240	3933	934	One Basilus , a Macedonian , giving out that he was Constantine Ducas that had been slain, many followed him; but being taken and carried to the emperor at Constantinople , he orders one of his hands to be cut off, and then set at liberty; but still insinuating upon his being the son of Andronicus , seized a strong hold, and made frequent incursions; but being taken again, was burnt alive.	VI	580
5250	3943	944	The Rossi , formerly called the Roxolani , and Bastarnæ , fit out a fleet of 10,000 ships, and commit terrible ravages on the coasts of the empire: But Theophanes the Roman admiral falling unexpectedly upon them, destroyed their whole fleet: of those who escaped on shore, abundance were cut to pieces; so that very few returned home.	IV	580
5250	3943	944	Stephen , the youngest son of Romanus , seizes his father, deposes and forces him into a monastery in the island Prota (where he died four years after) and proclaims himself emperor, and is allowed to be partner with his elder brother Constantine .	VI	580
5251	3944	945	Constantine the son of Leo being now near forty years old, and having only the name of emperor, without any share in the government, invites the two brother emperors, Stephen and Constantine , to a feast, and in the midst of their jollity seizes them, and sent Stephen to the island of Panormus , and Constantine to Terebinthus , and ordered them to be both ordained priests, and caused his son Romanus to be crowned with the usual solemnity.	VI	580
5254	3947	948	The Saracens break into the empire, and are defeated several times; and Leo overthrowing them in a pitched battle, took Apollasemus , the kailif's kinsman, who being carried to Constantinople , the vain emperor Constantine trod upon his neck, by way of insult.	VI	581
5255	3948	949	The kailif of the Saracens having Constantine the third son of the Roman general Bardus Phocas in his power, used him most cruelly to make him abjure Christianity ; but not prevailing, poisoned him: Phocas in return put all any way related to the kailif to death that fell into his hands, and drawing the kailif into an ambush, cut off his army almost to a man, he hardly escaping; and then Phocas entered his dominions, took many strong holds, and laid waste whole provinces.	VI	581
5256	3949	950	The Cretan Saracens commit dreadful ravages on the frontiers of the empire. Constantine sends an army and fleet into Crete ; but through the ignorance of the commander the whole miscarried; great part of the army was cut to pieces, and the camp and baggage taken by the enemy.	VI	581
5264	3957	958	Romanus , the emperor Constantine 's son, egged on by his wife Theophano , prevails upon Nicetus to poison his father; but Constantine luckily spilling great part of the draught, the remainder was not strong enough to kill him.	IV	581
5266	3959	960	The emperor Constantine is taken ill on a journey, and brought back to Constantinople , where he dies the 9th of November , in the 49th year of his reign, and is succeeded by his son Romanus , esteemed one of the lowdest and wickedest princes that ever reigned; and though endowed with extraordinary natural parts, made no use of them, committing the whole management of affairs to his favourite Joseph .	VI	582
5267	3960	961	Romanus the emperor orders the patriarch Polyeuctus to solemnly crown his youngest son Basilus .	VI	582
5268	3961	962	Nicephorus Phocas goes against the Cretan Saracens , defeats them several times, and takes all their strong holds; likewise corrupts the kailif, and Arce-mus his lieutenant, and reduced the whole island. Leo his brother overthrew the Saracens several times in the east, where most of them were killed on the spot, or taken prisoners, and was rewarded with a triumph: But Nicephorus , by the management of Joseph , is sent against Chabdamus kailif of the Saracens , overthrew him in a pitched battle, took Beræa , and great wealth with it, and set multitudes of Christians at liberty.	VI	582
5269	3962	963	The emperor Romanus dies, the 15th of March , and the empress Theophano is regent for her sons Basilus and Constantine , who contrary to the will of Joseph the prime minister, calls Nicephorus to court, and honours him with a triumph.	VI	582
5269	3962	963	Nicephorus is proclaimed emperor by the army in Syria , on the 2d of July ; upon which the houses of Joseph and his friends at Constantinople were levelled with the ground, and Nicephorus joyfully acknowledged emperor, and crowned at Hebdomon by the patriarch Polyeuctus ; then he banished and confined Joseph in a monastery in Paphlagonia , where he died two years after.	VI	583
5270	3963	964	The emperor Nicephorus marries the empress Theophano , for which the patriarch excommunicated him; but a council being called, he was restored to the communion of the church.	VI	583
5271	3964	965	Nicephorus sends an army under Manuel into Sicily , to drive out the Saracens , who drew him into the mountains, and then cut off him and his army: John Zimines cut off the Saracens in the province of Cilicia , and overthrew and drove them quite out of Cyprus , and reunited it to the empire again.	VI	583
5272	3965	966	Nicephorus goes against the Saracens in Cilicia , and took three of their strongest cities, and wintered in Cappadocia .	VI	583
5273	3966	967	Nicephorus besieges and takes Mosacista , and Tarsus : A great fleet of Saracens coming to the relief of Tarsus three days after it surrendered, returned, but was most of it destroyed by a storm, and the rest taken by the Romans , with the foldiers.	VI	584
5274	3967	968	Nicephorus breaks into Syria , and reduces a great part of it; then besieged Antioch ; but the garrison being numerous, and well provided, winter forced

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1091)	Vol. Pag.
			him to raise the siege, after he had spent three months before it, when he returned to Constantinople : But Burtzas , a patrician, unexpectedly in the depth of winter marched his troops to Antioch , and took it, and once more added it to the empire.	VI 584
5275	3968	969	Nicephorus banishes Burtzas and Zimisces from the court for some groundless suspicions, who together with the empress conspire against him, and murder him in the palace, when John Zimisces was proclaimed and acknowledged emperor by every body.	VI 584
5275	3968	969	The emperor John Zimisces displaces all the friends of the late emperor Nicephorus , and banished his brother Leo to Lesbos , recalled all those that Nicephorus had banished, and restored all those he had degraded: Going to the great church to be crowned, Polyeuctus the patriarch refused his admission till he had done penance for the crime of murdering Nicephorus ; he promises to revoke the acts against the church, settle his paternal estate upon the poor, and banish the empress and Ablantius , and was then crowned on Christmas day.	VI 585
5275	3968	969	The emperor Zimisces takes Basilus and Constantine , the two sons of Romanus , for his colleagues in the empire; and caused the senate and people of Constantinople to acknowledge them as such.	VI 585
5275	3968	969	The Saracens with a vast army besiege Antioch , but are overthrown and driven out of Syria by the Romans .	VI 585
5275	3968	969	The Russi , or Rossi , the present inhabitants of Podolia , break into Bulgaria , and after ravaging the country, and burning several towns, they return home loaded with booty.	VII 630
5276	3969	970	The Rossi invade the empire with 300,000 men; having wasted all Thrace , they sat down before Adrianople ; Bardas Sclerus goes to its relief with 13,000 men, and by a stratagem draws a strong party of them into an ambuscade, and cuts every man of them off; and unexpectedly falling on the main body of their army, overthrew them, put a great number to the sword, and took a vast number prisoners, with the loss of only 25 men.	VI 585
5276	3969	970	Bardas Phocas , nephew to the late emperor, is encouraged by several of the nobility, takes Cæsarea in Cappadocia , and proclaims himself emperor. Bardas Sclerus goes against him to Cæsarea , where Phocas being forsaken by his prompters, flies to the strong castle of Cyropæum , where he submitted to Sclerus , upon a solemn assurance of pardon, which the emperor performed, but banished him to the island of Chios . This year the emperor married Theodora the daughter of the late emperor Romanus .	VI 585
5276	3969	970	The Russi come again into Bulgaria , and having overcome the Bulgarians , settle in their country.	VII 632
5277	3970	971	Zimisces goes against the Rossi who were now settled in Bulgaria , and invests Persthalba , the capital of Bulgaria , at unawares; 8000 Rossi attempt to get into the city, but are cut all off, and next day the city was taken by assault, and great numbers of the inhabitants put to the sword: 8000 Scythians retire into the citadel, which the Romans took by storm, and the Scythians all destroyed. Dorises king of the Bulgarians being taken, the emperor used him suitable to his rank, and released him, with his wife, children, and all the Bulgarians ; but the city was destroyed, as belonging to the Rossi .	VI 586
5277	3970	971	Zimisces goes towards Dorostorum , on the Danube , where he was met by 300,000 of the Rossi ; they engage, and after a most obstinate fight the Rossi were put to flight with great slaughter; they entering Dorostorum , Zimisces follows and besieges them; a second battle is fought, and they are again terribly beaten; at last they cut their way through the Roman camp, and many of them escape.	VI 586
5277	3970	971	Stephen Dosthalba , general of the Rossi , proposes a peace, and to quit Bulgaria if he should be acknowledged as a friend and ally of the empire, he and his countrymen permitted to return home unmolested, and a free trade be established between the two nations; which was signed by both parties.	VI 587
5282	3975	976	Basilus the eunuch, prime minister to the emperor Zimisces , for fear of punishment for his rapine, &c. hires the cup-bearer to poison him in his return from the east, which was done, this being the 7th year of his reign.	VI 587
5282	3975	976	Basilus and Constantine were declared the successors of Zimisces by his will, and as they were not of age, Basilus the eunuch took upon him the government, and recalled their mother Theophano .	VI 587
5283	3976	977	Samuel king of the Bulgarians breaks into the empire, does much damage, and carry off great booty.	VII 633
5283	3976	977	Bardas Sclerus being dispossessed by Basilus the eunuch of his high command of general of all the forces in the east, and by him sent into Mesopotamia , there he was proclaimed emperor by the army, and comes with a great force towards Constantinople , engages the imperial army, cuts great numbers to pieces, puts the rest to flight, took their camp, and in it vast sums of money, and an immense quantity of arms and provisions. Soon after he engaged the emperor's army again, and gains another complete victory, by which most of the officers were slain, and Leo the general, and many persons of distinction taken prisoners. Then he took Nice , and engaging Bardas Phocas at Amorium , put his army to the rout; but having recruited, returns, and again engages and totally routs Sclerus .	VI 589
5286	3979	980	Bardas Phocas is declared emperor, and Sclerus likewise entering Mesopotamia , sets up his former pretensions, and offers to join Phocas , and divide the empire, which was agreed and sworn to by both parties; but as soon as their forces were joined, Phocas seized Sclerus , and put him in prison. The emperor Basilus and his brother Constantine falls upon Dolphinus , commander under Pho-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol. P. c.
			cas, and put his army to flight, and took him and other great officers prisoners, who were immediately nailed to several great trees on the road: Then going against Phocas , killed him, and put his army to flight with great slaughter, and took the leading men prisoners, carried them to Constantinople , and punished them divers ways.
5292	3985	986	S. Ierus heads those that were left, but through the intercession of his son Re-manus , and the promise of the emperor Basilus , he is prevailed with to lay down his arms and pretensions, and go to Constantinople , where he is made great chamberlain, and lived with much honour the remainder of his life.	VI 591
5301	3994	995	The Romans unexpectedly cross the Sperchius in the night, and fall upon the Bulgarians in the dark, cut great numbers to pieces, took their baggage, with many prisoners, mattered their camp, and forced their king Samuel and his son to hide themselves among the slain, who by that means stole away into Bulgaria .	VI 591
5307	4000	1001	Basilus the emperor goes into Bulgaria , defeats king Samuel in a pitched battle, took Vidini Scopi , and several other strong cities, but had liked to have been cut off afterwards, with his whole army, by Samuel , who unexpectedly fell upon them in the Streights of Cimba ; but Nicephorus governor of Philippopolis falling upon Samuel's rear, put them to flight, Basilus pursuing them took 15,000 prisoners, and put out their eyes, leaving one to every hundred with one eye for a guide to the rest. King Samuel was so shocked at this dreadful sight, that he fell into a swoon, and died two days after.	VI 591
5307	4000	1001	Gabriel , son of Samuel , succeeds his father in the kingdom of Bulgaria . The emperor continued to ravage the country, and to take the strong holds; but sending Theoplyact , one of his generals, to reduce the strong holds among the mountains, the natives cut off him and his whole army; upon which Basilus retires, but in his rout took several castles, and burnt Buteliana , the royal palace, and Gabriel was killed by Gudisthalbus , who succeeded him.	VII 635
5323	4016	1017	Basilus enters Bulgaria again, and took several places, and many of the people; Gudisthalbus offers to submit upon the emperor's own terms. Ibatzes draws the Romans into an ambush, and cuts every man of them off. Basilus returns, destroys all with fire and sword, and put out the eyes of the prisoners: But having lost great part of his army in several encounters, he returned to Constantinople .	VII 636
5325	4018	1019	Basilus resolves never to sheath his sword till he had reduced all Bulgaria , and Gudisthalbus being killed in a battle near Acridus , all the chiefs of Bulgaria submitted to the emperor, who made a progress through the country to receive the homage of the several provinces.	VII 636
5327	4020	1021	Xiphias and Nicephorus , the sons of Bardas Phocas , revolt; but Basilus found means to bring Xiphias to his duty, and to dispatch Nicephorus , and so the rebellion ceased: But Basilus punishing with too great severity all that had been concerned in the disaffection, breeds new commotions; but the ringleaders being seized and executed, all was quiet again.	VII 637
5331	4024	1025	The emperor Basilus making great preparations for a war against the Saracens in Sicily , sends a strong body of forces under Orestes , his favourite eunuch, before him, intending to follow with a large fleet and army, but dies in the December of this year, and Constantine his brother, who had done little but bear the name of emperor in his life-time, now becomes sole emperor; but being a weak, effeminate, and vicious prince, he suffered his ministers to oppress and injure the provinces without controul, all of honour, resolution, and virtue, being turned out, or put to death.	VI 593
5334	4027	1028	The emperor Constantine VIII. dies, and is succeeded by his son-in-law Romanus II. who gained the hearts of the people by easing their taxes in general, being vastly liberal to the church, and ransoming all taken captive in the late war.	VI 594
5336	4029	1030	The Saracens broke into Roman Asia ; the commander of the troops in those parts being defeated, Romanus goes himself: The Saracens beg for peace, and promise quietness for the future: Romanus rejects them, and sends a strong party to observe their motions, who falling into an ambush, are every man of them cut off; after which the Saracens defeated another strong body, besieged the camp, and reduced the Romans to great straits, and took all the baggage, the emperor with difficulty escaping to Antioch . 800 Saracens that was escorting the plunder, coming to a small town, they summoned Maniaces the governor to surrender: He sent them a large quantity of wine, &c. with which making too free, Maniaces sallied out in the night, while they were either drunk or asleep, and cut them all off to a man, and recovered 280 camels loaded with the spoils of the Roman army, which he sent to the emperor, who made him governor of Media for his reward.	VI 594
5339	4032	1033	A dreadful plague breaks out and rages so terribly in Cappadocia , Paphlagonia , and Armenia , that the inhabitants forsake these provinces: A terrible famine followed, and mighty earthquakes succeed the famine, which destroyed whole cities, and did great damage in Constantinople .	VI 595
5340	4033	1034	The empress Zoe having got her husband the emperor Romanus murdered, sends for Alexius the patriarch, and commands him to marry her to one Michael , brother to John the eunuch, Romanus's favourite, with whom he had held a criminal conversation during the life of Romanus , Alexius scruples, but 100 lb weight of gold made him perform the office, when Michael was proclaimed emperor, and partner with Zoe .	VI 595
5340	4033	1034	Tangrolipix , now master of Persia , opened a passage for his countrymen in Armenia , and being strengthened by their assistance, made war on Pisaris , kaiser of Babylon , slew him, and annexed his dominions to those of Persia .	VI 595

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
(1093)
5341	4034	1035	John the eunuch governs all the eastern empire with an absolute sway, in the name of his brother Michael , who to atone for his former life, now spent his time in acts of devotion, religion, and piety, and advances Michael his sister's son to the dignity of Cæsar .	VI	596
5342	4035	1036	A peace for 30 years is concluded by Michael between the Romans and Saracens , whose kailif being dead, his widow embraced Christianity .	VI	596
5342	4035	1036	Dreadful earthquakes overturned several cities in different parts of the eastern empire, and twelve pretended ambassadors comes to Edessa , with 5000 horses and as many camels, pretending they were loaded with presents for the emperor, but were full of armed men; which being discovered, the governor cut every one of them to pieces, and so saved the city.	VI	596
5342	4035	1036	One Deleanus , a Bulgarian slave at Constantinople , runs away from his master, goes into Bulgaria , and pretends to be the son of Gabriel , and grandson of Samuel their late kings: The Bulgarians proclaim him king, and sacrificed all the Romans that fell into their power. The inhabitants of Dyrrachium in Bulgaria sets up one Teichomer for their king: Deleanus cajoled Teichomer so far, that the latter joined him with all his forces, when he got him stoned to death: Then Deleanus goes against the emperor Michael at Theffalonica ; Michael leaves all his baggage and treasure with Ibatza , who revolted with it to Deleanus : Then they besiege Theffalonica ; but the governor falling out unexpectedly, cut 15,000 Bulgarians to pieces, and forced the rest to run away.	VII	638
5344	4037	1038	Tangrolipix sends his nephew Cuthimufes against the Arabians , who overthrow him in a pitched battle; and being forced to take shelter in Media , Stephen the Roman general refuses him a passage; they engage; the Romans are beat, and Stephen taken prisoner.	VI	599
5347	4040	1041	The emperor Michael having subdued all Bulgaria , being grievously afflicted with the dropsy, resigns the empire, retires into a monastery, and died the 10th of December , and was succeeded by Calaphates , his sister's son; but he behaving cruelly and disrespectfully, the people sent for Theodora (the emperor Constantine 's youngest daughter) out of a monastery, and saluted her empress with her sister Zoe , and Michael voluntarily resigned, and retired into a monastery.	VI	57
5347	4040	1041	Tangrolipix goes against the Arabians himself, and is beat. Ajan , nephew to Tangrolipix , goes into Media with 20,000 men, and ravages the country; but being drawn into an ambush, was cut off with his whole army by the Roman generals. Soon after another army of 100,000 Turks comes into Media , and ravages the country. The Romans shutting themselves up in their strong holds, are besieged in Ariza , which the Turks set fire to, and destroyed 150,000 of the inhabitants.	VI	599
5348	4041	1042	Michael and his uncle Constantine taking up the religious habit, thought themselves secure; but the empress Theodora caused both their eyes to be pulled out, and banished them, their relations, and adherents.	VI	597
5348	4041	1042	The empress Zoe being pressed to marry, sends for Constantine Monomachus out of banishment, a beautiful man, and of noble extract, marries him, and has him crowned by the patriarch.	VI	598
5349	4042	1043	Maniaces , general of all the western forces, revolts, and is joined by the Bulgarians , and declares himself emperor: Stephen Sebastophorus goes against him with a very numerous army, but is routed at the first onset, and Maniaces a few days afterwards was killed by an unknown hand, upon which the revoltors returned to their duty.	VI	598
5349	4042	1043	The Ross come before Constantinople with a mighty fleet; but being defeated by the emperor's fleet, they renew their ancient alliance and return home.	VI	598
5350	4043	1044	The emperor Constantine goes into the east, to recover what the Saracens had taken during the two last reigns; but while he is doing this, Leo Tornicius proclaims himself emperor, and at the head of a great army goes to Constantinople , and besieges it; but not being able to reduce it, retires to Arcadiopolis , where being overcome, and sent to Monomachus in chains, he pulled out his eyes, and banished him, which quashed the rebellion and restored peace.	VI	598
5354	4047	1048	Abraham Hakim , half brother to Tangrolipix , engages Liparites the Roman governor of Iberia ; the victory at last was with the Romans , though their general Liparites was taken prisoner: The emperor sends ambassadors with rich presents and a large sum to ransom Liparites , and to propose an alliance with Tangrolipix ; all which Tangrolipix agreed to, but generously gave the whole ransom and presents to Liparites , to repair his losses and furnish his equipage.	VI	599
5355	4048	1049	Tangrolipix sends an ambassador to Constantinople , who arrogantly requiring the emperor to submit to his master, and acknowledge himself his tributary, Monomachus dismissed him with scorn, and drove him out of the city.	VI	599
5355	4048	1049	The Patzinace , a Scythian nation, cross the Danube on the ice, and enter the empire with 800,000 men, and destroy all with fire and sword; but great numbers of them being swept off by the distempers that raged among them, Constantine Arianites the Roman general falls unexpectedly upon them, kills many, and the rest threw down their arms; great numbers are allowed to settle in Bulgaria , some returned home, but Tyrach and 140 of the most noble among them were sent to Constantinople , where embracing Christianity they are treated suitable to their rank.	VI	600
5358	4051	1052	The emperor sends 15,000 Patzinace under Cotalunes their own general to reinforce the army in Iberia ; but they revolt, and being joined by great numbers of their countrymen, encamp on the banks of the Danube , and make continual incursions into the empire, and frequently defeat the troops sent against them; but at last they sue for peace, which is granted for 30 years.	VI	600
5360	4053	1054	Tangrolipix commits great ravages in Iberia , kills all the people that falls into his power, and takes many towns.	VI	600

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1094)	Vol.	Page
5361	4054	1055	Constantine Monomachus the emperor of the east dies, and is succeeded by Theodora , sister to his wife Zoe .	VI	600
5362	4055	1056	The empress Theodora dies of a violent pain in her bowels, and bequeathed the empire to Michael Stratoticus , an old unfit person, who suffered the eunuchs to manage all things to their liking, and disoblged every body else.	VI	603
5363	4056	1057	On the 8th of June , Comnenus a famous general was by the soldiery proclaimed emperor. Stratoticus sends an army against him, which is beat, and Comnenus marches to Constantinople , where Stratoticus is deposed, and goes into a monastery, and Comnenus was proclaimed emperor by the senate and people, and crowned in the great church by Michael Cerularius the patriarch.	VI	603
5364	4057	1058	Comnenus finding the exchequer empty, seizes the church-lands, &c. The patriarch threatens him, for which Comnenus deposed him, and put Constantine Lichudes in his stead.	VI	603
5365	4058	1059	The emperor Isaac Comnenus finding himself very ill, resigns the empire, and retires into a monastery, naming Constantine Ducas for his successor, who was accordingly crowned by the patriarch, who applied himself diligently to reform abuses of all sorts, that through the unsettledness of the late times had crept in.	VI	603
5368	4061	1062	The Uzians , a Scythian nation, pass the Danube with an army of 500,000 men, and ravage the countries next it. Nicephorus Betonates (afterwards emperor) and Basilus Apocapes go against them, are put to flight at the first onset, and both taken prisoners, when the Uzians laid waste Thrace and Macedon , and penetrated into Greece , destroying all with fire and sword. The emperor strives to buy a peace with rich presents, and offers to pay an annual tribute, which being refused, after observing a general fast, he goes against them with a handful of men. A plague breaking out among the enemy, swept away great numbers, and the Hungarians falling upon the remainder, cut almost all off.	VI	603
5371	4064	1065	A great earthquake overturned many fine buildings at Constantinople , and a comet appeared for forty days together.	VI	603
5371	4064	1065	The emperor Constantine falling ill, obliges his wife Eudocia solemnly to sign an oath, that she would never marry again, which was religiously deposited with the patriarch, and then he appoints her regent and guardian over his three sons, Michael , Andronicus , and Constantine , to whom he left the empire.	VI	604
5372	4065	1066	The Turks break into the empire; the empress gets herself publicly absolved from her oath of widowhood, and marries Romanus Diogenes , who had been condemned for aspiring to the crown, but pardoned by the empress, and he was thereupon proclaimed emperor.	VI	605
5373	4066	1067	Romanus being informed the Turks had surprized, taken and plundered Neocesarea , pursued and overtook them, as they were carrying off their booty, fell upon them, cut great numbers to pieces, recovered the spoil, and pursued his march to Alippo , which he retook, and Hierapolis ; then meets and engages the Turks again, and obtains a complete victory; upon which several towns submit, and he returns to Constantinople .	VI	605
5374	4067	1068	The Turks , during the emperor's absence at Constantinople , defeated Philaretus , who was left to guard the banks of the Euphrates , took Iconium the capital of Cilicia . Romanus goes against them; they retire with their booty; the Armenians fall on them, put them to flight, and took their baggage and booty.	VI	606
5375	4068	1069	Romanus goes again against the Turks ; Axan the Turkish sultan desires peace, but is refused; they engage, and John Ducas , brother of the late emperor Constantine , treacherously cries out the emperor was put to flight, and flies himself with his troops to the camp. In the pursuit the Turks killed great numbers; so that at last the emperor, overcome by numbers, was taken prisoner, and used with the utmost honour and respect, and concluding a peace, was sent back to Constantinople to have it confirm'd. In his passage is informed, that John brother of Constantine Ducas had driven Eudocia from the throne, and proclaimed her eldest son Michael emperor, and he acted as guardian. Romanus was taken prisoner; John ordered his eyes to be pulled out, the anguish whereof killed him a few days after.	VI	606
5376	4069	1070	Axan the Turkish sultan invades the Roman territories. Isaac Comnenus goes against them, is at first successful, but soon after is utterly defeated and taken prisoner; then John Ducas the emperor's uncle goes against them, and gets advantages; but Rufelius a Gaul revolting, reduced several cities in Phrygia and Cappadocia , proclaiming himself emperor. John goes against him, but is defeated and taken prisoner; but Rufelius , to stop the Turks , released and joined his prisoner, and both go against the Turks , but are both beat and taken prisoners.	VI	606
5377	4070	1071	Cutlu-Moses , cousin to Tangrolipix , comes against Axan with a large body of Arabians ; but before they engage, the late kailif of Babylon , who now only acted in spirituals, brought them to this accommodation, that Axan should enjoy the kingdom erected by his father, and Cutlu Moses should enjoy such other provinces as he should conquer.	VI	606
5378	4071	1072	Cutlu Moses , assisted by Axan , wars against the empire, and in a small time conquered Media , Lycaonia , Cappadocia , and Bythinia , fixing his seat at Nice .	VI	606
5379	4072	1073	Rufelius being ransom'd by his wife, was restored to favour, and entrusted with a command in Asia Minor ; revolts afresh, and proclaims himself again emperor, and defeats the troops of Michael ; at last Alexius gets him and sends him in chains to Constantinople , and the rebels surrender up the cities, &c. they had taken, and return to their duty; but a famine being at Constantinople , and the emperor to fill his coffers lessened the wheat measure, by which and other avaritious actions, he became so hateful, that Nicephorus Betonates proclaims himself emperor, supported by the Turks ; and at the same time Nicephorus

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1095)	Vol.	Pag.
5384	4077	1078	Bryennius , commander at Dyrrachium , did the like, and prepares to march to Constantinople . Michael resigns the empire, and retires to a monastery, took orders, and was soon after made bishop of Ephesus .	VI	607
5387	4080	1081	Botoniates enters Constantinople , and was crowned by the patriarch the 25th of May, and sends Alexius Comnenus against Bryennius ; they engage at Calaura in Thrace , where Bryennius was beaten and taken prisoner, and then goes against Basilacius , who had proclaimed himself emperor at Dyrrachium . They engage, and Alexius beats him, and pursues and besieges him in Thessalonica ; takes him and sends him to Constantinople , where his eyes were pulled out, and then he was put into a monastery.	VI	608
5387	4080	1081	Alexius Comnenus is proclaimed emperor by the army in Thrace , and goes to Constantinople , and seizes the city by surprise, and plunders it. Botoniates resigns and retires to a monastery, and took the habit. Alexius was proclaimed and crowned by the patriarch in April.	VI	609
5387	4080	1081	Solyman , son and successor to Cutlu Moses , sends to treat of peace with Alexius , who at first refuses, but is glad afterwards to comply, to go against Robert Guiscard , duke of Puglia and Calabria , son-in-law to Michael the late deposed emperor, who invaded the Roman territories, and besieged Dyrrachium ; but the Venetians coming to the assistance of Alexius , fell upon the enemies fleet, and gave them a total overthrow; then landing and joining Palæologus , the commander of the town, destroyed their works, burnt their engines, and drove them to their camp, and carried off great booty; but Robert continued the attack with great resolution. At last the emperor comes in person against them, and is beat, has the flower of his army cut off, and a vast number of officers of the greatest rank, and was forced to fly, leaving Robert master of his camp and baggage, who then took the city.	VI	610
5387	4080	1081	Alexius is forced to strip the churches and monasteries to raise money, which gained him the ill-will of the clergy. Making an alliance with Henry emperor of Germany , gets him to invade Robert's dominions in Italy . Robert goes against him, relieves the pope besieged in the castle of St. Angelo , retakes Rome , and drove them out of Italy . Robert defeats Alexius in two battles, takes Illyricum , enters Thessaly , and sets down before Larissa ; but after several battles, for want of money to pay his troops, he is forced to return to Italy .	VI	611
5387	4080	1081	The Venetians with a powerful fleet engage Robert as auxiliaries to Alexius , and defeat him in two successive battles; but soon after Robert destroyed almost their whole fleet, and used his prisoners very barbarously. The Venetians and Alexius refit and recruit their shattered fleet, and engage Robert again, sunk most of his ships, and took abundance of prisoners. Soon after Robert dies at Cephalonia , aged seventy-nine. Roger his son succeeded him, and recalled his troops, and surrenders the conquests to the emperor Alexius , from whom they had been taken.	VI	611
5388	4081	1082	The Scythians cross the Danube , invade Thrace , and lay it waste with great cruelties. Alexius sends Pacurianus and Branas against them; they engage, and through the rashness of Branas , the greater part of the Romans are cut to pieces, and the two generals taken prisoners. Talicius goes against them, cuts great numbers of them to pieces, and forces the rest to run away.	VI	611
5389	4824	1083	The Scythians come again into Thrace ; the emperor goes against them in person; and after an obstinate fight, from morning to night, he was forced to retire precipitately, losing a prodigious number of his men by the sword and captivity, Alexius himself very hardly escaping. At the same time the Turks break into the empire, took all the principal places in Asia and the island of Chios ; and while the empress's brother was gone into the east, he was again overthrown by the Scythians , who took his camp and baggage, tho' a little after he defeated them.	VI	611
5390	4083	1084	The emperor Alexius entirely defeats the Scythians , so that very few escaped, which put an end to the Scythian war; and then Alexius goes against the Turks , with whom his brother-in-law had had several engagements, with various successes.	VI	612
5390	from 4083 to 4092	1084	Tzachas having married the sultan's daughter, revolts and erects a new principality in Smyrna , &c. John Ducas besieges Mytilene by land, and Constantine Delassenus by sea. After much time spent, an engagement happens, in which Tzachas is totally defeated, and a peace concluded, which Tzachas breaking, Delassenus sailed after him, sunk most of his ships, put his men to the sword, Tzachas flies to Smyrna , equips a new fleet, and goes to Abydos . The sultan goes against him in person by land, and Delassenus by sea. Tzachas surrenders himself to his father-in-law, who received him very graciously, but ordered him to be murdered, and then concluded a peace with the emperor.	VI	612
5399	4092	1093	The Scythians encouraged by an impostor, that pretended to be Leo son of the late emperor Romanus Diogenes , crossed the Danube , and proclaimed Leo emperor, and besiege Adrianople , where Leo is taken prisoner by stratagem, and 7000 Scythians cut off, 3000 taken, and the rest run away.	VI	612
5400	4093	1094	The Scythians come into the empire again with a very numerous army, but are overthrown in two successive battles, when a peace was made upon the emperor's own terms, and then Alexius returned to Constantinople loaded with booty.	VI	613
5400	4093	1094	The western Christians , by the instigation of one Peter a hermit undertake the recovery of the Holy Land from the Turks . Pope Urban II. having called a council at Clermont in France , where 310 bishops met, and the ambassadors of most Christian princes, a religious war was concluded on, and an army of 300,000 raised under the command of several princes.	VI	614

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ	(1096)	Vol.	Page
5402	4095	1096	Gautier , with 20,000 men, began his march towards Jerusalem , who was followed by Peter the hermit, with 20,000 more; then Gosfrey of Bouillon arrives at Phillippolis with 10,000 horse and 70000 foot, and quarrelling with Alexius , lays the country waste, and marches to Constantinople , where they agree Alexius should supply arms, provisions, and all his forces, and he was to have the provinces that should be taken from the Turks . Peter's army mutinies, and separates into small parties, most of which fall a prey to the Turks ; so that out of Peter's 40,000 only 3,000 are left.	VI	615
5403	4096	1097	Nice is besieged by Godfrey , &c. the imperial seat of Solyman , the then Turkish sultan, which after two months siege, was surrendered to Butamites , lieutenant to Alexius ; among the captives were the wife and two of the children of Solyman , who were sent to Constantinople .	VI	615
5403	4096	1097	Bohemond , prince of Tarentum , is attacked by Solyman at the head of 60000 Turks ; but being joined by Hugh , brother to Philip I. king of France , beat the Turks , cut off 40000, and forced the rest to fly into the mountains.	VI	615
5403	4096	1097	On the 21st of October , the Christians set down before Antioch , which was gar- risoned with 7000 horse and 20,000 foot, so that it held out till June , 1098, following; and a few days after engaging Corbenus , the sultan of Persia's ge- neral, killed and took 100,000 of his men, with the loss only of 4200 Christians .	VI	615
5404	4097	1098	Tangripermes , a Turkish pirate, seized the cities of Smyrna and Ephesus , reduced the islands of Rhodes and Chios , and committed dreadful ravages; but the fleet and army of Alexius beating the pirates, they were again recovered.	VI	616
5405	4098	1099	The success of Alexius over the Turks so elated him, that he demands Antioch from Bohemond , who was created prince thereof by the confederate princes; upon which Bohemond demanded and took Laodicea , &c. Alexius in revenge attacks the supplies coming from the west, and gave them a total overthrow, and has most of his own fleet destroyed by a storm. He also besieged and took Laodicea ; thus a war ensued, and Bohemond besieges Dyrrbachium , but his army being straitened for want of necessaries, a peace was honourably concluded.	VI	617
5406	4099	1100	Alexius goes against the Turks , and totally overthrows them near Nice .	VI	617
5407	4100	1101	The Turks come again into the empire, but are defeated in several successive battles; so that they sue for peace, which the emperor grants.	VI	617
5424	4117	1118	The emperor Alexius dies in the 37th year of his reign, and is succeeded by his son John , and crowned in the great church by the patriarch; and soon after a conspiracy is formed in favour of his brother-in-law Bryennius , but discovered and disappointed.	VI	617
5426	4119	1120	The Turks break the peace, and again invade the empire. The emperor John goes against them in person, beats them several times, and recovers several cities, &c. and then they sue for peace, which he grants.	VI	617
5427	4120	1121	The Scythians pass the Danube , and entering Thrace , destroy all with fire and sword. John goes against them, cuts a prodigious number of them to pieces, takes many prisoners, and drives the remainder over the Danube ; then he overcame the Servii and the Hunns , and made them repay the Danube , went after them, took their strong holds, and forced them to accept of such terms as he thought fit to grant them.	VI	618
5430	4123	1124	The Turks having again broke the peace, John goes against and drives them every one before him, and took abundance of cities, &c.	VI	618
5446	4139	1140	John goes into the east with an intent to recover Antioch , then held by the Latins , but was not able to accomplish his purpose.	VI	618
5449	4142	1143	John being wounded with a poisoned arrow at Cilicia , occasioned his death the 8th of April , in the 24th year of his reign. He appointed his youngest son Manuel to succeed him in the empire, who accordingly did so, and seized his brother Isaac , and confined him to a monastery to prevent his pretensions to the crown.	VI	619
5450	4143	1144	The emperor Manuel goes against the Turks , and reduces several cities in Phrygia , which they had taken; returns to Constantinople , and married Gertrude , sister-in-law to Conrade emperor of Germany .	VI	619
5452	4145	1146	Conrade , &c. designing to go against the Turks in Palestine , promised to furnish forage, &c. for the troops; but instead thereof, laid waste the countries, and shut up the towns through which they were to pass, and the Greeks mixed quick lime with the flower they sold them, which occasioned a dreadful mor- tality among the Christian troops, and likewise gave private intelligence to the Turks , &c. Roger king of Sicily , to revenge the affront, took the island of Corcyra , took and plundered Corinth and Thebes , &c. but through the me- diation of the pope, peace is concluded, after they had done much mischief to each other.	VI	619
5464	4157	1158	Manuel goes against the Turks with a great army, who sue for peace, but are refused. Soon after the emperor is much wounded, and his army not only greatly harrassed and killed by showers of darts, but entirely shut up by the Turks , who then propose peace, and it is agreed to; but the emperor not per- forming the conditions, the sultan sends 20,000 men into Phrygia , who kill all they meet with; but the emperor's forces coming up with them, cut all off to a man, and recovered the whole booty.	VI	620
5486	4179	1180	Manuel dies in the 38th year of his reign, having for some time before taken the monastic habit, to atone for the debaucheries of his youth. He was suc- ceeded by his son Alexius Comnenus , a youth of twelve years old, whose mo- ther governed with an absolute sway, and neglecting the empire, strove only to amass wealth by extortion, &c. The Turks break into Phrygia , take So- zopolis , &c. Andronicus , cousin-german to the late emperor, got himself proclaimed

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page.
			(1097)
			claimed guardian of the emperor, and under that title committed most dreadful cruelties upon the Constantinopolitans , pretending great affection for the emperor, orders him to be solemnly crowned 1183, when his partisans cry out long live Alexius and Andronicus , Roman emperors, and so both were crowned; but a few days after Andronicus ordered Alexius to be strangled, and then put all the nobility to death, from whom he feared any opposition.	VI	621
5490	4183	1184	Alexius Comnenus , brother to the late emperor Manuel , excites William king of Sicily to war against Andronicus , who takes Dyrrhachium , then goes to Thessalonica , and takes it by storm, and plunders and murders all the people; then he engages and defeats the army of Andronicus , which so provoked him, that he glutted his revenge upon all without distinction, which so alienated his subjects from him, that they proclaim Isaac Angelus emperor. Andronicus endeavours to fly into Scythia , is taken and delivered in chains to Isaac , who cut off one of his hands, and pulled out one of his eyes, and then delivered him to the enraged populace, who after glutting their revenge upon him, killed him in the second year of his reign.	VI	622
5491	4184	1185	Isaac now emperor, recalls all the banished nobility, &c. and restores all the confiscated estates, &c. and then sent an army under Branas against the Sicilians , who cut them almost all off to a man, and their fleet, consisting of 200 sail, being dispersed by a storm, was mostly taken by the emperor's admiral. Vast numbers of prisoners were sent to Constantinople , where the emperor ordered them to be starved to death.	VI	623
5492	4185	1186	The emperor sends a mighty fleet and army against Isaac Comnenus , who had seized the island of Cyprus , but both were entirely destroyed; upon this the Messians revolt, and join the Scythians , who over-ran the neighbouring provinces. He sends his uncle John Ducas against them, who gains several advantages against them; but being jealous, he recalls him, and sends John Cantacuzenus in his stead, whose rashness and indiscretion gave the enemy opportunity frequently to defeat him; then he sends Branas . Alexius gets some advantages, and then suddenly goes to Adrianople , and proclaims himself emperor, and marches directly to Constantinople , where the emperor Isaac engages and kills him, and puts an end to the rebellion.	VI	623
5494	4187	1188	Frederic Barbarossa , emperor of Germany , marching at the head of a great army to support the Crusade , had been promised provisions and support while he passed thro' Isaac's dominions; but when the bishop of Munster , the earl of Nassau , and count Walram , Frederic's ambassadors, came to Constantinople , Isaac threw them into prison, and by his armies obstructed Frederic's passage, and seized on their provisions; upon which the Germans go into Thrace , and seize all the corn they find, and then defeated Isaac's army, and all the country between the Ægean and Euxine sea, submit to Frederic . Isaac sets the ambassadors at liberty, and sues for peace, which he obtains on very severe terms.	VI	623
5498	4191	1192	An impostor sets up to be the son of the late emperor Manuel , and being supported by the sultan of Iconium , took all the cities of the Meander ; but a priest taking the opportunity of his being drunk, stabbed and killed him.	VI	624
5499	4192	1193	The Scythians invade the empire, and destroy all with fire and sword. The emperor goes against them, but has the greatest part of his army cut to pieces. He then sends Alexius Guido , who was also defeated; after that Batatzes Basilus , who was killed and the greatest part of his army on the spot.	VI	624
5500	4193	1194	The emperor again goes against the Scythians , and his army proclaims his brother Alexius Angelus emperor; upon which Isaac flies to Marcia , is taken, and has his eyes put out, and cast into prison, in the 9th year of his reign. Alexius reigns very badly, and the Scythians and Turks laid waste and took all the best provinces through his negligence, he suffering his wife and favourites to govern in all things.	VI	624
5508	4201	1202	Alexius releases his brother Isaac out of prison, and calls his son Alexius , then twelve years old, to court, from whence some time after making his escape, he goes to the pope, who warmly recommended him to Philip emperor of Germany , his brother-in law, who engaged the French and Venetians to put young Alexius upon the throne, who sailed for Corfu . At their arrival at Dyrrhachium , the inhabitants swear allegiance to him, and then sailed to Chalcedon , and landed their troops; and soon after taking Constantinople , the emperor retires to Zagora in Thrace , with the imperial ornaments and his treasures, and then Isaac and his son were both declared emperors, and crowned the first of August , 1203; then they pursued Alexius to Adrianople , and drove him quite away.	VI	625
5509	4202	1203	A dreadful conflagration happened in Constantinople , that burnt down a great part of the city.	VI	626
5510	4203	1204	The emperor Isaac dies, and Alexius being forced to lay heavy taxes upon his people, to pay his deliverers what he owed them by contract, occasioned great complaints; which being fomented by John Ducas , surnamed Murtzuphlus , who sends in the emperor's name to the marquis of Monferrat , offering to deliver up the palace and fortress of Blacbernæ in Constantinople , (who prepares to come) and then gives out that the emperor had sold the city to the Latins , who were in full march to take possession; and in the uproar goes into his chamber and strangles him, and then his creatures proclaimed him emperor; this enraged the confederate princes of the west so far, that they come and besiege Constantinople , which they took by storm, and murdered all they met. This great revolution happened 874 years after the removal of the imperial seat from Rome to Constantinople .	VI	627
5510	4203	1204	Baldwin earl of Flanders is elected emperor of Constantinople , and crowned with extraordinary magnificence in the church of St. Sophia , and is allowed Con-

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		P. of Page
			Constantinople and Thrace, and a limited power over the other provinces. Boniface, marquis of Montserrat, has Thessaly, which was erected into a kingdom. The Venetians had the islands of the Archipelago, part of Peloponnesus, and several cities in the Hellespont.	VI 628
5510	4203	1204	Theodorus Lascaris, son-in-law to Alexius Angelus, escaping from his confinement in Constantinople into Bythinia, was joyfully received, and making himself master of Phrygia, Mysia, Ionia, and Lydia, took upon him the title of emperor, and fixed his imperial seat at Nice; and David and Alexius Comnenus seizing on Pontus, Galatia, and Capadocia, erected a new empire at Trapezond.	VII 286
5510	4203	1204	David and Alexius Comneni, grandsons to the tyrant Andronicus, escaping out of Constantinople, seized on the most easterly parts of Pontus, Galatia and Cappadocia, fixed their residence in the famous city of Trapezond, and erected the aforesaid countries into an empire, called the empire of Trapezond. (Some call it a kingdom, and others a lordship, till the year of Christ 1260.	VII 289
5512	4205	1206	John king of Bulgaria marches against Baldwin first emperor of the Latins in Constantinople, as he was besieging Adrianople, defeats his army with great slaughter, relieves the city, and carries the emperor prisoner to Tervova, the then capital of Bulgaria, where he caused his hands and feet to be cut off, and his body to be thrown into a neighbouring valley, and there after three days extreme misery he died, and was devoured by wild beasts.	VII 639
5512	4205	1206	Theodorus Lascaris engages the sultan Jathatines at Antioch, kills and cuts off his head; upon which the Turks fly, and leave the Greeks masters of their camp and baggage. Alexius Angelus, author of the war, was taken prisoner, carried to Nice, and confined to a monastery by his son-in-law Lascaris, who makes a peace with the Turks upon his own terms.	VI 629
5512	4205	1206	Henry, brother of Baldwin, succeeded him as emperor of the Latins at Constantinople, and first warred with the Scythians, and drove them out of Thrace, then he was at war with Lascaris emperor of Nice, who at last was forced to acknowledge him; and then with Michael Angelus, who seized Aetolia and Epirus, and called himself lord or despot of the country, but could not dislodge him.	VI 629
5524	4217	1218	Henry emperor of Constantinople dies in the 11th year of his reign, and is succeeded by Peter count of Auxerre, his brother-in-law, who was crowned at Rome by pope Honorius III. on the 9th of April. From Rome he goes to Venice, and makes an alliance with that republic against Theodorus, who succeeded his brother as despot or lord of Aetolia and Epirus; goes and besieges Dyrrhachium, which Theodorus had lately taken. At last they came to an agreement, and Theodorus promises him a free passage; but suddenly falls upon him, cuts most of his forces to pieces, took him prisoner, and put him to death, and he was succeeded by Robert his second son, Philip count of Namur, his eldest son, refusing to accept it.	VI 630
5528	4221	1222	Theodorus Lascaris emperor of Nice dies, and is succeeded by his son-in-law John Ducas, surnamed Vatases, who was crowned by Manuel, patriarch of the Greeks at Nice. Alexius and Angelus, brothers to the deceased emperor, apply to the Latins, who furnish them with an army. John engages them, cuts off the flower of their army, and takes them both prisoners. Then building a fleet, he falls upon the Latins in the islands of the Archipelago, drove them before him, and took most of the islands.	VII 287
5532	4225	1226	Assan king of Bulgaria gives his daughter Helena to wife to Theodore, son of the emperor Ducas, and makes an alliance with the emperor Ducas; likewise renews the peace between him and the sultan of Iconium; and then takes all the places on the Bosphorus and Hellespont, held by the Latins; and Theodorus prince of Epirus invades and takes Thessaly and Thrace, assumes the title of emperor, and is crowned by the patriarch of Bulgaria; and then, tho' he had lately concluded a peace with John king of Bulgaria, he broke into his country; but John, after a long and bloody dispute, routed his army, took him prisoner, and put out his eyes.	VI 630
5534	4227	1228	Robert, emperor of the Latins in Constantinople, dies at Achaia, and is succeeded by Baldwin II. his son, a child of eight years old, and John Brienne, formerly king of Jerusalem, is appointed regent.	VI 630
5541	4234	1235	John Ducas the Greek emperor, and John Azen king of Bulgaria, besiege Constantinople; but the regent rallying out very vigorously, put their whole army to flight, consisting of 100,000 men, killed a great number, forced them to raise the siege, and took a great booty.	VI 631
5542	4235	1236	Robert and John come again before Constantinople, and are again defeated and put to flight; but through frequent sallies and encounters, the Latins are reduced to few in number, whereupon the regent retires into the imperial city, and sends the young emperor to solicit the western princes personally for assistance. The Venetians come with a powerful fleet, and force Azen and Vatases to raise the siege.	VI 631
5543	4236	1237	John Brienne, the regent at Constantinople, dies, in the 9th year of his administration. The Bulgarians and Greeks quarrel, so that John Azen joins the Latins, and lays siege to Chiorli, but soon after raises it.	VI 631
5544	4237	1238	Anne, wife of John king of Bulgaria, dying, he marries the daughter of Theodorus, late despot of Epirus, whom he had taken prisoner, and deprived of his sight some years before; upon which Azen sets Theodorus at liberty, and assists him to recover his dominions from Manuel his brother, which done Theodorus appoints his son to govern in his stead, causing him to be acknowledged emperor.	VI 631
5544	4237	1238	John Azen king of Bulgaria dying, John Vatases emperor of Nice makes an alliance with the Scythians in Macedonia, enters the dominions of Theodorus, takes

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			a great part of them, forces him to lay down the title of emperor, and be content with that of despot.	VI	31
5545	4238	1239	The emperor Baldwin returning from the west, upon his arrival at Constantinople is crowned emperor by the patriarch in the church of St. Sophia , makes an alliance with the Comneni at Trabezond , and by their assistance besieges and takes Cibiorli from the emperor of Nice ; who soon after retook it, and the island of Rhodes .	VII	289
5561	4244	1255	John Ducas or Vataces , emperor of Nice , dies, and is succeeded by his son Theodorus Lascaris II. who renewing the ancient alliance with the sultan of Iconium , passes the Hellepont , and wars with the Bulgarians , and the despot of Epirus , who had invaded Macedon and Thrace , and was so successful as to compel them to accept of peace, upon such terms as he thought fit to allow them.	VII	287
5564	4255	1256	The Tartars cut off the troops belonging to the sultan of Iconium , and reduce him to such straits, that he flies to the emperor Theodorus Lascaris , who receives him kindly, and sends him back with an army commanded by Ilyar Ducas , a general of great note, for which the sultan surrendered the city of Laodicea to Lascaris .	VI	632
5564	4257	1258	Theodorus Lascaris , emperor of Nice , dies, and is succeeded by his son John , a child of nine years old, and appointed Arserius the patriarch, and George Muzalo , his guardians; but while the funeral obsequies were performing for the deceased emperor, the nobility fall upon and murder Muzalo and his two brothers, and then declared Michael Paleologus guardian, who immediately goes against Michael Angelus , despot of Epirus , who had broke into Thrace and Macedon , engages and routs him with great slaughter.	VII	288
5565	4258	1259	Michael Paleologus , guardian to the young emperor of Nice , is declared emperor, and crowned by the patriarch; and then he recovered Peloponnesus from the Latins , and the despot of Epirus .	VII	288
5567	4260	1261	Alexius Strategopulus , general under the emperor Paleologus , surprizes Constantinople , kills all he meets with, and sets fire to it in four places at one time. Baldwin the Latin emperor of Constantinople , and the Latin patriarch, and some other of his intimate friends, fly to Venice . Soon after Paleologus settles his affairs at Nice , and then goes to Constantinople , with the empress, his son Andronicus , the senate and the nobility, to take possession of that imperial city, and to fix his residence there.	VII	635
5569	4262	1263	Baldwin , the deposed Latin emperor, marries his daughter to Charles king of Sicily , and gave him Constantinople for her dowry. Charles makes preparations to come and take it. Paleologus orders himself to be crowned emperor a-new, and then puts out the eyes of the young emperor John , to whom he had sworn to resign the empire when of age; for which Arserius the patriarch excommunicated him: And Michael despot of Epirus , and Constantine king of Bulgaria , who had married the young emperor's sisters, broke into Thrace , and laid it waste. Paleologus goes against them, has most of his troops cut to pieces and taken prisoners, and hardly escapes himself. The Venetians seized the islands of the Archipelago . Paleologus sends to pope Urban IV. and promises to submit to the Latin church; upon which peace is made, and in a council held at Lyons , in 1274, Paleologus acknowledged the pope's supremacy.	VI	635
5580	4273	1274	Joseph the patriarch of Constantinople , and all the clergy, oppose what Paleologus had done at Lyons , which so enraged him, that he rack'd some, whipped others, imprisoned many, banished the patriarch Joseph , and put Veccus in his stead, which occasioned many uproars, seditions, and a universal uneasiness.	VJ	635
5581	4274	1275	Stephen , the fourth king of Hungary , upon overcoming Cea prince of Bulgaria , by cutting his whole army to pieces, was acknowledged king of Hungary and Bulgaria .	VII	639
5587	4280	1281	John emperor of Trabezond goes to Constantinople , and marries Eudocia Paleogina , daughter to Michael Paleologus emperor of the east, (as he called himself.)	VII	291
5589	4282	1283	Pope Martin IV. excommunicates Michael Paleologus for contributing to the famous massacre of the French in Sicily , commonly known by the name of the Sicilian Vespers , on Easter-day, March 30 , 1282, which with his other fatigues threw him into a lingering illness as he was marching against the Turks , and after receiving the ambassadors of the Tartars daily increasing, he died in the 24th year of his age, and was succeeded by his son Andronicus .	VI	635
5589	4282	1283	Andronicus begins his reign with restoring the ceremonies of the Greek church, and refusing to acknowledge the pope's supremacy: This threw the whole empire into a ferment; his brother Constantine was the darling of the people for overthrowing the Turks in several engagements, wherefore Andronicus orders him to be thrown into prison, and several other persons of great distinction. The Turks under Othoman take several places in Phrygia , Caria , and Bithynia , and the city of Nice . Andronicus sends Philanthropenus against them, who gets several advantages over them, and then proclaims himself emperor. Libadarius , general for Andronicus , goes against him, and as they were going to engage, he was seized by the Cretans , and delivered to Libadarius , who put out his eyes. The mean while the Turks extend their conquests in Asia , and in the Mediterranean . Andronicus hires 10,000 Massagetes , who do him great harm; then he hires a body of Catalans , who revolt and join the Turks , this first brought the Turks into Europe . Michael , having been declared emperor with his father, goes with a body of Greeks , Massagetes , &c. against the Catalans and Turks ; but the auxiliaries become neuter, and Michael is routed; then the Catalans and Turks over-run Thrace , destroying all with fire and sword.

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Page
			sword. The Catalans resolve to invade Thessaly : The Turks acquaint the emperor, if he would let them pass they would return home; to which the emperor consents, and orders ships, &c. to be got ready; but the Greek officers longing for their booty, contrive to fall upon and cut them to pieces in the night: This being discovered, the Turks send word to their countrymen of their danger, and fortify themselves in a strong castle: More Turks come and destroy all before them; Andronicus marches against them with all his force; the Turks sally out, and put the besiegers to a disorderly flight, took many officers, and the emperor's camp, the military chest, several standards, the imperial crown, and all the baggage,	VI	637
5597	4290	1291	Pope Nicholas the 4th earnestly endeavours to engage John emperor of Trabezond in the Holy War .	VII	291
5601	4294	1295	John Comnenus emperor of Trabezond dying, is succeeded by his eldest son Alexius II. in the empire, who reigned eight years.	VII	291
5602	4295	1296	Philes Paleologus (a relation of the emperor, and a person of great piety, but no soldier) undertakes to go against the Turks with a small body of men, and engages Chaleb the Turkish general, who had been ravaging the country with 1000 foot and 200 horse, and intirely destroyed them.	VI	638
5609	4302	1303	Alexius II. emperor of Trabezond dying, is succeeded by his son Basilus , who reigned 17 years.	VII	291
5622	4315	1316	The emperor Andronicus tells the patriarch Geraffimus , that as his grandson and heir Andronicus could not by any means be reclaimed, he intended to secure him. The patriarch tells the young prince, and he escapes to Adrianoph , where he is proclaimed emperor by the army; but his grandfather proclaims him a publick enemy and a traitor, and obliges the Constantinopolitans to take the oath of allegiance to himself a-fresh. The young prince sends a body of troops against Constantinople ; his grandfather dispatches Theoleptus , bishop of Philadelphia , and other persons of distinction to him with proposals of an accommodation, which at last was thus concluded; that the empire should be divided, and the prince have Thrace and the suburbs of Constantinople ; and the emperor the city of Constantinople , and all the cities and islands in the east and west. The Turks in the mean time enlarge their dominions in Asia , reduce most of the places on the Meander , and take Prusa in Bythia , which they entered in 1327, where Orchanes upon the death of his father Orthoman settled the seat of the Turkish empire. The young and old emperors of Constantinople quarrel again, but at last matters are made up, and the grandfather admits the grandson to be his colleague; and he and his wife Anne of Savoy , whom he had lately married, were solemnly crowned in the church of St. Sophia ; but the young one wanting to rule alone, flew out again, committed open hostilities, and took Constantinople by treachery, and deprived his father of all rule and authority in 1328, but permitted him to live in the palace, and wear the ensigus of majesty, and allowed him 24,000 pieces of gold for his yearly maintenance.	VI	641
5626	4319	1320	Basilus I. emperor of Trabezond , dies, and is succeeded by his son Basilus II. who after a reign of 19 years, is murdered by his wife Irene , who reigned in his stead.	VII	291
5634	4327	1328	The king of Bulgaria enters Thrace , and lays the country waste, &c. but Andronicus coming unexpectedly towards him, he retires and leaves great part of his booty behind: Andronicus pursued him, and carried the war into Bulgaria , ravaged the country, and destroyed all with fire and sword, and then concludes a peace.	VI	641
5636	4329	1330	Orthoman being lately dead, Andronicus recovers Nice , &c. which Orchanes his son and successor soon after retakes, and overthrows the emperor's army, who flying, leave their camp, baggage, and arms to the enemy, and all the emperor's plate and furniture.	VI	642
5636	4329	1330	The old emperor Andronicus , to make the court easy, retires voluntarily into a monastery, where having lived two years, dies.	VI	642
5644	4337	1338	Andronicus makes a very dishonourable peace with the Turks , yielding all their conquests to them.	VI	642
5646	4339	1340	The inhabitants of Thessaly revolt: The emperor marches against them in person. The Turks break the peace, and ravage the sea coasts, then repass the Streights with immense booty and great numbers of captives.	VI	642
5647	4340	1341	Andronicus dies, and his eldest son John succeeded him, who being but nine years old, John Cantacuzenus was appointed his guardian, and behaved with the greatest uprightness and care possible; but being opposed by John the patriarch, who continually represented every thing in an evil light to Ann the empress, she at last declared him a publick enemy, and a traitor; upon which the army, at the head whereof he then was at Dydimotheum , declared Cantacuzenus emperor.	VI	643
5648	4341	1342	All the friends and relations of Cantacuzenus at Constantinople are thrown into goal, his estate confiscated, and an army sent against him. He writes to the patriarch, exhorting him to peace and concord; but the messengers were thrown into prison. At last Cantacuzenus goes to Constantinople ; the citizens open their gates, and salute him emperor; and an accommodation is come to, in which the empress, &c. allowed him to be colleague with her son John , which was sworn to by Cantacuzenus , John Paleologus , and the empress, on the 8th of February 1347. He was soon after crowned by Isidore , the patriarch of Constantinople . Cantacuzenus marries his daughter to young Paleologus , and so settled all things in quiet, and caused her to be crowned and acknowledged empress by the nobility, senate, &c.	VI	645

Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ		Vol.	Pag.
5659	4352	1353	The Genese of Galata now become very powerful at sea, being denied the liberty to enlarge their city, set fire to the suburbs of Constantinople , seized the emperor's ships then riding in the harbour, and made open war on the empire, gained advantages at sea, and seized some islands in the Archipelago .	VI	645
5663	4356	1357	Crales king of the Servians sows discord between the two emperors, so that they come to an open rupture: The young prince's army was overthrown in Thrace , and he forced to take refuge in Constantinople , all the other cities submitting to Contacuzenus : However, soon after a peace was concluded, and Contacuzenus resigned up all authority, and went into a monastery at Maugana , but his son Matthew , whom he had declared emperor, pursued the war.	VI	645
5663	4356	1357	John Palaeologus goes against Matthew his brother-in-law; they engage, and Matthew is defeated, and forced to quit the field, but was soon after taken, and upon renouncing all claim to the crown set at liberty.	VI	645
5663	4356	1357	The Turks under Solyman , one of the sons of Orchanes , passed the Hellepont , took the strong castle of Coiridocustron ; then went to Gallipolis , and defeated the governor, and took the place, which gave them their first settlement in Europe , where they have continued ever since.	VI	645
5664	4357	1358	The sultan Orchanes dying, Amurath his son and successor pursued the conquests begun by Solyman , mastered several parts of Thrace , and made Adrianople the seat of his empire in Europe .	VI	645
5666	4359	1360	Andronicus , the emperor's eldest son, having contracted an intimacy with Contuzes , Amurath's eldest son, they conspire to murder their respective fathers, and to live in strict union between themselves: They are discovered, have their eyes pulled out, and are then cast into prison.	VI	646
5668	4361	1362	Blind Andronicus , by the help of the Genese of Gala , escapes, and makes war upon his father, takes Constantinople , and gets his father and brother Manuel , who had been declared his successor, into his power, and imprisons them.	VI	646
5670	4363	1364	Old Andronicus and Manuel escape out of prison, upon which blind Andronicus yields up the empire to them, rather than engage in a civil war again.	VI	646
5671	4364	1365	The sultan Amurath being treacherously slain, is succeeded by his son Bajazet , who pursuing the former conquests in Europe , adds Thessaly , Macedon , Phocis , Peloponnesus , Mysia , and Bulgaria to them.	VI	646
5675	4368	1369	The Bulgarians by the assistance of the Greek emperors having shook off the Hungarian yoke, attempt the recovery of Adrianople , under the conduct of their king Sajmenos , from the Turks ; but are utterly defeated by Amurath .	VII	639
5675	4368	1369	Bajazet enters Bulgaria with a great army, makes an intire conquest of it, and turns it into a Turkish province, which it remains to this day.	VII	639
5697	4390	1391	Bajazet sends to Andronicus , demands a yearly tribute, and his son Manuel to attend him in his wars; which, as Andronicus was now not able to resist, was performed.	VI	646
5698	4391	1392	Andronicus emperor of Constantinople dies, and is succeeded by Manuel his son, then at Bajazet's court, who comes away without taking his leave; for which Bajazet immediately comes into Thrace , and destroys with fire and sword all the country round Constantinople , which he invested by sea and land. The western princes send Sigismund king of Hungaria , and John count of Nevers , with an army of 130,000 men to his assistance, who besieging Nicopolis , Bajazet raises the siege of Constantinople , and goes against them: They engage; Bajazet conquers, kills 20,000, took their camp and baggage, count Nevers , and 300 great officers, and 20,000 soldires: All the officers, except count Nevers and five others, were put to death.	VI	646
5699	4362	1363	Bajazet returns to the siege of Constantinople , which finding resolutely defended, privately agrees with John the son of blind Andronicus to set him upon the throne, Bajazet to have Constantinople , and John to remove the imperial seat to Peloponnesus : This signed and sealed, Bajazet acquaints the inhabitants he would retire, if they would drive out Manuel and set John upon the throne: The city was immediately ready to fall into a civil war; Manuel for peace sake sends to John , then in the Turkish camp, and offers to resign upon leave given him, John and the children, where they thought fit: This was agreed to, and John went into the city, and Manuel went first to Venice , then to other courts, soliciting help against the Turks . John was crowned; Bajazet reminds him of their agreement, and pressed him to surrender Constantinople , and retire to Peloponnesus : The citizens refused; Bajazet renews the siege, and reduced them to extreme necessities; but news being brought that Tamerlane the Tartar , having subdued all Persia , was coming into Asia against Bajazet , he raised the siege to go against him: They engage in the plains of Angoria in Galatia , the 28th of July 1401. where after cutting most of Bajazet's men to pieces, himself was taken prisoner, put into an iron cage, and shewn, where he is, said to have dashed out his own brains in 1402.	VI	647
5708	4401	1402	Manuel retires to Constantinople , where he is received with extraordinary joy, and John deposed and banished to the island of Lesbos . Bajazet's five sons lend aid tear the Turkish empire for 10 years with fierce civil wars; but at last Mohammed the youngest having overcome the others, was proclaimed sultan of the whole Turkish empire. Manuel improved this time, and recovered several provinces, which Mohammed for the assistance he had given him suffered him quietly to enjoy till his death in 1424.	VI	647
5730	4423	1424	John son of Manuel succeeds his father, who having supported one Mustapha , a pretended son of Bajazet's , against Amurath II. son of Mohammed , Amurath to revenge the affront besieges Constantinople ; but his younger brother Mustapha , supported by the prince of Camerania , revolts in Asia , and proclaims himself sultan. Amurath raises the siege, and goes against him, who was

			(1102)		Vol. Page
Y. of World	Y. of Flood	Y. of Christ
			treacherously delivered up to Amurath , and by him strangled. Amurath goes against the prince of Camerania , and compels him to accept of what terms he thought fit to give him. Then he entered Macedon and Greece , and took all those provinces; then reduced Servia , then besieged Belgrade , where the Christians killed 15,000 Turks in one sally, and forced Amurath to raise the siege; and in his return John Hunniades (the famous Hungarian prince) cut great numbers of Amurath's men to pieces; and soon after engaging him again, killed 20,000 Turks on the spot, and as many in the pursuit. Amurath sends two other armies more numerous than the former into Transylvania , which were cut off almost to a man by the same brave Hungarian , who also recovered from the Turks all Bulgaria and Servia , but at last was overcome in the fatal battle of Varna , in the year 1444, where Uladiſlaus king of Hungaria was also cut to pieces.			VI 648
5750	4443	1444	Hunniades is close protector of the kingdom of Hungaria during the minority of young Ladiſlaus . Hunniades engaged Amurath at Cassana for three days together, where overpowered by numbers, the third day the Christians were routed, in 1448: In this battle 38,000 Turks were slain, and 8000 Christians , with the flower of the Hungarian nobility.			VI 648
5754	4447	1448	The Greek emperor John sends to Adrianople to Amurath to conclude a peace; Amurath demands some strong holds in the Euxine sea, and 300,000 aspers a year tribute, which he is forced to yield to.			VI 648
4754	4447	1448	John emperor of Constantinople , in order to gain assistance from the western princes, went to the council held at Ferrara , attended by the patriarch Joseph , a great number of prelates, and the flower of the Greek nobility, in order to settle the disputes between the Latin and Greek churches. The plague raging at Ferrara , the council moved to Florence , where the union was effected between the two churches, and subscribed by the patriarch and the other prelates. Upon his return the people being highly dissatisfied with what had been done at the council, this with other calamities threw the emperor into an illness, of which he died, in the 27th year of his reign.			VI 649
5755	4448	1449	Constantine brother of John succeeded to the empire, now confined to Constantinople only.			VI 649
5755	4448	1449	John II. son of Alexius 3d emperor of Trabezond , having murdered his father, set himself upon the throne:			VII 292
5756	4449	1450	Amurath the sultan dies, and is succeeded by his son Mohammed , who immediately strangled all his brothers: He built a castle about five miles from Constantinople , called Genicbiar , but by the Greeks , Neo Caſtram ; repaired another over-against it called Aspoctſtron ; these two commanded the Sireights of the Bosphorus , and shut up Constantinople , from whence the garisons made frequent excursions: This begot a quarrel; Mohammed sends Caracia , who took what places the emperor had on the Euxine sea, and besieged Constantinople , took St. Stephen's tower by assault, and put the garison to the sword; and other forts submitted, Selybria only held out, which at last overcome by frequent assaults, was taken, and every man put to the sword.			VI 650
5759	4452	1453	On the sixth of April Mohammed sits down before the imperial city of Constantinople with an army of 300,000 men; the besieged behaved themselves with the utmost bravery, and by frequent sallies cut off vast numbers of the enemy, and destroyed their works; but Mohammed encreasing his army by continual reinforcements to 400,000, and battering the walls night and day, and a fleet of 300 ships block'd the city up by sea; but four Genuese and one Greek ship sailing into the midst of them, sunk some, disabled others, and made dreadful havock of the whole, and brought the city relief of corn, &c. but the besieged tired out, the emperor sends to the sultan, offering to acknowledge himself his vassal, and pay a yearly tribute, if he would raise the siege and go away; to which Mohammed answered, he was determined to have the city; but if he would deliver it up immediately, he would yield Peloponnesus to him, and other provinces to his brothers, which Constantine refuses. On Tuesday the 29th of May the Turks began the attack at 3 in the morning, and after a prodigious number were killed, the enemy took the city by storm, put the emperor, nobles, and inhabitants all to the sword, and plundered it for three days successively, when Mohammed entered it in triumph, chose it for the seat of his empire, and promised all the natives that would stay or comes there liberty to live unmolested, with the free exercise of the Christian religion. Thus the death of the last Roman emperor, the loss of Constantinople , and the final dissolution of the Constantinopolitan Roman empire happened the 29th of May , this year of the Christian Era .
5768	4461	1462	Mohammed the great sultan of the Turks besieges and takes Trabezond , and murders all the royal family of Comnenus , and thereby put an end to the empire of Trabezond , 258 years after its erection.			VII 293

F I N I S.

Osterreichische Nationalbibliothek

+Z17450240X

